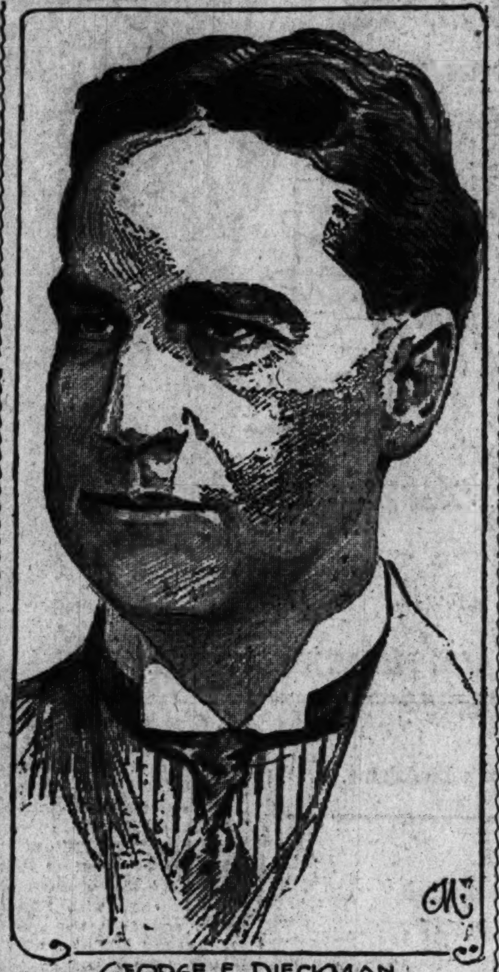
Zoo That Will Be a Magnet for Tourists, Dieckman's Dream On Winning Park Site Fight

Broker, Who Became Interested in Menagerie Project Because His Child Was Fascinated by Even the Few Animals We Had Collected About the Bird Cage a Little Over Two Years Ago, Will Bring Hagenbeck Here Next Month to Lay Out the Grounds.

And Then, If the Citizens Will Just Vote That $500,000 Issue of Bonds, He Pledges That We Shall Have a Cageless Community of Beasts of the Jungle and Plain That Will Be Unique in the United States and Make This City Envied by Rivals.



GEORGE E. DIECKMAN.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

WHEN Mayor Kiel, the other day, signed the ordinance establishing a Board of Control for a municipal zoo, a tall man with reddish hair stood beside him and asked for the pen with which the signing was done. He got it, thus nearly completing the list of zoo matters which he, George E. Dieckman, president of the Zoological Society, has asked for and obtained.

He asked for a large membership in the society, and got a membership of 500. He asked for animals for the present embryo zoo, and got more than the keeper could find room for. He asked for the setting apart of a zoo tract which should include the Forest Park bird cage, with a separate control, and over the opposition of Park Commissioner Davis, he got the Assembly to pass and the Mayor to sign such a bill.

And he is next going to ask the people to vote a $500,000 bond issue to build and stock a modern zoological garden. He believes they will do it, after they learn what sort of a place it is to be.

He believes the vision of a cageless zoo, like no other in the United States—an outdoor menagerie which Eastern tourists to the San Francisco Exposition would stop off to see—will be attractive enough to get a two-thirds "Yes," vote in any general or special election at which it may come up, the sooner the better. To start matters, he has arranged to bring Lorenz Hagenbeck, zoological expert, here next month, to lay out the new zoo.

He Developed the Zoo Hobby a Little Over Two Years Ago

THE scene in the Mayor's office did not exactly represent, to Dieckman, the realization of the dream of a lifetime. He has not had the matter on his mind so long as that. But it stood for a big result achieved in a task to which this busy broker has given many moments snatched from the contemplation of Erie common and United Railways preferred. This began, he relates, a little more than two years ago.

One Saturday afternoon late in 1911, Dieckman says, he and Mrs. Dieckman, with their son George Henry, then 6 years old, were in Forest Park, and George Henry interested himself in the monkey cage. When the parents were ready to move on, George was just establishing a good acquaintance, and insisted on remaining. He detained them so long that Dieckman began to comment to his wife on the charms of a zoological exhibit for children, and to remark what a pity it was that St. Louis had not a first-class zoo.

"I believe," he added, "that I'll start a zoo."

"Where," his wife asked, seeing visions of catamounts and walruses in the rear yard of their West Pine boulevard home.

"Why, here in Forest Park," replied Dieckman.

"When will you do it?" she asked.

"Tomorrow," he answered, "no, tomorrow's Sunday. I'll do it Monday."

And Monday he did start the zoo. That is, he went to see the officers of the Zoological Society, which had been in existence a year, and which was so worried over a debt of $25, representing the rent of the hall where it had tried to hold a public meeting, that it seemed about to disband.

Dieckman re-enthused the society officers, who, if they had not cold feet, had at least numbed their extremities by beating against a barrier of public indifference. He urged two membership campaigns—one for members of the society, the other for animals in the zoo.

More Animals Added to Zoo in 18 Months Than in 18 Years

THE campaigns were started together. The new members brought in animals, and interest in animals brought in new members. A large organization was built up, and more specimens were added to the Forest Park collection in 18 months, than the city had purchased in the 18 years before.

Camels, a llama, bear cubs, polar bear, moose, antelope, ostriches, mountain lions, zebus and plain deer were among the entries in the happy family. Most of them are still on display, though one of the camels has left this thirsty world, and the bull moose—can this in any sense be deemed prophetic?—has perished of inanition.

Dieckman was elected president of the society a year ago. A salaried secretary, whose duties were chiefly those of a press agent, was at that time employed. Dieckman appreciated the good publicity work that had been done, but he saw a chance to save the secretary's salary, and he announced that, if an unpaid secretary would attend to the minutes and correspondence, he would take the responsibility for keeping the zoo issue before the public.

He succeeded so well in this that his office on Fourth street became a regular station on the daily rounds of newspaper reporters. When the controversy with the Park Commissioner developed, he did not ask for "the best of it," but took pains to give a clear understanding of the question to everyone with whom he talked. In consequence, there was never much confusion of the issue, and it was decided on its merits.

The bill for a zoo tract and a Board of Control, which Dieckman succeeded in getting through the Assembly, had been introduced before, and had been beaten. Commissioner Davis' argument was that Forest Park was not the place for a zoo; that no more buildings should be placed in the park; that there should not be further deforestation, and that no part of the park should be placed under a control independent of the Commissioner.

Dieckman's reply was that in every city fortunate enough to have both a large public park and a zoo, the zoo was in the park, and that a separate control was needed, to insure against politics. He did not have very much to say about the building and tree problems, but since he has won his fight, he had made known that he agrees with Davis on these matters, and that the new zoo will not mean more buildings or fewer trees.

Believes Public Will Approve His Plan for a Cageless Zoo

WITH Robert H. Keiser, chairman of the Zoological Society's Animal Committee, Dieckman will represent the society on the Board of Control, Mayor Kiel having announced his purpose of appointing them. The other three members will be the Mayor, Comptroller Player and the Park Commissioner, who will thus have one-fifth of the governing authority.

Dieckman told me yesterday of the campaign lately ended and of his plan for the new cageless zoo, which he believes will be adopted by the board and indorsed by the public.

He asked that, if I intended to write anything that would look like apportioning credit for the success of the zoo movement, I should go back to the days just after the World's Fair, and give honorable mention to John R. McCarthy, a member of the House of Delegates, for keeping the Government bird cage in the park.

"It might seem almost incredible that anyone should have favored tearing it down," said Dieckman, "but I have learned that it took quite a fight, on McCarthy's part, to keep the bird cage

"Christmas Grafting Must Go"

SPUG FOUNDERS TELL OF PLANS TO END AN OPPRESSIVE SYSTEM

Eleanor Robson Belmont, Anne Morgan, Ida Tarbell and Jeanette Gilder, Who Organized the New York Society, Say It Is Not Christmas Giving, but the Abuse of It They Wish to Suppress—Mrs. Wilson's Enlistment in the Cause to Make It National in Its Scope.

THE Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving, known as the Spugs, will celebrate its first anniversary Christmas. It was organized a few weeks before last Christmas by New York women philanthropists, who felt that the time had come to inaugurate a movement against the evils of collective and exchange giving that had become particularly oppressive to working women.

Collective giving, almost compulsory in large factories and stores, takes the form of a fund, subscribed by employes, for a present for a department boss or forelady. Usually this fund is solicited by persons who would curry favor with the functionary to whom the gift is to be made, and those who do not subscribe, even though it means taking bread from their own mouths, jeopardize their jobs.

The exchange gift is common among working girls, each trying to outdo the other in the exchange of gifts that have no other basis, being founded neither on affection, gratitude nor appreciation.

The Spugs were laughed at considerably last year, but this year they are taken very seriously and the movement they founded is gaining favor throughout the country. An evidence of its importance and significance is seen in the fact that Miss Margaret Wilson, the President's elder daughter, has consented to head the movement in Washington. Mrs. Wilson, too, has become an enthusiastic supporter of the idea that, under her leadership, is to become national in scope.

Four of the organizers and leaders of it have written for the New York World and the Post-Dispatch their conception of its aims. They are Eleanor Robson Belmont, president; Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Ida Tarbell and Miss Jeanette L. Gilder.

THE Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving is but little more than a year old. Its existence may truthfully be said to have been an accident. Certainly on the night it was formed I myself and those who were instrumental in forming it and have worked for it since had no idea of organizing a new society.

It was at a meeting of the Committee of the Vacation Savings Fund that such a society was first suggested. The members of the committee had noticed that as the Christmas holiday season approached there was a marked falling off in the amount of money deposited by the working girls of the city in the Vacation Savings Fund.

An investigation disclosed the fact that the girls were then making preparations for their Christmas giving and that in practically every case it was looked upon as something that MUST be done, even though it could be but ill afforded.

There were two distinct forms of Christmas gifts against which those with whom we talked were strongly opposed, yet against which they had never dared make definite protest.

FIRST: The collective gift for which they were assessed certain sums, usually far more than they could afford to give.

The funds raised by this method were used to purchase a Christmas present for the head of the department in which the girl worked; for the forelady with whom she came in direct contact; for someone in a position of authority above them and who invariably received much more pay.

SECOND: The form of giving known as the "exchange gift."

This form of giving, however, was not so universally condemned and was, in fact, quite earnestly supported by some to whom we talked.

She Urged Girls to Break Away From Exchange Gift System

THE "exchange gifts" were those exchanged between the girls in an office or in a department of a store. One girl would learn that another was going to make her a present at Christmas time. She then felt it obligatory on her to return the gift, and in the heart of practically every girl was the hope that her gift might equal, if not exceed, the value of that which she was to receive.

With these facts before me I addressed the girls interested in the Vacation Savings Fund and urged them to break away from the custom of years and from the fear they seemed to hold of the potent power behind the collective gift giving and to dare that year to give only as they could afford to give and to give only to those to whom they really wished to give.

To my surprise the idea was received most enthusiastically. Almost instantly it was suggested that the girls form themselves into a society to war against useless giving. And so it was, almost in a moment, that the Spugs—the Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving—was organized.

The enthusiasm which greeted the new society was spontaneous and remarkable. Within a very few weeks its membership totaled 6000.

The scheme of organization was simple. There was the central society, to which all of the original Spugs belonged. Each of the original Spugs in turn became Spug captains when they organized bands of 10 members.

Of course, the Spug movement has been bitterly assailed. Its real purpose, too, has often been misrepresented by those who have their own reasons for opposing it.

The most common of all the things said against the Spugs is that they urge the abolishing of all gift giving.

That is absolutely untrue. In the first place, it would be utterly foolish to even suggest, in New York of all places, that gift-giving be abolished. New York is known for its generosity; for the quantity and the value of its gifts the world over. New Yorkers are known for their generosity and are justly proud of it.

Collective Giving the Greatest Evil, Says Mrs. August Belmont

WHAT we really attack is the collective giving which is current, customary and, therefore, almost compulsory at Christmas, and which results, we believe, in unfair taxation of working men and women. Most unfair of all, we claim, is to call it Christmas giving.

We attack, too, the exchange system of giving which has degenerated into an abuse of Christmas and has drifted to the level of a social bargain, utterly devoid of the faintest trace of sentiment or meaning.

We did not organize to prevent giving. On the contrary, we urge: Give. Give generously, but not from fear, to further some ulterior motive, or even because it is a tiresome custom, but give willingly for the pleasure or help you may bestow; give for the love and joy of giving.

This year the Spugs are to have a big Christmas tree party on Christmas day. Every Spug has a right, is expected to come, not as a guest of the organization, but hostess. We all know someone who might not have a Christmas party, perhaps one who has never seen a Christmas tree. Get a ticket for them.

Others may be unhappy, lonely, no place to go to celebrate Christmas. Make them welcome. Bring or send to your party someone who wouldn't have a happy day otherwise, not necessarily a person without money.

We want everyone to be a Spug, to believe in Spugs. We want that very much.

What we want even more is for everyone who can and will to come to our party and make it their party. And if they do, then we will have made of them SPUGS.

Spug Movement Lasting, Says Miss Morgan

MISS ANNE MORGAN.

THERE'S to be a Christmas tree party on Christmas day in New York far different from any ever given before.

From the depths of the Adirondack forests a huge tree is being brought down to the Grand Central Palace on a special train. There will be shining lights, glistening ornaments, candy, music, dancing, moving picture shows nearly all day long and far into the evening.

But all these things might be at any Christmas party. What will make this party different, better, more wonderful than any other will be the gifts.

Each person who attends will receive a gift more valuable than diamonds, more costly than silver, more useful than gold.

To each person who attends will be demonstrated THE TRUE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

For everyone there will be a true expression of FRIENDSHIP.

To those who may need it will be given COURAGE, courage to be individual, to be true to themselves, courage to break the fetters of tradition.

To those who have already shown their courage, will be given ENCOURAGEMENT.

And for each there will be a secret gift—THE SECRET of how to dispel loneliness in the great city.

For this Christmas tree party is to be given by

Dr. Montessori Tells How She Teaches Children to Study by Making School Work Like Play

Spare the Rod and Call the Family Doctor, the Key to the Methods of This Remarkable Italian Woman Who Has Come to This Country to Tell Us That Misbehavior, Like a Baby's Crying, Is Sign of Illness.

Training Begins With Birth and No Well-Educated Baby Ever Cries or, if It Does Its First Cry Is Its Last—Her Pupils Are Taught Self-Reliance First of All, Through Their Love of Play.

MARIA MONTESSORI

By Marguerite Mooers-Marshall,

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.

IT'S a grown-up's world, my masters, and that's just the trouble with it from the child's point of view.

By means of illness, stupidity or naughtiness, he has inarticulately but vehemently sought to express his dissatisfaction. His efforts resulted sometimes in pity, sometimes in punishment, almost never in understanding—until the twentieth century.

Then, swift, he found not one but two interpreters, two women with motherly brains as well as hearts.

Six years ago, in the north of Europe, Ellen Key wrote the "Century of the Child," a book that did much to reverse the adult mental attitude toward childhood. At the very moment, in the south of Europe, Dr. Maria Montessori was independently conducting her first educational experiments with young children. The practical system which she evolved has already begun to metamorphose our schools.

Now, Dr. Montessori herself has been induced to follow her famous "method" to America. She summed it up simply enough when I talked with her today at the Holland House. She said:

"The reason why we have had so much more trouble with children in the past is because we have considered them from our standpoint, instead of from theirs. Many of the actions for which we have criticised and punished them are perfectly natural, in a child's world. We are the ones at fault if we try to make them live in our world before they are ready for it. They will be ready much more quickly if they are allowed to follow their own natural lines of development.

Dr. Montessori's school in Rome is called "The House of Childhood;" indeed, this is the name given to all schools which employ the Montessori method. In a Casa del Bimbini every bit of furniture and decoration is constructed on a juvenile scale. The chairs, tables, stationary washtubs, pictures, floor coverings are the sort best adapted to the comfortable use of youngsters between two and a half and seven, the period covered by the Montessori training course.

THE attempt is to create an environment for the child as completely adapted to him as the average house is unadapted to train him in his own world. He even eats his lunch at his own little lunch table, served by a playmate.

"But just how did you first work out your system?" I asked the doctor.

"My work in the beginning was with defective and backward children," she explained. "I was the first woman to be graduated from the medical college at Rome, and when a philanthropic society decided a few years ago to open schools and playgrounds for the children in the modern tenements which it owned, I was asked to develop a program. I had always been specially interested in child psychology.

"In my first experiments I found that the best way of reaching the abnormal child was by exercising and sharpening his sense impressions. Thus my system of auto-education was born. For I asked myself why the method which brought response from the defective child should not reach even more quickly the normal boy or girl, and why training should not begin as early as possible. If you watch a small child you will see that it instinctively tries, all the time, to see, hear, touch, taste or smell more perfectly. I discovered that and I let the child lead the way."

"But do you believe in absolutely no control for small children?" I asked Dr. Montessori. "Is it right for a baby to lead the way, unchecked, in pulling the kitten's tail or slapping his little brother?"

Three Cardinal Principles.

SOME scandalized persons have understood that the Montessori method means just such nonsense. They will be reassured if they meet its founder during her brief visit. For there is firmness as well as sweetness in her plump, expressive countenance and her matronly figure. Her deep brown eyes, dusky hair and olive skin are racial to a degree, but individuality triumphs in the intelligence of glance and smile.

"There are three principles which children must understand," she said.

"They must not offend against any moral law.

"They must observe the demands of courtesy.

"And they must not interfere with the rights of others.

"I did not begin my system with the idea of banishing all discipline and punishment. That was one of the results which evolved from the general method. I have simply found that in the vast majority of cases the child that is properly trained does not need punishment.

"No form of corporal punishment is necessary, under any circumstances.

"If you tell a child, 'That is right, that is wrong,' if you explain to him that right things are the things to do, wrong things the things to avoid doing, you will find it easy to train him in the habit of taking the right course—particularly if you praise and caress him for being good, if you put the emphasis on approval instead of on disapproval."

"But how early may you adopt this attitude?" I inquired.

"A child's training should begin as soon as he is born. The properly educated baby never cries. I have seen 60 infants less than a week old in a Roman hospital ward, with not a wail breaking the complete silence. Science has not succeeded in eliminating the first cry of the new-born babe, but that first one should also be the last."

"Do you never find it necessary to punish a child?" I asked. It is so difficult for a New Englander to lose the theory that original sin must be squelched.

Misbehavior Indicates Illness.

"USUALLY the child who misbehaves needs medicine and not punishment," Dr. Montessori insisted. "If he refuses to act reasonably a physical examination will almost always show that something is wrong with his health. When the defect has been remedied the child again becomes 'good.'

"In the rare cases where no ailment is discoverable a 'naughty' child may be isolated. He may be treated as the victim of an illness too obscure for diagnosis, and set apart from his companions with a few toys. He is not to be held up as a disgraceful object, but as a person to be pitied. I have found this treatment speedily effective, but, I repeat, it need hardly ever be used."

"But if a child is trained to live happily and peacefully in a child world during his school hours, how will he endure the adult world while in his home?"

"There should be a much closer co-operation than exists at present between mother and teacher. There is no reason why the methods employed in the 'House of Childhood' should not be taken over into the home by the mother. Her children ought to be with her part of the time, and she can allow their personalities to develop freely if she once sees the importance of it. Indeed, where there is no regular school employing my methods, the mother, by adopting them, may send her 7-year-old to the graded school advanced far beyond his playmates.

"It is all so simple. The child leads, the mother or teacher follows, to protect and advise. Why should it seem so terrible to allow children liberty? Only the free know the real meaning of restraint. I do not urge license, only freedom."

Though Dr. Montessori's announced method adapted only for children of kindergarten with the double motive of sharpening their se perceptions and simplifying their moral relatio she is experimenting with the education of you sters between 6 and 10. She hopes to see an international experiment station founded in Rom for this work.

Developing a perfect sense of touch is one of the first steps of her system of training, Dr. Montessori explained. She teaches her lit

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Reform the Penitentiary.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I fully agree with the idea expressed by the Post-Dispatch in its issue of Dec. 1, in regard to the proposed reformatory. Why not make a reformatory out of the old prison at once? Then, if more room is needed, another may be built in the future at such a location as the Legislature deems most suitable. But let us do away with the existing conditions in our State prison at once. It is a duty we have neglected and put off too long. Throughout the entire State the best and most intelligent men and women are sternly and emphatically demanding a thorough investigation and a complete change in the rules and management of the Missouri Penitentiary. As the situation stands, is it advisable to drag along with a lot of plans for future consideration? How long before such plans would materialize, even if a reformatory should be built in the future for "first offenders?" What about those 2500 men confined in the penitentiary at the present time? Are not their claims of unjust treatment worthy of consideration? Surely among such a large number there are some who would respond to good treatment, education and a chance to make good, and who would at some future time walk out of the institution manly and competent to begin anew the battle of life, having been educated and brought up to a point where their chief desire is to become useful and honorable citizens.

Statistics show that only a small per cent of boys and girls sent to our reform schools go wrong, while it is a known fact that many men are discharged from the penitentiary only to commit another crime and be sent back again. So let us continue our efforts for this much-needed reform and never give up until this reproach is removed from our State.

Lord Dufferin's Warning.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Brush away all phenomena except dreams, and we still have abundant evidence of communication of invisible intelligences with mankind. The "explainers" will never be able to explain certain dreams. The late Lord Dufferin dreamed one night that he was in a hearse en route for the cemetery. A day or so later he was entering the elevator at a hotel when he recognized the attendant as the driver of the hearse in his dream. He stepped back and the elevator ascended without him. As is neared the top something broke and it crashed to the bottom again, killing everyone in it.

SOMNO.

"How About Charity Balls?"

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Gambling is the staking of a small value on a chance to win a larger value. Its effect on the mind of the gambler is the same, whatever disposition is made of the proceeds. Church gambling is worse than saloon gambling inasmuch as its effects are experienced by those whom saloon gambling would never reach first. If preying upon a human weakness is the only method whereby the church can get from some people what it should get from them, it is better off without the money. If it is right to gamble to raise money for good purposes, it is right to pick pockets for the same purpose—both are classified crimes—getting something for nothing. In one the victim consents, in the other he does not—that's a minor consideration. In the first case he gives dollars, and has his power of resistance stolen—in the second case he has dollars stolen, and he gains in "resistance" powers—that's a major consideration.

Along the same line—how about these charity balls, at which it is deemed quite proper to indulge in all sorts of disgusting and coarsening dances?

If a thing is wrong, it's wrong. If we want to do it, nevertheless, that's a matter for us to decide, but let us not try to make it "right" so we can do it.

HORSE SENSE.

Aigrettes and Furs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I think that it is a shame that men and boys should be allowed to trap animals with the painful, unhumane steel traps now in the sporting market.

If the killing of herons and the wearing of aigrettes is forbidden in the United States, why not then be fair to furbearing animals and prohibit the trapping and slaughter of them for their furs.

Although I believe in giving everyone justice, I think that any person caught setting traps or gathering their greedy spoils should be given a penitentiary term, and that all women or men wearing fur articles should be dealt with not unlike the wearers of aigrettes.

ROBERT EDWARD GARLAND.

PRISON LABOR IN CONGRESS.

Evidence that Congress begins to recognize a need to protect free labor from competition with slave-driven prison labor, and to safeguard convicts from excessive tasks imposed to coin profits for contractors, is afforded by the following partial list of measures introduced in the Sixty-third Congress:

SENATE: By Stone of Missouri, a resolution directing the Department of Commerce to investigate and report on prison labor conditions in Europe, with especial reference to exportation of the products of European prisons to the United States; by Thomas and Hughes of Colorado, and Penrose of Pennsylvania, bills restricting the interstate commerce rights of prison-made goods.

HOUSE: By Booher, Taylor and Hensley, bills limiting the interstate commerce character of prison products; by Nolan, Hamlin and Austin, bills prohibiting interstate shipment of prison products; by Cary, a bill prohibiting either interstate or foreign commerce in such products.

The drift toward employment of state and Federal prisoners exclusively in production of food, clothing and shelter for themselves, and in the making of public roads, and the use of a portion of their time in vocational and other education, fitting them to live within the law when released, is unmistakable. During the past year 13 American states made provision for working convicts on roads, incited thereto, most of them, by the remarkable success of Colorado in this way.

Senator Stone asserts that Europe's prison-made products are freely shipped into this country in very large quantities, unfairly competing with similar products of American free labor, and he purposes to put a stop to it in a series of bills which he will draft on receipt of full and official information. He cites the fact, for example, that stonecutters in English prisons, working for 25 cents a day or less, under contract, cut stone which is shipped to Boston, the largest center of the American granite industry, and is sold there in competition with American stone cut by free labor earning $3 per day.

The Missouri Legislature, confronted with the need to humanize and modernize the State Penitentiary, should be guided not solely by the desire to make the prison self-supporting, and not at all by a desire to provide profits for contractors, but wholly by a purpose to relieve free labor of unfair prison competition, to cure the convict if possible of those physical, mental or moral defects which made him a criminal, and to utilize at least a part of the prison group in making good roads.

RISING DEMOCRACY IN GERMANY.

Heretofore, when fronted with disobedience in the Reichstag, Kaiser Wilhelm has been able to get his will done by dissolving that body and calling upon German voters to elect a new one to his liking.

He may be able to do this in the present crisis, but at this distance it seems doubtful. Apparently his army has exhibited too plainly, and in circumstances too dangerously complicated with other inflammable issues, its contempt for the common people.

It may be doubted if Germany will have to endure either a foreign or a civil war as a result of the Alsace incident, but it is likely the popular flareup which the incident occasioned will be accepted by the Emperor as final warning that the people of Germany mean hereafter to subordinate the military to the civil government, in their domestic affairs.

OIL AS A MEXICAN FACTOR.

Britain's new battleships burn oil. Lord Cowdray has a contract to supply the oil. Diaz gave Cowdray huge oil land concessions. Madero ordered an inquiry into these concessions. Madero died and Huerta confirmed the concessions.

The United States, Russia and Mexico are the world's chief oil producers. The Russian yield is declining. Standard Oil substantially controls this country's output, and has wrestled with Cowdray's English-Mexican syndicate for control of the Mexican fields. Standard influences are said to have financed Madero's revolution.

British newspapers today charge President Wilson's Mexican policy is calculated to help Standard Oil in Mexico. The London Times says "the British pound is as well worth fighting for as the American dollar."

They will understand the Wilson mind better, later on. If he has his way, Mexico will belong to the Mexicans, not to either group of foreign exploiters.

THE ALAMO IS SAFE.

What Thermopylae is to the Greeks, the Alamo is to the American Southwest—the monument which marks the high tide of human valor. With this exception, duly noted by the political orators of the Southwest: "Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat; the Alamo had none."

The little stone mission, fronting the principal square in San Antonio, is a national shrine, like Lexington and Gettysburg, although not a national possession. It is owned by the State of Texas. Much excitement has, therefore, run through the Eastern press during the past few days, occasioned by a report that the Alamo was to be torn down to make room for a business building.

The following telegram from Gov. Colquitt to the Post-Dispatch corrects this report:

> Your telegram asking if anyone has tried to destroy the Alamo Chapel is received. No effort has been made to destroy the chapel. The Daughters of the Republic resisted the restoration of the Alamo proper (the chapel), in which most of Travis' men were massacred, and enjoined the superintendent of building and grounds from restoring it. The litigation in the Supreme Court resulted favorably to the superintendent of the building and grounds and he exhausted the appropriation of $5000 which was the limit the court said could be expended, without completing it. The heavy rains of October so weakened the upper walls that some parts of them fell down and others were pulled down, and some of the timbers removed by a man we now have in jail.

Texas has been slow to pay proper tribute to her heroic dead. For nearly seventy-five years the Lone Star State permitted the graves of the men who fell at San Jacinto to be trampled by wandering cattle, before making a State park there. Preservation of the Alamo Chapel has, as the Governor reports, been too long delayed by an unseemly wrangle between a patriotic society of Texas women and the State government, for control of the property. It is incredible that Texas will fail, now that national attention has been directed to the subject, promptly to restore the chapel to its original strength and preserve it as a memorial to the little band of brave men who died there. Men who deliberately sacrificed their lives to check Santa Anna and to give Sam Houston time to rally an army strong enough to win at San Jacinto and save the infant republic.

FLAWS IN LEGAL PROCEDURE.

When Judge Stanfield of Okmulgee, Ok., denounced Walter Baker as a murderer, when he had been acquitted by a jury, he exposed a ridiculous legal procedure of the State. He said that the jury would have convicted Baker if it had not been precluded from a knowledge of facts necessary to ascertain the truth by a wrong rule of procedure.

The Judge charged Baker with being a terror and a bully in his neighborhood and with freely using his revolver to threaten and frighten others. But the law did not permit the prosecution to introduce evidence as to the character of the accused unless the defense raised the question. In short, the law put it in the power of the defense to keep from the jury essential facts in the case.

This is an illustration of the flaws prevailing in American legal procedure and practice which delay and defeat justice.

POSTAL BANKS' THIRD BIRTHDAY

Not more than $100 may now be placed by one person in the postal banks in a single month. After a deposit amounts to $500, no more can be credited to it until something has been withdrawn. If you have money in the postal banks, you can draw it out only at the postoffice at which it was deposited.

Postmaster-General Burleson recommends that all these limitations shall be abolished. He would place the banks at the service of the public with only a single restriction. This is that $1000 shall be the maximum on which the Government pays the two per cent interest. More may be credited to a single account, but sums in excess of $1000 shall earn nothing.

The postal banks are approaching their third birthday with a prestige and demonstrated utility that call for a broadening of their operations. Their 330,000 depositors have credits to the amount of a little less than $35,000,000 or about $102 each. But the British postal banking system has more than 10,000,000 depositors, with credits of almost $1,000,000,000. In Austria rural carriers receive deposits. Under the systems of all countries except ours, a credit at one postoffice can be drawn on at any other postoffice.

France and Belgium have an arrangement under which deposits in one country can be transferred to the other. We will need a similar arrangement some day with Canada.

MILEAGE UNDER THE FATHERS.

N. T. Crutchfield of Louisville, former Clerk of the House, calls Congress' attention to the fact that in the first 30 years after the ratification of the Constitution no less than 12 "special" sessions were summoned which, like the one of this year, continued to the date specified for the beginning of the so-called "regular" session. Both sessions were officially merged as the first session of the particular Congress then in existence. "No occasion, in the opinion of these early statesmen, many of whom were framers of the Constitution, seemed to demand a new, distinct session," says Mr. Crutchfield. "There was no thought that it was necessary to buck up and commence a new session just because the first Monday in December was arriving."

It was, in fact, not until about ten years ago that the idea of giving "special" and "regular" sessions separate numbers was suggested to give a flimsy excuse for extra mileage. The fathers of the republic were curiously indifferent to the mileage grab privileges of themselves and their successors.

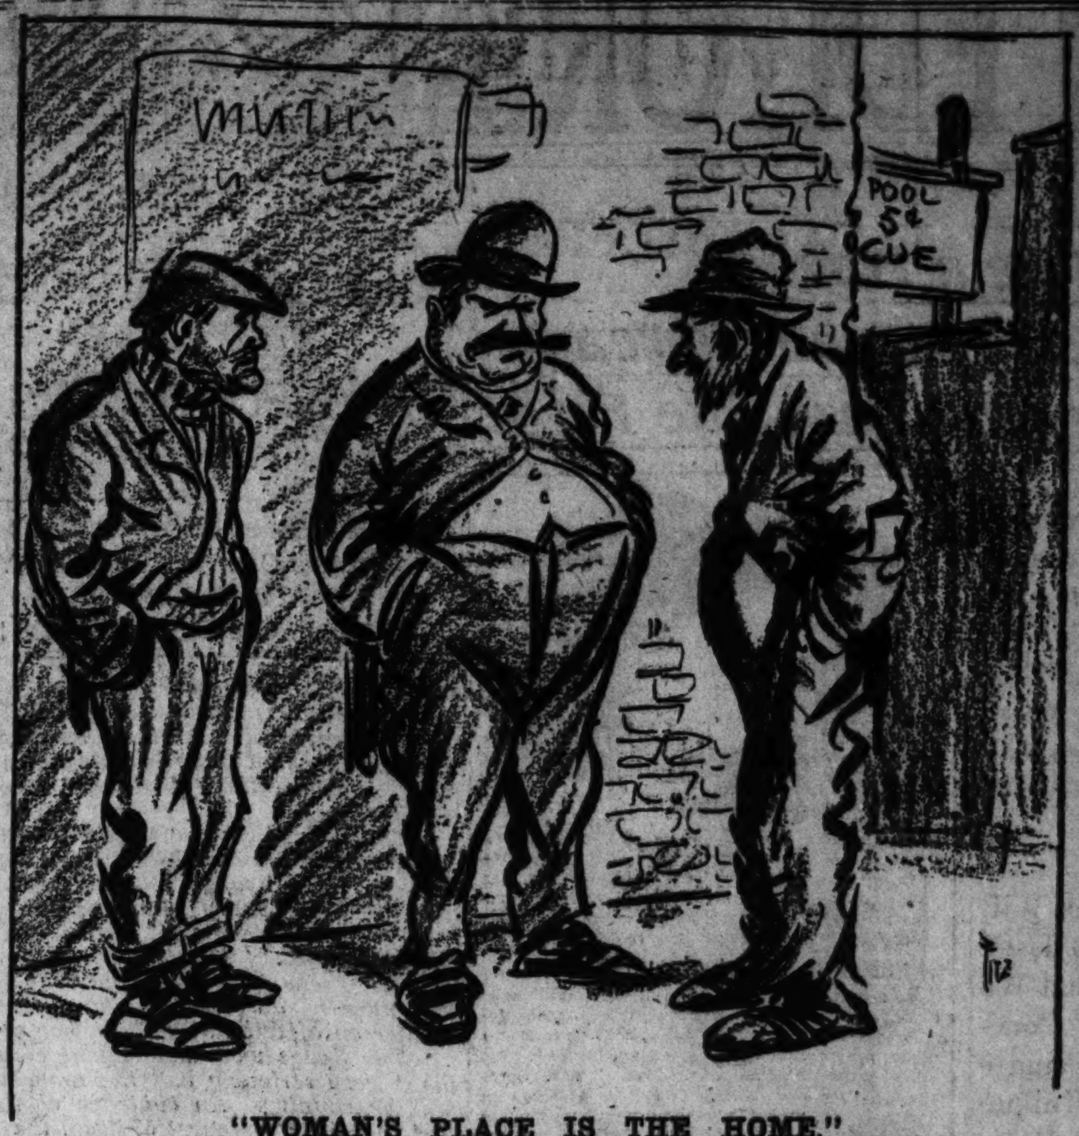
OUR ENGLISH-SPEAKING IMMIGRANTS.

Some surprise may be shown at the census figures classifying foreign whites in this country according to nationality. Of the foreign born and the children of foreign born, the English-speaking races are still preponderant, numbering 10,000,000 out of the 32,200,000. The Germans come next with 8,800,000, then the Scandinavians with 2,900,000. These races, which are fairly homogeneous, together form two-thirds of the whole number. Add the French-Canadians, most of whom speak some English, and they are 71 per cent of all. Even of the foreign born alone the English-speaking lead, with the German second.

Thirty years ago the British still led in immigration, with the Germans second. Twenty years ago they were running nearly even, but with the help of Canadians and Australians the English-speaking races were still a long way ahead. Ten years ago both British and Germans had fallen behind. What is less commonly remembered is that English-speaking immigration is still heavy. There came hither in 1911, 52,426 from England, 29,112 from Ireland, 18,796 from Scotland, from Wales 2162, from Germany only 32,061. With Australians, Canadians and other British subjects added, the immigration from the British empire was still greater than from any other nation except Italy.



"WOMAN'S PLACE IS THE HOME."

JUST A MINUTE.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Clark McAdams.

SOCRATES ON THE LATIN-AMERICANS.

Socrates: Ah, gentlemen! I have just been thinking about Rooseveltius and the Latin-Americans.

Polemarchus: What about them?

Socrates: They seem to be having a fine time together.

Thrasymachus: No doubt.

Socrates: Rooseveltius is continually telling them how much we like them, and they are continually telling him how much they like us.

Polemarchus: Good!

Socrates: You may well say so. There has been too much said about any enmity between us.

Thrasymachus: True.

Socrates: It has almost lead us to believe that there may be something of that sort.

Thrasymachus: Yes.

Socrates: As a matter of fact, there isn't.

Polemachus: No.

Socrates: We have our democracy in common, which must always be a great bond.

Polemarchus: Yes.

Socrates: Then there is the Monroe Doctrine, which is much better understood than it was.

Thrasymachus: No doubt of it.

Socrates: Very well. Then it is inevitable that we shall be friends.

Thrasymachus: It is.

Socrates: The overtures of friendship, too, very properly come from us.

Thrasymachus: Yes.

Socrates: We are the big fellow.

Polemarchus: Exactly.

Socrates: Rooselveltius, then, is performing a very useful service.

Thrasymachus: He is, indeed.

Socrates: He is probably doing more good just at this time than he could be doing had we re-elected him President.

Polemarchus: Yes.

Socrates: Besides, we have a man who knows how to be President.

Polemarchus: So we have.

Socrates: The arrangement, then, might be said to be perfect.

Thrasymachus: It is perfect.

Socrates: It is sweet of you to say so, Thrasymachus. Now let us buy a newspaper and see if the British are going to free Mrs. Pankhurst or let London burn.

THE PLACES MOST VISITED.

From the New York Evening Post.

What is the most frequently visited spot in the United States? In so far as there are figures to indicate, it is Independence Hall.

Last year its visitors numbered more than 960,000. Next to it in this respect comes the Metropolitan Museum of Art in this city, with 850,000 visitors last year, and then the American Museum of Natural History, with 840,000. These statistics are unsatisfying, however since no record is kept of the number of visitors to the Capitol, Bunker Hill, the Boston or New York Public Library, or many other places of national and international interest. The Department of Interior lists the number of those visiting the larger museums of the country, and thus compiles a table gratifying to Philadelphia. For it shows a stream of nearly 1,800,000 visitors to various museums in the Quaker City, and only 1,590,000 to those of New York. Next to these two cities comes Milwaukee, with 500,000 visitors, while Boston is far down the list with 225,000, or only a few more than Chicago.

Nothing could show how narrow is the basis of comparison more clearly than these figures. What we require is a table which shall tell us how many persons visit the monkey cage in Bronx Park every year, and whether more or fewer persons go to Memorial Hall in Fairmont Park, Philadelphia, than go to the zoological gardens hard by. There ought to be some way of distinguishing, too, between the number of out-of-town visitors—those who take the trouble of making a more or less extensive trip to famous shrines—and those to whom a visit to the same places means nothing more than an afternoon holiday.

THE PIG AS A GENTLEMAN.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

It seems that the pig is naturally one of the finest gentlemen in the land, and should be treated as such. This is the declaration of Dr. Austin Peters of Harvard, and being an eminent person he must know what he is talking about. But this dictum will come as a shock to the enthusiastic crusaders who have been declaring that the pigs must be driven out of South Philadelphia. Dr. Peters says that the pig is normally clean, but that man has led him into bad habits. He insists that swine do not appreciate a diet of broken glass, tin cans, lemon rind, orange peels and banana skins. The pig wants to be properly fed and kept in a dry, clean pen.

The pig may want all these things, but if the evidence of the nostrils is to be trusted, and if the photographic testimony is to be credited, he does not get much of them in South Philadelphia. The pigs that are reared in the neighborhood of Harvard may be gentlemanly and highly cultured, but in this section of the country they are very careless about themselves.

OUR INTERIOR WATERWAYS.

From the Cincinnati Inquirer.

Increase of activities toward commercial waterways is in the forecast for a future that shall witness immense progress for many portions of the United States, including the Ohio Valley. Some of the ideas of vast possibilities for commerce by water as well as by rail are not new, but are merely being taken off their shelves. The more they have been thrust aside because of impossibility of cost in the past the more they show their resiliency in these days of financial possibilities. The future of this country will deal with greater enterprises in waterways for ships and barges than have been deemed possible even in the late years of daring predictions and great accomplishment.

THE MYSTERY OF COLDS.

TEN-YEAR READER.—As to colds a physician says: The true predisposing factors of the respiratory infections, so far as known, are: (1) Overeating. (2) Insufficient outdoor life and inadequate ventilation. (3) Lack of germicidal sunlight and lack of tonic cold air. (4) Unhygienic underclothing, and (5) Alcoholism. All these factors (and the mental) should be duly considered. Hereward Carrington writes in Physical Culture: Most persons seem to imagine that a cold is a definite thing, which somehow enters the body and lodges within it like a dog or a cat, and has to be expelled. It is nothing of the sort! It is the process of expulsion of morbid matter, which has accumulated within the system. When we have a cold, we are in reality getting well! After the cold we are well. Before the cold, we were really dangerously ill, because then the system was blocked and choked with an excess of morbid material, which had not as yet found a channel for its elimination. Had this material not been eliminated—in a cold or otherwise—we should have died. "Some years ago," says a medical writer, "a friend said to me, 'When I feel a strong draft blowing on my bald head I always rub it hard—that brings the blood back, and so I avoid taking cold.' Later on he noticed that sneezing is followed by redness of the face, especially in those who sneeze heartily. 'That,' he said to himself, 'is nature's way of bringing the blood back.' Acting on this principle he experimented in various ways and finally became convinced that 'bringing the blood back' does drive away colds; also that sneezing is nature's way of restoring or trying to restore the usual amount of blood to a part, such as the nose, when the surfaces have been deprived of the customary amount of circulation through nerve action causing a chilling of the surface. When the membranes in the nose are showing first signs of being congested and 'stuffed' and a person feels that he is 'taking cold' he should bend the body forward (as picking up a pin) and strain gently till the face is red, then rising to the erect position try to breathe through the partially stopped up nostrils; you should repeat this process till the nostrils feel open and you can breathe through them freely. Of course one should take hot drinks and exercise till the chilly feeling disappears, but that does not drive away the congestion in the nose which so often introduces a severe cold." "The pupils in an open window school room gained in weight on an average more than twice as much as those in warm air school room. The pupils in the open room kept wholly free from colds and were much more regular in attendance than the others. His idea is to have "symphonies of human life," composed of a multiplication of the everyday sounds which go to make up the daily experience. Beethoven and Wagner, he says, have stirred our hearts for a good many years; but now we shall take infinitely more pleasure in listening to the combinations of familiar sounds which mean so much to us in our daily life. THE MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

A DIGEST OF THE BEST EDITORIAL COMMENT AND INFORMATION ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE READERS OF THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

POPULAR PRIMARIES FOR PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

THE most striking and original recommendation in President Wilson's first message to Congress was that the present method of selecting presidential candidates be abolished and a preferential primary system be substituted in its place. This would put an end to national conventions, which have existed since Andrew Jackson's day.

"A Dubious Proposal."

New York World: In discussing President Wilson's recommendation for presidential primaries, the Times complains that: "The direct nomination of presidential candidates, now urged by the President himself, would be another change in the plan of the Government as formulated by the wise men who made the Constitution. They had frankly in view the protection of the people against themselves, against the excesses and the wrong-headedness of temporary majorities."

Inasmuch as the plan for electing the President as formulated by the framers of the Constitution collapsed immediately, the objection raised by the Times is of no importance. The one conspicuous failure of the Constitution was the detached method of electing a President. The American people overthrew it at once, and the Electoral College became a passive instrument for the recording of the popular will. So far as the framers of the Constitution are concerned, the nomination of candidates for President at primaries is no more at variance with their plans than is the nomination of candidates for President by national conventions. They contemplated no nominations whatever, and no popular voice in the selection of the President.

There are constitutional obstacles in the way of presidential primaries, but these have no relation to the issue raised by the Times. It is a serious question whether Congress has power to create such nomination machinery or prescribe methods of nomination. Where can such authority be found among either the direct or implied powers delegated to Congress by the Constitution?

Assuming, however, that they exist, the mechanical obstacles seem almost unsurmountable, and the cost of nominating a candidate for President promises to be hardly less than the cost of electing a President. Indeed, it might be more, and a situation could easily be created in which the final arbiter of the nominating process would be neither the people, nor a convention, nor a political committee, but the Supreme Court of the United States.

The World has no admiration for a method of nominating presidents in which a Murphy can cast as a unit New York's ninety votes in a Democratic National Convention; but we are not compelled to choose between Murphy or a presidential primary. If the American people desire a better method of naming presidents, they have only to correct certain obvious evils in the existing system.

State primaries already enter into the selection of practically all delegates to a national convention. It is not difficult to create by legislative enactment State preferential primaries in which the party voters of every State would have a chance to register their first choice for President. If no one candidate had a majority of the delegates bound by these preferential primaries the way would still remain open for those methods of compromise by which national conventions have some times proved wiser than the people themselves.

With due respect to a great and truly Democratic President, we shall continue to think that on the whole it is best to leave to the people themselves the method of nominating candidates for President without interference by Congress or any other Federal authority. The genius for papular government which created the national convention is adequate to the task of abolishing the evils which have developed in the national convention.

"Political Audacity."

New York Sun: We have been inclined from time to time in the course of his extraordinary career to regard Theodore Roosevelt as a statesman of somewhat radical proclivities; but nothing more radical or far-reaching or extra-constitutional can be found in any of his state papers or public utterances than is contained in the thirty-three lines of President Wilson's message wherein he advocates the abolition of presidential conventions and the nomination of candidates for the presidency through the agency of direct primaries throughout the country. It is particularly to be noted that although there is not a word in the Constitution of the United States empowering Congress to make laws on the subject, the President deems the matter so very simple that he urges "the prompt enactment of legislation" to carry his ideas into effect.

For sheer political audacity this recommendation is unsurpassed. In the vulgar parlance of politicians it is "gall" indeed. * * * * The legislative authority of Congress must be found in the Federal Constitution, and there is no microscope at the White House which will enable Mr. Wilson to find any warrant in the fundamental law for the startling innovation he proposes in respect to the manner of making nominations for President. Incidentally we may ask: Why this proposal now? Hasn't the Democratic party enough trouble on its hands?

"Food for Thought."

Chicago Record Herald: The steadily progressive reformer appears in the very interesting suggestion for presidential primaries that shall make the people direct nominators, the conventions platform builders composed of the nominees for President and both houses of Congress, Senators whose terms have not expired and the members of the National Committees. There is food for thought in all this and also the promise of action.

Lack of Evidence.

Boston Advertiser: If there were any evidence that so-called primary voting had been followed by better conditions in politics President Wilson's argument for putting all national politics on a primary voting basis would be stronger.

"Thoroughly Wilsonian."

Boston Post: In the recommendation for presidential primaries there is a whiff of novelty thoroughly Wilsonian in its nature.

"A Historic Departure."

Boston Herald: In its sheerly popular interest, perhaps nothing in the message exceeds the recommendation for a direct presidential primary, with the corollary that all the party candidates popularly nominated for seats in both houses of Congress, with the national committeemen of the several states and the presidential nominee himself, should make up the ensuing convention to draft the platform and to carry out other remaining tasks. This would be a historic departure.

"A Veil of Elegant English."

Providence Journal: President Wilson's message can be rather accurately described as a veil of elegant English thrown jauntily over the pronouncements of those two great statesmen, Secretary Bryan and Labor Union Secretary of Labor Wilson.

"Will Breed Controversy."

Baltimore News: Unless the News mistakes, he has dwelt on one subject that will certainly breed controversy, both in Congress and out. That he ventured at all to suggest presidential primaries as a subject for national legislation comes as a surprise.

"Gives Satisfaction."

Baltimore Sun: Nothing in the President's message is of more importance, or ought to give more satisfaction to the business men of the country.

"Novel and Striking."

Syracuse Herald: The most novel and striking feature of the address, perhaps, is the President's flot-footed declaration in favor of the nomination of presidential candidates by direct primary vote of the people and without any intervening agency in the shape of a nominating convention.

"A Large Change."

Philadelphia Record: The President's suggestion regarding the selection of candidates for the presidency is a natural amplification of the first primary system, and is in harmony with the political spirit of the time. Yet it involves so large a change that we fear there is little chance of the realization of his hope that it "can be handled promptly and without serious controversy of any kind."

"Radical Enough."

Pittsburg Dispatch: It is evident that the President's program is radical enough. How some of the propositions will work out will be a subject on which pages of discussion will be required before a final conclusion is reached.

"May Meet Opposition."

Syracuse Journal: His purpose to have presidential conventions abolished in so far as the people are concerned may meet with much opposition when thoroughly understood. That the framing of party platforms should be left entirely to the members of Congress and members-elect and to the respective candidates is refreshing, to say the least.

"Logical Progression."

Boston Record: The President's program for direct nomination of presidential candidates is logical progression along the direct government lines lately much in evidence. Upon such a system of nominations his scheme for a new style of national convention follows naturally.

A Question.

Schenectady Star-Union: If every little Governor can have a direct primaries bill all his own, why cannot the President of the United States have one?

"It Would Be Unanimous."

Elmira Star Gazette: President Wilson declared in favor of direct nominations for President. Far be it from us to accuse him of any ulterior motives in such a recommendation, but the fact remains that if Wilson goes along for three years in the same way he has started there would be no question as to the direct primary outcome. It would be unanimous.

"Tone Is Admirable."

Indianapolis News: Some of his suggestions—most of them in fact—are admirable. A few seem to us to be of doubtful value. With the tariff question out of the way, and the currency bill soon to be passed, it is important that Congress plan carefully for further legislation. The President is, of course, anxious to co-operate in every way possible. He would make it possible for the farmer to utilize his credit more effectively than now and bring him "in quick touch with the markets for foodstuffs." There is no suggestion that the farming class or any other class be specially favored, but it is insisted that the whole nation is interested in the production and distribution of food. President Wilson is quite right in opposing any change in the Sherman anti-trust law. But he would supplement it by further legislation which "will not only clarify it, but also facilitate its administration and make it fairer to all concerned." It will be time enough to discuss this legislation when we know what it is. Mr. Wilson favors the presidential primary, administration of our dependencies in their own interest, self-government for the Philippines at the earliest possible moment, citizenship for the Porto Ricans and the development of Alaska. He would improve the Bureau of Mines, enact an employers' liability act in the interest of railroad workers, and generally make our Government the servant of the people. The tone of the address is admirable, and its recommendations are mostly sound. The address itself violates all recent precedents by its brevity.

"Making a Beginning."

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Mr. Wilson goes in for a beginning in Government ownership of railways. The beginning is to be made in Alaska, for the development of the resources of that territory. No estimate of cost is made, and we are satisfied Mr. Wilson is without the remotest conception of what it would be. And that it would be only a beginning he himself assures us in saying: "But the construction of railways is only the first step. How the tempting resources of that country are to be exploited (he must mean developed) is a matter to which I shall later call your attention." This is but the prospectus. When the attention of Congress is later called to the necessity of spending millions to build Alaskan railways, the details will appear in a measure which the Democratic caucus will be expected to approve. Mr. Wilson argues nothing with Congress. Why should a man with a caucus and a bakery which is constantly being enlarged by suspensions of the civil service law be expected to do so?

"Easy to Read, Hard to Forget."

St. Louis Republic: The thing which first strikes the eye that glances over President Wilson's message to Congress is its brevity. It will be read. It is about one-tenth the length of the "standard" messages of Roosevelt and Taft, which were perused of necessity by proof readers and editorial writers, possibly by Congressmen, and certainly not by anyone else. The present message is so short that it will be read by the great majority of the intelligent citizens of the nation.

PRES. WILSON ON HUERTA'S "FINISH"

THE consistent and conservative policy being pursued by President Wilson in regard to Mexico was illustrated in his message to Congress, when he pronounced the absurd Huerta a usurper and predicted his early collapse.

"A Bold Doctrine."

New York World: As the Monroe doctrine was aimed at the Holy Alliance, so the Wilson doctrine is aimed at the professional revolutionists, the corrupting concessionaires and the corrupt dictators of all Latin America. If language means anything, it means that so far as this Administration is concerned the United States will not recognize the constitutional authority of Latin-American governments established by usurpation without the free consent of the unintimidated inhabitants thereof.

It is a bold doctrine and a radical doctrine. Whether it ever gains the force and universal acceptance of the Monroe doctrine must depend upon the attitude of subsequent administrations. Nevertheless, the President has pointed the way to ultimate stability in Latin-American affairs, and his doctrine is a natural corollary of the Monroe doctrine. Obligations cannot remain forever jug-handled. If the United States is to guarantee the integrity of Latin-American countries, they must in turn maintain a kind of government that will not forever threaten peaceful relations between the United States and the rest of the civilized world. If we are to protect their territory, it is right that we should demand that they protect their own institutions.

"Studied Idealism."

Le Temps (Paris): It appears to have been forgotten that Porfirio Diaz ruled with only a semblance of constitutionalism; yet he assured peace, order and prosperity in Mexico during a generation. It is only since the revolution in the name of constitutionalism was begun that Mexico has fallen into anarchy and chaos, in which the Constitutionalists themselves are the worst factors. One cannot fail to be struck by the contrast between the tranquil and studied idealism with which President Wilson follows out his Mexican policy and the brutal realities reported in even the mildest dispatches from Mexico. President Wilson is taking a grave responsibility in his determined efforts to overthrow Provisional President Huerta, because his dictatorship is the only organized social force still existing in Mexico.

"In Silence."

El Pais (Mexico City): President Wilson's words are so injurious and depressing, and at the same time the charges he makes against the Mexican President are so unjust, that it is preferable to pass them by in silence in order not to awaken anti-American sentiment in Mexico."

"Bad Faith."

Independiente (Mexico City): The man at the White House has dared to affirm (against the truth universally conceded) that Provisional President is losing sympathy every day and that his fall is to be expected. It was hardly believable that President Wilson would have the temerity to assert such a thing. He thereby gives testimony of his bad faith towards things Mexican.

"Watchful Waiting."

New York Times: The President is firm, and justly firm, in his attitude toward Mexico. The retirement of Huerta is indispensable to our countenancing the acts of the Mexican Government. At best he has exercised "but a precarious and hateful power," and he has forfeited the respect and the moral support of those who at first stood with him. The President is encouraged to believe that the end is not far distant. Meanwhile we shall maintain "our policy of watchful waiting."

Diplomatic Opinion.

Imparcial (Mexico City): From a good source it is known that some of the foreign Ministers accredited to Washington criticise the message severely. They say it would be impossible to guarantee the re-establishment of peace and good government in Mexico if Provisional President Huerta, whose vigorous efforts at the pacification of the country are well known, should leave the presidency.

"Power of Prophecy."

New York Herald: "We shall not, I believe, be obliged to alter our policy of watchful waiting." So much for the policy of the United States toward Mexico in the immediate future, as President Wilson sees it. As for Huerta—"By little every day his power and prestige are crumbling and the collapse is not far away." Let us hope the President is gifted with power of prophecy.

"Emphasize His Resolve."

New York Press: The President's words to Congress emphasize his resolve that this Government shall recognize neither the Huerta of today nor any Huerta of tomorrow. There must be no more accession to power by treason and murder; there must be a choice of ruler by popular vote; there must be government by laws, not men. That is what President Wilson demands in Mexico, and he will not accept anything else.

But can he get what he demands? Those who know Mexico and the Mexicans do not believe these things are possible—now. So after this Huerta, what shall President Wilson do about the next Huerta? If, because Mexico is Mexico, there is a string of Huertas one after the other, can President Wilson still pursue his policy of taking only what he thinks Mexico ought to have in the way of government and of rulers? Or must he—like those in Mexico praying for order and perishing for lack of it—take what he can get?

FOOD KEEPS GOING UP

THE Government at Washington has started in to investigate the high cost of food and find a remedy if possible. Bills are to be introduced in Congress aimed at alleged cold-storage combines and trusts that corner necessities for the table. Boycotts are being organized in many cities against eggs, which are said to be "cornered."

"Stop at Once!"

Detroit Times: Stop, at once, eating eggs. Stop, at once, putting an egg in the coffee. Stop, at once, cooking anything that calls for an egg. Stop, at once, ordering eggs with your meals downtown. Stop, at once, ordering egg drinks at the soda water fountain. Help the Detroit Housewives' League corner the egg demand and make the cold storage robber and the unscrupulous dealer robber come to time. These two have had a monopoly on the cornering business long enough. We can make them beg for mercy. Let's do it!

The Boycott.

Pittsburg Gazette: Even with artificial restraints upon commodities their prices always yield with time to the law of supply and demand. Hence some persons speak of the egg boycott as foolish. But such a boycott, instead of being foolish, is recognition of the potency of the natural law and effective co-operation with it. It is accelerating in its effect. Lessening of demand must have an influence, whether the cessation be involuntary and unpremeditated or premeditated and voluntary. Ask owners of stocks of eggs whether they enjoy a boycott.

Fooled Again.

Christian Science Monitor: It is not so long ago as to be forgotten that, when cold storage was asking recognition, the chief claim for it was that it would be an equalizer of supply and demand by carrying products from the season of general surplus to the season of general shortage. It was not then foreseen that the device would be used for the advancing of prices in both seasons, in the former by making a new demand and in the latter by holding back the produce and exacting high tribute from the consumer for what little is released. Just that has happened. President Wilson does well to give assurance that the methods of storage concerns will be investigated.

"Widely Commended."

Cincinnati Tribune: Federal and State control of food products held in cold storage is contemplated in a bill introduced by Representative McKellar of Memphis. It forbids the transportation in interstate commerce of food products that have been in storage more than 90 days. It is likely that the bill will be amended if it is passed, but the basic idea is widely commended. A number of the states have established time limits to the storage of foodstuffs.

Blames the Democrats.

Philadelphia Evening Star: The price of eggs is going up—it is predicted that they will reach a dollar—and so are the prices of all other foodstuffs. There is nothing which enters into the cost of living which has been reduced. Nothing has stood still. So much for what the Democrats were going to do for the country and for the people who were deluded into voting for them under a promise that they would enact a tariff and wave a wand which would make them all happy and prosperous and reduce the cost of living so that it would become a mere trifle.

Never Again.

Indianapolis Star: To the man who pays from 20 cents to 35 cents a pound for his fresh meats the thought that there was ever a time when beef sold for so low a price as 3½ cents a pound seems incredible. But Frederick Layton, a veteran meat packer of Milwaukee, is authority for the statement that in 1842 he sold hind quarters for 1½ cents a pound, and the ruling price for a whole mutton was only 50 cents. Meat prices advanced in the Civil War until the best grades of beef commanded as much as 15 cents a pound, but thereafter, as Mr. Layton recalls, there was a notable decrease in price. Judging solely by the fluctuations of more than fifty years ago, Mr. Layton is constrained to believe that there will be decisive reductions in the price of meats hereafter, although he is not so sanguine as to believe that the low level of his early experience will ever be reached again.

"Getting Away" With It.

Indianapolis News: To be fined $18 for selling bad eggs, as happened to a Walkerton woman, seems to be pretty hard luck, considering the large number of people that are selling bad eggs and getting by.

FOREIGN NEWS GATHERED FOR THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

Blighted Lives of Royal Russian Family Revealed

Diary of a Courtier Shows the Friendless Czar Alone Amid Constant Danger and Buried Hopes—The Little Czarevitch Is a Shockingly Spoiled Child.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—To many unsophisticated people such a book as "Behind the Veil at the Russian Court," just published, suggests all sorts of thrilling possibilities.

The very title hints at scandalous chronicles, but as a matter of fact Count Paul Vassili's peeps behind the veil owe nothing of their interest to backstairs gossip and sheer scandal.

The book purports to be the sum of observations gathered into a diary kept for years by one who held high rank and an important post in the Imperial entourage at St. Petersburg.

Whatever measure of truthfulness belongs to it, the book certainly affords many well-limned pictures. Here is one of Czar Nicholas II, who, by the way, appears to be a convinced believer in spiritualism:

"Nicholas II. is one of those timid, weak natures who nevertheless like to assert themselves at certain moments in matters utterly without importance, but which, to their eyes, appear to be vital ones. His mind is as small as his person; he sees the biggest events go by without being touched, or being even aware of their great or tragic sides.

"His want of mind makes him always endorse the judgments of the last person he speaks to. Like every spoilt child he has no heart, not because his is a bad nature, but because he is unable to feel any woes except his own or to understand any wants when he himself has none.

Fleet's Loss Didn't Stop Tennis Game.

"People have asked themselves whether the indifference he has shown in grave moments of his life has been affected or real. When the news was brought to him of that terrible disaster of Tsushima, which cost Russia her whole fleet and the loss of so many precious lives, the Emperor was playing tennis in the park of Tsarskoye Selo. He read the telegram that sounded the knell of so many hopes, and then quietly resumed his game, not a muscle of his face moving.

"Was it stoicism, indifference, or a strength of mind almost supernatural? The world tried to guess, but was afraid to think that it arose from inability to understand the greatness of the catastrophe."

The tragic destiny that seems to enwrap the ruler of all the Russias is sketched in a few graphic lines:

"Danger surrounds him, treason dogs his footsteps; his nation dislikes and distrusts him; his family is hostile to him; his only brother is banished, his mother is estranged from him, the wife of his bosom is the victim of a strange and mysterious malady; his only son and the successor to his throne and crown is smitten with an incurable illness. He has no friends, no disinterested advisers, no ministers whose popularity in the country could add something to his own. And amid these ruins he stands alone, a solitary figure, the more pathetic because he does not realize the tragedy of his own fate."

When the Japanese War began, and the Russian people felt vague premonitions of coming disaster the Czar remained immovable, assured of victory, it is said, by the spiritualistic mediums who constitute his most intimate society.

The Empress a Pathetic Figure.

As to the Empress, she seems to have failed to inspire any personal attachment outside her family circle, beautiful and well-meaning though she is.

"Misfortune seemed to be her lot. Four times her hopes of giving an heir to the Crown was brought to naught as one girl after another was born to her, adding to her blighted life the knowledge that in this respect Russia was bitterly disappointed. Her relations with her husband were affectionate, but not tender, and she never knew how to manage him, or to develop by her sympathy the best side of his nature; her manner toward him also was not what it ought to have been. She treated him more like a naughty boy than like a monarch whose first subject she was."

The most pitiful figure of all is the little Czarevitch, of whom the book records:

"The child, who has been very delicate ever since his birth, suffers from an organic disease of the arteries, which are liable to rupture upon the slightest provocation and even without cause.

"He gets a few lessons from his mother, and once or twice a week a master comes to teach him how to read and write; but his only attendant is a sailor, who follows him about everywhere and who is at the same time his nurse and his tutor and guardian.

Czarevitch a Self-Important Person.

"He is constantly impressed with his own importance and already knows very well his rights, though he entirely ignores his duties. Arrogant by nature, this arrogance is fostered instead of being corrected. No one is allowed to rebuke him or even to contradict him. The Czarevitch beats his sisters, tyrannizes over his servants, and when any one attempts to correct him he instantly threatens the unfortunate person with all kinds of punishments."

No hint is given as to who has now translated the book into quite readable English; but the "entire responsibility" for all its comments is left to Count Vassili, who is dead, and therefore beyond the attentions of the Russian police.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAINS CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Many Americans have sent congratulatory messages to Joseph Chamberlain, former Secretary of State for the Colonies, who was 77 last July and who three weeks ago celebrated his silver wedding anniversary. Mrs. Chamberlain, too, has been the recipient of a large number of messages from her personal friends in Boston, Washington and other places in the United States. She is a New Englander by birth, daughter of Judge William C. Endicott of Massachusetts, who was Secretary of War during President Cleveland's first administration.

Chamberlain was given up by his doctors a year ago on account of an accentuation of the paralysis from which he had suffered for five years. Last May, Mrs. Chamberlain was operated on for appendicitis at Cannes, in the south of France.

Though Chamberlain is still a member of Parliament from Birmingham, he does not take an active part in the proceedings. His entrance in world-politics took place in 1880, when he became a member of Gladstone's Cabinet. Until illness overtook him he was an aggressive politician and leader of men. He began as a Radical. Under Gladstone he turned against home rule [illegible] Ireland. He forced Great Britain into the [illegible] War and he bestowed upon the Unionist [illegible] its policy of tariff reform.

FAMOUS AUTHORESS LAID TO REST IN UNMARKED GRAVE

American Friends of Pierre de Coulevrain Would Rescue Her Body From Lonely Swiss Tomb.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—The American friends of the French author who wrote under the nom de plume of "Pierre de Coulevrain," are taking steps to rescue from oblivion her unmarked grave in the cemetery at Territe, Switzerland. She died a few weeks ago at one of the big hotels of Lausanne, without friends or relatives around her, and was buried, according to her own wish, in "the cemetery of strangers in a grave unmarked by cross, inscription or even name."

Her first book, published 15 years ago, "American Nobility," and another, entitled "Eve Victorious," largely dealt with American international marriages and sold up to more than 100,000 copies. She was regarded by French literary critics as the most brilliant and witty, but at the same time sympathetic, interpreter of the American woman of cosmopolitan society which Europe has ever produced.

Under her real name of Mlle. Fabre, she had lived for over forty years as a governess in the rich families of Americans domiciled in Paris and Rome, as well as with Russian, English and Italian families, always, however, preferring the American.

Her book, "American Nobility," she wrote from her experiences as governess at Rome to the children of an American woman married to an Italian prince.

She was born 71 years ago, and it was as a supposedly worn-out old woman of 56 that she was retired as governess. The children intrusted to her care had long been calling her "grandma," and their mothers, some of whom had been brought up by her themselves, concluded that she was now too old for further teaching. They were planning to pension her off. But it was as authoress of the most-talked-of book of the day, "American Nobility," that she soon came before their startled vision. Then followed "On the Branch," dealing with her own nomadic existence, flitting from city to city and from hotel to hotel. She became rich, famous, feted and imitated, but her personal life was a sealed book. Her creed was: "We can be happy without good fortune."

To that she attributed her power to begin a new life at the age of 56—one full of activity, success and charm.

Her books, five altogether in number, had sales aggregating a million copies, a success considered fabulous in France. Who is to receive the royalties still coming in remains one of the many mysteries about her. No one knows the history of her family or that she had any near relatives to inherit her fortune.

DUCAL TANGOER IS LATEST LONDON SENSATION

His Grace of Manchester, Who Has Failed at Many Things, at Last Finds Something He Can Do Well.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World).

LONDON, Dec. 6.—A ducal dancer of the tango is the latest sensation for the jaded Londoner, for the Duke of Manchester, who married Miss Helena Zimmerman of Cincinnati, having tried a number of vocations without marked success, appears to have discovered his metier and is having a veritable terpischorean triumph in London ballrooms.

"One of the gayest and most enjoyable dances in London in 12 months," is the enthusiastic description given of the Duke's last "tango supper" at the Princess Restaurant. It was a Bohemian gathering, but proficiency in the tango, fish walk and maxixe were essential, and these were danced to perfection in their latest extreme forms.

The theatrical element was strongly represented, and the final figure, when the procession marched down the center of the ballroom beating champagne coolers with champagne bottles, was a most exhilarating spectacle.

The Duke is considered one of the best tangoists in London and quite as good as the professional experts, some of them it is said, are earning money at the rate of $75,000 a year by giving lessons and exhibitions.

Tango dancing is cultivated with prodigious persistence here in the face of the poorest possible result. At a picture ball at Albert Hall, a dull and spiritless affair, tango dancing of the general company was grotesque.

King Alfonso smiled broadly as he followed the painful gyrations of the many tangoists, who fondly imagined they were the correct thing, and finally burst out laughing as a corpulent couple advanced in his direction, making a series of genuflexions.

Queen Ena reproved him sharply and Alfonso replied:

"They were doing it for fun, weren't they?"

This only made the situation worse.

Though fashion prescribes the tango, the dancers really enjoyed waltzing. London now dances more or less all night, having caught the cabaret infection. Night clubs abound for all classes. The really select ones, the Lotus and the Four Hundred, are about as gay as a morgue.

"Holy City" Profits.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Michael Maybrick of Ryde, Isle of Wight, better known as "Stephen Adams," the composer of "The Holy City," and other songs, who died on Aug. 26, left $115,000. All his property goes to his widow.

LLOYD GEORGE NOT QUITE ALMIGHTY, BUT HE'S YOUNG

LONDON, Dec. 6.—A good story of Lloyd George was told by Mrs. Philip Snowden when he spoke at the Tyne Theater, Newcastle.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, she said, was enthusiastically praised by a brother Welshman.

"But surely," objected an Englishman, "Lloyd George is not God Almighty?"

"No," answered the Welshman, "but he is a young man yet."

SIGNBOARDLESS SCENERY IS HOPE IN NEW FRENCH LAW

PARIS, Dec. 6.—A law designed to eliminate signboards soon will become effective. It provides that signboards shall not be erected at more than 100 yards from an inhabited house. There has been a great outcry from Frenchmen and tourists over the glaring advertisements that have been erected in the midst of some of the natural scenic spots.

MME. POINCARE STILL SNUBBED BY ROYALTY

Although Acknowledged as Most Popular Hostess the Palace of the Elysee Has Ever Had, Wife of the French President and Former Vaudeville Actress Is Not Received by Great Monarchies.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World).

PARIS, Dec. 6.—Mme. Poincare, the wife of the President, is generally acknowledged to be the most accomplished and popular hostess the palace of the Elysee has had for a quarter of a century. The official dinners, instead of being in charge of amateur family servants, as was the case under Mme. Fallieres, are today triumphs of art by a renowned chef. Everything is in perfect taste.

The diplomatic corps, officially accredited to the republic, but hitherto seeking its pleasures among the families of the elegant French aristocracy, has now just as good dinners and as handsome entertainments at the home of the President as in the Faubourg-St. Germain. The foreign ambassadors sing the praises of Mme. Poincare.

Mme. Poincare has been accepted by the Duchess of Rohan and many of the other leaders of royalist society, and it is considered a great triumph for her.

But she has failed in her most ambitious desire, which is to force the great monarchies of Europe to receive the wife of the President of France with the same honors as the republic pays to the wife of a King or an Emperor. Never since the present republic was established has the wife of its President been included in the official invitations the President has received from the other European countries, although the President has invariably invited the Queen of England to come with the King to Paris, the Czarina of Russia to accompany the Czar, and the Queen of Spain to join her husband on his visits to the French capital.

Her Ambition Is Soon Blighted.

As soon as Poincare was elected President, his wife announced her determination to go with her husband whenever he left the country on official visits. But he has since then been the guest of King George in London and of King Alfonso in Madrid, but Mme. Poincare was not officially invited to accompany him to either place.

The religious press takes the occasion to bewail the republic's low moral tone in not demanding a chief executive whose personal life is beyond reproach and whose domestic affiliations are above criticism.

This refers to Mme. Poincare's former position as an Italian vaudeville actress, whose first husband was in very humble circumstances, indeed. Poincare, then a middle-aged bachelor, fell in love with her and was her attorney in obtaining the divorce. He married her immediately after.

Miss Adaline Capen, as Queen, Decrees an End to the Debutante Slouch Walk by Appearing in Public Bearing Herself Erect and Queenly.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

OUR gracious queen, Miss Adaline Capen, created a sensation the other day, and everybody has been talking about it ever since. She walked down the street with not the slightest suspicion of the "debutante slouch."

Her shoulders were squared, her pretty little head with its crown of red-gold hair was held high and—well—they do say she looked "perfectly stunning."

She is stylish to a high degree and in everything she wears she looks like a fashion print.

When the "uitlander,"—that's I—heard it, she could hardly fancy it was true, so she called up Mrs. Capen and told her what she had heard, and asked if it was really true.

She said, "I hope so."

Now, you may be sure, that whatever Miss Capen does is the latest style, and if she has given up the slouch or slump, it is perfectly safe to say that a new walk has come to town.

Then, after inquiring and taking notice for several days, it was observed that a number of the debutantes who had affected the recent thing in walks and carriage were walking remarkably well, carrying themselves beautifully in fact, and that several of them did not slump at all.

So I thought I would pass the good word along and let every girl who copies every other girl—which is perfectly natural—know that the slouch is on the wane and that it is time to brace up.

There are Miss Jane McNair and Miss Ellanore Scott who have been in Switzerland at school and never heard of it until they came home and then they didn't care for it—just continued to walk like healthy, pretty girls should. Miss Helen Le Roy Lane is another girl, also a bud, who is noticeable for the way she carries herself; so is Miss Carol Miller, who has exquisite clothes and knows how to wear them. Miss Marion Howard is another who walks well.

. . . who knows? Mayhap the "debutante slouch" has passed into limbo along with the kangaroo walk, the Grecian bend and the Long Beach glide.

BUT to go back to Miss Capen! She has fulfilled all prophecies, and is very much of a belle.

Of course, the day of one belle of society has passed. St. Louis is too large, but of the winter's debutantes there are always a few who have the most invitations, the most partners for dances and all that. Well, Miss Capen is one of these.

But last week she had to miss the Francis dinner dance and several other important affairs because an awful man stepped on her foot—her instep—or, to be more accurate, two men stepped on her foot, both in the same place, one on one evening and the other on the next.

It was really painful, and her foot was so swollen that she could not get her slipper on, and couldn't stand on it.

The day of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Francis' dinner dance everything was done to reduce the swelling that could be thought of, but at the last minute, even after she was dressed, she had to give up and send her regrets.

SPEAKING of accidents, Mrs. William H. Elliot, president of the Wednesday Club, fell down the steps at her home, 5023 Westminster place, a week ago, and broke her arm.

It was not until the third day, however, that she knew it was broken. It had been hurting terribly and she had stayed in bed, but finally they turned an X-ray on it and found that one of the bones was cracked just below the shoulder joint.

It will be several weeks before the arm will be out of the splints, but then you may be sure she will be ready to make up for lost time.

THAT glad, wild Thanksgiving week, concerning which there has been so much talk, turned out to be a chapter of accidents for some of the buds and beaux of the smartest set and lots of stories, funny and otherwise, are being told.

One is a tale that goes something like this: When the powers that be heard of that little surprise party at the Country Club from 3 to 5 o'clock Thanksgiving morning after the Dozier ball the evening before, they were very angry. They found out who were there, and each and every man received a personal admonition to the effect that if such a thing ever happened again, the club attendants would be fired for opening the house and the members who participated would receive notes on the subject. Each was told that the club was not a roadhouse.

The next time a crowd of dance-mad young people—it is presumed they were young people—want to go on with the dance after the ball is over, they will not go to the Country Club.

Very amusing are the things some of the men tell on themselves and others—of how cross and sleepy everybody was by Friday night and the perfectly childish things they did; of how one man stepped on a girl's toe and how she kicked him on the shin; of how another man accidentally stepped on another dancer's sore, tango toe and how the dancer said things; how everywhere, everybody talked of nothing but how they were going to sleep and just sleep!

Everyone was angry at someone else, and they had to keep on dancing to avert a general outbreak.

ANOTHER Diana has appeared in our fashionable set of young married women—Mrs. Erwin Hilts—who has just come back from a hunting trip in Illinois with Mr. Hilts.

She is as enthusiastic as can be about shooting and brought back her share of a bag as big as the law allows.

She was formerly Miss Queenie Rumsey and always has been devoted to outdoor sports. She is a good horsewoman, runs her own motor car and is a good trap shot.

AN engagement of unusual interest in St. Louis is that of Miss Violet Johnson, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. David D. Johnson of West Port, N. Y., and John Campbell Townsend, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Townsend of New York.

Miss Johnson is the granddaughter of the late Charles P. Chouteau and the niece of Mrs. Edward V. Papin of St. Louis. She made her debut here several winters ago when her parents came on for the season, and she was quite a belle.

Since Lieut. Johnson's retirement from the army the family have lived in West Port, N. Y., where they have one of the show places and where the Townsend's also have a summer home.

The prospective bride and bridegroom have known each other since they were children and their love affair had its beginning when they were quite young.

Mr. Townsend is a graduate of Yale in the class of '10 and is a member of the prominent family of that name.

The marriage will be some time this winter.

THE dance craze has become so general that the dancing masters are busy from morning to night.

Old and young are trying to learn the mysteries of new steps and some of the classes are made up of mothers and fathers of grown children.

The latest class to be formed is composed of some of the young married set, who have imported a teacher from the East, who will be the guest of Mrs. Paul Y. Tupper during the few weeks she will be here, and who has been studying with some of the premier danseurs in New York.

In the class are several young matrons who have been known as beautiful dancers and who danced "fancy dances" at charity affairs and kermises when they were little girls—not so many years ago. One of them is Mrs. Charle McLure Clark, who, as Miss Lenore Scullin, was one of the first girls to do the skirt dance, and Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert, who was Miss Myrtle McGrew, danced all kinds of pretty children's dances. The class will include Messrs. and Mmes. C. K. Dickson Walsh, Albert Bond Lambert, Louis B. Ely, George M. von Schrader, John B. Kennard, Tom Pierce, Charles McLure Clark, Robert L. Kayser, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Y. Tupper; Misses Margaret McKittrick Jones, Grace Allen; Messrs. Lilburn G. McNair and Walter C. Taylor.

Madame Shapiro's Corsets are recommended by society women. 3954 Westminster. Lindell 1362.

With so many dinner dances, all patterned on the same line, and almost all given at the same places—Woman's Club, St. Louis Club and Country Club—with almost the same people as guests, it is remarkable how each one can be so entirely different from the others.

Mrs. Morrison's dinner dance for her granddaughter, Miss Virginia Morrison Carr, Thursday evening, was of more than passing interest as it was the first entertainment Mrs. Morrison, one of St. Louis grandest dames, had given for a number of years, and society wondered how she would imbue it with some of the spirit that has made functions given by her in former years models of beauty and good form.

The old spirit renewed was there in abundance, and since Thursday the beauty of the debutante's table laid for 62 buds and beaux, with its tops covered with Killarney roses and lilies of the valley, has been topics everywhere the fashionable set has gathered. Never a dance was more gay.

Mrs. Morrison, Miss Carr and Mrs. E. Hope Norton, another granddaughter of the hostess whom she presented at the ball about 16 years ago, received together.

Mrs. Morrison's gown was black with trimming of old lace, and she wore the jewels, emeralds and diamonds that are ranked among the handsomest in St. Louis. Miss Carr was in a white chiffon gown embroidered in pale blue velvet.

There were nearly 300 guests. At Mrs. Morrison's table were Messrs. and Mesdames Howard A. Benoist, George von Schrader, Arthur Thacher, Virgil Rule, John O'Fallon Delany, George S. Tiffany, Julius S. Walsh Jr., J. Hamilton Farish, Alonzo C. Church, Mrs. Ashley D. Scott, John C. Crenshaw, Louis Werner and Col. Saunders Foster.

Messrs. Heffern & Neuhoff, jewelers, announce that Messrs. Charles D. Long and Warren Sprague are associated with them at 805 Locust during the Christmas season.

On the week's social calendar is the ball to be given by the Daughters of the Confederacy at the Woman's Club Friday evening.

As always, it is one of the most notable social events of the winter. It will be given by the St. Louis Chapter of the U. D. C.

There is a number of committees which include the names of families long identified with the South in St. Louis.

Special stress has been laid upon the program, and much of the music is absolutely new in St. Louis, and is used only by special permission for this occasion.

Tangoes, two-steps, one-step and the Virginia Reel will allow those who dance to choose the one they like best so as one need not feel out of tune with the evening's offering. Miss Mae Byrnes and Jack Flaripa will dance the Argentine tango as a special feature.

Clendenen teaches the refined Tango, Dream Waltz, Maxixe and others.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. De Martini have moved from 4526 Laclede avenue to their new home at 6130 McPherson avenue.

The engagement of Miss Maud North of Gray's Summit, Mo., and Dr. Joseph H. Williams of Webster Groves, has been announced. It is the sequel to the marriage of the

To Have Smooth, White, Soft Skin All Winter

(From the Woman Beautiful.)

Does your skin chap or roughen easily in this weather, or become unduly red or blotchy? Let me tell you a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest drug store and use a little before retiring, as you would cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with sudsy water. The wax, through some peculiar attribute, flecks off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn-out cuticle comes off just like dandruff on a diseased scalp, only in almost invisible particles. Mercolized wax simply hastens Nature's work. Used as required, it keeps the face constantly free from devitalized scarf skin, and only the healthy, young-looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for weather-beaten, aged, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

How to be Beautiful
Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems.

Miss Ainsworth is noted for her marvelous beauty, as well as famous as a talented concert singer, and artists the world over rave at her beauty and have sought her for their masterpieces. She frankly admits that hers is a cultivated, but natural, beauty, and no "make-up" is ever used. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores, or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Miss Ignorance asks: "Will you please tell me how to properly massage the face, neck, arms, shoulders and hands? I am delighted with your treatment for the hair and scalp. It has done wonders in so short a time, etc."

Answer: "To a girl or woman nothing is more important than the care of the skin, which at once protects and beautifies the face and form. Anyone who has a clear, smooth, tinted skin has an element of beauty apparent to all. Keeping the skin in a healthy condition, and the flesh underlying it plump and firm, is the object of 'Massage.'

"In massaging the face, the general rule is that the moulding strokes of the fingers should be outward, and upward from the mouth and nose. To remove wrinkles from the forehead the stroke should be upward. For the neck use outward strokes. For the bust, shoulders, arms and hands use the rotary movement.

"After the above movements, and when the face is lacking in color, a patting or slapping of the cheeks, forehead and chin tends to draw the blood to the surface underlying the skin, thus creating pink cheeks, red lips, etc., while it encourages firmness and plumpness, filling the hollows, removing wrinkles, etc.

"The first essential of massage is thorough cleanliness. Every element of dirt, soot, dust or perspiration should be removed by a thorough massage with [illegible] glowene, which is medicated saponified vegetable oils, instead of soap. Virtually it is a 'water massage.' I have never found anything to equal it as a positive cleanser and beautifier of the skin. It removes every element of grime from the depths of the deepest pores and thus eliminates blackheads, large pores and coarseness of the skin. It is sold in sealed tubes with full directions.

"After thorough cleanliness, the real nourishing and health-giving massage follows, and for this I use and advise a pure [illegible] by name, [illegible] jars.

"The next step is the protection of the skin from inclement weather, snow, rain, dust and wind. For this I always use the gloriol balm, before going out of the house. Its use prevents freckles, chapping, wind and sunburn, and keeps the skin clean, smooth and marvelously attractive and healthy.

"The use of a good rice powder or even talcum after the foregoing is not objectionable, but avoid paint, rouge, astringent lotions and the like.

"This treatment and massage is scientific and positively produces most gratifying results if regularly followed from day to day. The articles are inexpensive, absolutely harmless and every woman owes it to herself to promote and retain beauty of face and form."

Mina R. asks: "Can you advise a reliable hair tonic? I have used various ones, but with little benefit, as I am losing my hair fast."

Answer: "To beautify the hair, tone up the scalp, overcome falling hair and promote the growth of it, I have found by experience of myself and others that tonics composed mainly of alcohol will not do; but a simple preparation, made at home by mixing one-half ounce concentrated hairwand powder with a pint of pure water is the ideal treatment. Well-stocked drug stores have the hairwand powder in sealed vials."

A Fat Woman asks: "Can one safely take medicine to reduce superfluous flesh? If so, what do you advise?"

Answer: "The most reliable and safest anti-fat medicine that I know of is five-grain phy-thy-rin tablets, prescribed by physicians and sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration."

Mrs. D. C. asks: "Can you give me a remedy for superfluous hair on my cheek? Something that will not mark or irritate?"

Answer: "Such a flaw mars your face, and I am glad to be able to advise a perfect depilatory. Get a sealed vial of fluvol powder and use according to directions and instantly your distress will cease. The hair may return, but repeat the treatment and ultimately the root should be destroyed."

James B. asks: "I am sorely afflicted with itching scalp and a very bad case of dandruff which refuses to yield to ordinary hair tonics. Please tell me what will really cure?"

Answer: "There are several good treatments for dandruff, but most of them are expensive and require the services of an expert. The most prompt, efficient and inexpensive treatment is the application of plain yellow minyol, which is sold by druggists in four-ounce jars, with directions for home use. This was originated by a professional, learned in the knowledge of hair and scalp and is widely used by the proprietors of hair dressing parlors."

Miss Dorothy asks: "I am so thin and bloodless that I am almost transparent, and I want so much to increase my weight about 20 pounds. What can I do?"

Answer: "I advise a diet of one or two raw eggs well beaten and mixed with a pint of rich milk suitably flavored, at least once a day. Then begin at once to use 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, which are sold by druggists in sealed packages, and prescribed for aenemia and abnormal thinness. Also take daily massage with medicated venesol."

Miss Delia R. asks: "I wish you would please advise how to purify the blood so that my skin will whiten, it is so sallow, muddy and greasy; and also cure festering pimples and blackheads?"

Answer: "Read my words to 'Miss Ignorance' in this number and follow the advice for local treatment; and in addition, begin at once taking one grain quinoxide tablets as per directions with each sealed tube obtainable from well-stocked druggists. Quinoxide is perfectly wonderful as a blood and complexion purifier. Avoid rich foods and pastries."

Miss B. P. asks: "I am terribly disfigured by freckles all over my face. My skin is fair and if it were not for these horrid freckles I would have a pretty complexion. Please tell me how to overcome the trouble."

Answer: "It is quite possible to prevent freckles by using gloriol balm before exposure to the weather. To remove them it is necessary to use something to gradually remove the outer skin layer, and for this I recommend Madam Lessile's freckle balm. Full directions are with each package."

Amelia J. asks: "Can one obtain a ready prepared fluid which will keep stubborn, stringy hair in wave and curl, without injury and invisible?"

Answer: "There is only one reliable preparation of this nature that I know of and it is sold by drug and toilet stores as gloriol wavolene. It is easily applied and you can avoid the terribly injurious curling iron. Many find that a permanent wave in the hair is soon established even in damp climate. Once used you will never be without it."

Mrs. B. W. C. asks: "How can I fill the hollows in my neck, and develop a flat bust? I have never tried anything but a diet."

Answer: "By beginning a massage with a nutrient oil or cream called medicated venesol, sold in sealed tubes with explicit directions for home use. An actress friend informs me it is the only thing which proved wholly satisfactory after trying innumerable methods. If your whole body is too thin, take 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets."

Madeline asks: "Do you believe in the use of 'dry shampoo' for the hair? Is it beneficial? If so, what is best to use?"

Answer: "A dry shampoo is very beneficial especially if one's hair is inclined to be oily and dust-catching. The powder should be antiseptic and non-injurious to the scalp. This formula makes an exquisite cleanser and adds lustre and life to the hair, if used once a week.

"Obtain separately 4 ounces of powdered orris root and 4 ounces of vilane powder. Mix thoroughly and use one or two tablespoonfuls, sprinkling through the hair, by kneading with the fingers afterwards removing all trace by a thorough combing and brushing.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Al" writes: "I should like a good, reliable treatment for the hair and scalp. Something that will cure dandruff and stop falling hair, also cure an itching scalp."

Answer: The most reliable treatment for the scalp is sold in 4 oz. jars at any drug store, and is called plain yellow minyol. It is superior to anything known for the scalp. It gives new vigor and helps the hair to keep its natural color. This will positively cure your dandruff and stop the itching of the scalp.

"Harry M." writes: "I am quite tall and do not weigh enough for my height. Am very nervous and my skin is very pale."

Answer: You can readily increase your weight by taking three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets regularly for several months. These tablets will also overcome nervousness, help digestion and assimilation and thus improve the color of the skin. Many report gaining 10 to 30 pounds with improved health in every way. The tablets are packed in sealed cartons with directions and are widely prescribed for your ailment.

"Poor Ann" writes: "Every winter I am troubled with slight attacks of rheumatism. I have tried many things but with no avail."

Answer: The best thing for rheumatism is made by mixing the following ingredients and taking a teaspoonful at meal times and again at bedtime. Iodide of potassium, 2 drams; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of colchicum, ½ ounce; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz., and syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 oz.

"Mrs. A. C." writes: "My little daughter has a very bad cold and cough which we do not seem able to even relieve. What shall I do?"

Answer: Purchase a 2½ oz. bottle of essence mentho-laxene and make a syrup according to directions given and your daughter will be cured within a few days. This is very pleasant to take and will drive the cold out of the system.

"P. P. C." writes: "If you can prescribe something to prevent an attack of appendicitis, please do so. I have constipation, sour stomach, headache and am weak and listless with pains after eating."

Answer: The best treatment for disordered stomach and bowels, due to indigestion, is tablets triopeptine, sold in sealed cartons with full directions.

"Energy" writes: "Let me say that my condition puzzles and worries me. In the last year I seem to have been growing old rapidly, though only 32. My food and sleep do not recuperate my strength and energy, and lately I have dizzy spells, trembling, headaches, loss of appetite, memory and hopefulness. Despondency and worry over my condition are ever present."

Answer: Cheer up, get well and then conserve your vitality by proper, temperate living. Obtain three-grain cadomene tablets in sealed tubes with full directions, use them, and an agreeable, pleasing restoration should ensue to your entire satisfaction.

"Miserable" asks: "I was miserable all through the summer last year on account of being too fat. Can you please help me to reduce with something harmless?"

Answer: Hundreds of persons who are too fat suffer. It is needless suffering. The discovery of the principles contained in 5-grain arbolone tablets make it comparatively easy to reduce from 10 to 50 pounds. These excellent tablets are put up in sealed tubes with directions for self-administration.

"Gwendaline" writes: "Kindly tell me what to do. I suffer with liver, kidney and stomach trouble. Am constipated and have slight attacks of biliousness."

Answer: For your stomach, liver and kidneys, take three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). These little tablets are packed in sealed tubes and contain full directions for using. They will purify the blood and act directly on the liver and kidneys, and if taken regularly will gradually effect a relief for all ailments that arise from chronic constipation.

"Wife": Incontinence or bedwetting in children is usually corrected by using the following in 10 to 15 drop doses in water one hour before meals: Tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus aromatic, 2 drams; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Mix well.

"C. R." writes: "I have a very troublesome case of catarrh of the head and throat. I suffer annoyance and embarrassment very keenly. Can you give me something to stop this trouble?"

Answer: Use daily a nostril wash and gargle made with antiseptic vilane powder. Obtain a two or eight ounce box of it and use it according to the directions enclosed.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MS NEW YORK DEC 3—1913

MR I D KLINE, CARE KLINE'S, ST LOUIS MO

The Cloak, Suit and Dress manufacturers here in New York are terribly overstocked, owing to the extreme warm weather prevailing all over the country. Have shipped you thousands of Coats, Suits, Dresses and Costumes at most ridiculous prices ever heard of. We bought these goods for less than half regular prices. Get up enormous sale and give the women of St. Louis and vicinity the most wonderful bargains they ever had in their lives.

E. B. KLINE, New York Purchasing Office.

Sale Begins Tomorrow Morning

THE unusual conditions prevailing in the Eastern markets are too well known to require extensive comment. Our New York buyers were on the ground and had first choice from the lines of many of the foremost specialists—with the result that there is assembled here for Monday a wonderful assortment of the most desirable winter apparel which will be disposed of at prices that will prove a sensation of the season. All the Kline Stores participated in these vast purchases—which made it possible for us to handle four to five times the quantity of the average store and enabled us to demand concessions and exclusive lines that could not be obtained by any single institution.

In addition to these purchases—our own entire stock has been included at similar reductions—so you can readily imagine what wonderful assortments this sale will present. No matter what you want in Suits, Coats, Wraps, Dresses, Gowns, Skirts, Waists, Furs, or Millinery—you will find it here in just the style you want and at a price that will surprise you.

On account of the magnitude of the assortments—we can only mention a few of the items taken at random from each department.

UNSURPASSED FOR THE CHRISTMAS TREE (German and U. S. Patents.)

Are the Angel Christmas Chimes

Millions have been sold in Europe and have brought joy into every home. The Christmas Chimes are one foot high and so constructed that they can be fastened at the top of the Christmas Tree, or they can be placed on any table.

The Christmas Chimes consist of: —5 angels, 3 candlesticks, 3 tuned bells and 1 turbine. Below is a wonderful enameled picture of the Crib of Bethlehem with the inscription "Glory to God in the Highest," etc. The Christmas Chimes are made of fine metal, gilded and enameled in beautiful colors. When the candles are lighted the heat makes the Turbine move with the angels in a circle and sweet music sounds through the room, heralding the Birth of Christ.

The same effect is obtained if the Chimes are placed on a hot stove or a radiator. A more suitable Christmas present could not be devised. The Christmas Chimes are unbreakable and easily put together, according to instructions. A most wonderful ornament with music every time the candles are lighted.

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER HAIR WHEN FADED OR GRAY

Sage Tea, when Mixed with Sulphur, makes Your Hair Soft, Beautiful and Removes Dandruff at Once.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—ADV.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning, the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

A Gift That Is Useful Every Day of the Year

Spug Founders Write of Their War on Christmas Grafting

THE SPUGS—and these are the gifts each Spug has to give and to bestow.

It is the first Spug Christmas tree party. It is expected that SIX THOUSAND PERSONS will attend—WE SPUGS wish it was six million.

Understand, too, the SPUG purpose is not to discourage CHRISTMAS GIVING, but CHRISTMAS GRAFTING.

Every SPUG who comes to the party will bring priceless gifts.

The gift of HELP.

The gift of CO-OPERATION.

The gift of TIME, WELL SPENT.

The gift of KNOWLEDGE that by their presence they have helped make the day less lonely for others.

SPUGS believe in giving, but in giving wisely. They believe in giving costly gifts, IF YOU CAN AFFORD IT. They believe in giving to those who will appreciate being remembered. They believe, most of all, in the priceless gift of A KINDLY THOUGHT.

The Spug movement is young, but growing. Moreover, its growth is steady and normal—far better than that it should be welcomed by hysterical enthusiasm.

Booms, whether in business, in movements or in personalities, are nothing but examples of ridiculous American nationalism. They harm more than they help.

What is going to make the Spug movement of lasting and great good is he sustained campaign by which it is being carried on.

It is the steady, sustained and persistent campaign which is needed in every movement, not the impulsive, thoughtless, sporadic campaign.

One has to look for proof of this only so far as the history of most reform movements in politics. They burst forth in a blaze of glory, go through to a triumphant victory, and then settle down into blissful oblivion.

The Spug movement will grow slowly but steadily, and it will endure. The Christmas tree party this Christmas day will be real and earnest and lasting in its effect.

So if you have a little gift you yourself may give—a gift of a few minutes or a few hours of your time; a cheering thought for the others who will be there, the willingness to give encouragement to those who are daring to think, to observe Christmas as they really wish to and not to let foolish customs control them—come to the Spugs' Christmas tree party on Christmas day and take away with you gifts as priceless as those you have bestowed.

Spugs Give to Make Glad

By IDA M. TARBELL.
Nemises of the Standard Oil Monopoly and of John D. Rockefeller.

IDA M. TARBELL

TO lift useless burdens from the shoulders of Xmas, to help the great day to enter in joy and strength and to go out in Peace and Good Will, this is what "SPUGS" work for.

Primarily, the vulgar habit of giving when gifts are but a kind of bribe or barter. They seek to bring the beautiful custom back to its primitive freshness, to restore giving to make glad. No gift carries real joy with it which is sent for any other reason than that the giver wants to spread joy. The love in his heart may be behind the gift, or there may be behind it that fine quality which we call sympathy, the something in the heart which opens one's eyes to the loneliness, the need, the failing courage of others.

SPUGS give only from these two motives. They aim to strip from the day all the foolish bartering which ruins it for so many, to take from it worry, weariness, extravagance and bitterness.

The Christmas work of Spugs outside of their intimate circle is concentrated on carrying gladness to those who otherwise would not know it. Spending money is but the least of this great work. Thought of others, sensing their conditions, stretching out the friendly hand, cheering them up, spreading the Christmas spirit of good will to those who for one reason or another have fallen without the zone where that spirit operates—this is what the Spugs aim to do.

Perfunctory Gifts Make Miss Gilder Shudder

By JEANETTE GILDER.
Famous Literary Critic and Writer on Philanthropic Questions.

MISS JEANNETTE GILDER.

PERFUNCTORY gift giving! There's something about those three words that sends a shudder through me and makes me only too glad to join any movement that does away with them.

The whole thought of a gift is that it is an expression of sentiment. Back of every gift one likes to feel there is a kindly feeling expressed in the form of a remembrance.

And think of perfunctory gift giving where there is no sentiment, no feeling except a feeling of antagonism because one had to contribute to the purchase of the gift.

The idea is repellant, and better than that there be such gift giving let there be no gifts at all. Any movement—and the Spug movement is the best I know of—that has for its purpose the abolishing of such gift giving has my most enthusiastic support.

I know positively that if I received a gift of such a nature I should feel tempted to hurl it out of my sight. When I receive a remembrance I want to be able to look back of it and see the kindly, friendly thought that prompted it. I know I should positively hate the sight of any gift, no matter how costly or handsome, if I knew or felt that back of it were ugly grimaces, unkind thoughts and possibly empty stockings in some home; or, worse still, an empty stomach the day after. It isn't a pretty thing to think of, is it?

The Spugs, I believe, have the right idea. If they can put a stop to that sort of thing—and I believe they can—they will have done an invaluable service to humanity.

Of course I'm a Spug, and what's more, I always will be one.

PERCY: I'd be delighted with a [illegible] for Christmas like the one John bou[illegible] Ella on cerdit at Loftis Bros., 2d fl., 30[illegible] 6th.

St. Louis Play Bills ⁂ Review of "Gen. John Regan"

GABY DESLYS IN MUSICAL COMEDY NOW AT SHUBERT

"Oh! Oh! Delphine!" Musical Comedy Made From French Farce Comes to Olympic.

VAMPIRE PLAY, AMERICAN

"A Texas Ranger," La Salle's Offering—Vaudeville and Burlesque Elsewhere.

GABY DESLYS in "The Little Parisienne." Shubert. Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee. Musical comedy introducing to St. Louis' playgoers the celebrated French comedienne, now using the English language, who has been the leading New York Winter Garden star since her first American appearance there three seasons ago.

The large and capable company engaged in support includes Harry Pilcer, Gaby's dancing partner; Forest Huff, the original "Chocolate Soldier;" Fritzi Von Busing, also a former star in that same piece; Joseph W. Herbert, Edgar Atchison-Ely, Louise Meyers, Arthur Lipsen, Hattie Knietal and Percy Lyndal.

Mlle. Deslys and Mr. Pilcer, in addition to their work in the play proper, will be seen in a number of specialties, of which the "Gaby Glide" is the most famous. The many dazzling gowns worn by Mlle. Deslys are said to be the very latest Paris creations and of every conceivable hue and fabric. She is said to wear them in a way peculiarly her own.

It is announced that the organization is a straight musical comedy company, not a collection of vaudeville specialists. The New York Winter Garden company sends it and its star on tour.

"A BROADWAY HONEYMOON," with Emma Carus. Shubert. Thursday, Friday and Saturday night, with Saturday matinee. Musical comedy satire on the divorce question. Comes direct from a successful engagement at the Howard Theater in Chicago, and is the latest offering of Joseph E. Howard, who himself appears with Miss Carus.

Among others in the company are Mabel McCain, a former St. Louisienne; Francis Kennedy, Carl Randall, Nan Halperin, Arthur Deming and a well-drilled chorus of 50 attractive young women. Miss Carus, a great Broadway favorite, is said to have one of her best roles, and her three songs, "Salvation Glide," "Tuning the Strings of My Heart" and "An Irish Suffragette," are described as classical efforts in rag-time and light opera. The score as a whole is said to be rich in tuneful and catchy music of Mr. Howard's composing.

"OH! OH! DELPHINE!" Olympic. Musical comedy, its book by C. M. S. McLellan, its music by Ivan Caryll, made from the rollicking French farce, "Villa Primrose," by MM. Berr and Guillemaud, with lyrics that are declared to blend with and supplement rather than interrupt the plot.

The play's diverting story begins when two men who have married one another's divorced wives turn up unexpectedly at the same summer hotel. Delphine's ex-husband, Victor, was an artist specializing in pictures of Venus and having the reputation of being too attentive to his models. After their separation Delphine "revenged" herself by marrying his fat and ludicrous friend, Bouchette. Victor's new wife, the former Mme. Bouchette, was Delphine's lifelong rival. The comedy complications arising from these facts as the story's basis are said to be extremely amusing and cleverly handled.

The cast includes Frank McIntyre, Scott Welsh, Frank Doane, George A. Beane, George S. Christie, Alfred Fisher, Grace Edmond, Octavia Broske, Stella Hoban, Helen Raymond, Dolly Alwin and others.

"A FOOL THERE WAS." American. Return engagement of powerful emotional drama based on Kipling's uncanny poem, "The Vampire." Its story concerns a distinguished American, whose life was utterly ruined, his career destroyed, his home broken up, himself made a hopeless drunkard and dying in collapse after a debauch, by a beautiful but sinister woman, who laughs at his weakness and ultimate degradation.

Florence Auer plays the role of this malevolent temptress. Warner Oland is cast as her unhappy victim.

"A TEXAS RANGER." La Salle. Melodrama of frontier life, introducing Texas Rangers patrolling the Rio Grande, an Indian camp, the Apache war dance, Indians and Mexicans defying American soldiers, a night attack on a stockade fort, a daring ride for reinforcements and the rescue of the garrison.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by George Damerel, musical comedy star, in "The Knight of the Air," a Viennese operetta, with a clever company and attractive chorus in support. An extra attraction is Cheebert's troupe of Manchurians, daring acrobats, in thrilling feats. Other acts are Will Rogers, the Oklahoma cowboy, in astounding feats with the lariat; Les Yost, lightning sculptors in colored clay; Chick Sale, humorous impersonator of rural types; Jack Sidney and Billee Townley, in songs and dances; Dena Caryll, a wonderful mezzo-soprano, and the first run of Pathe motion pictures.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Bill headed by the Seven Happy Hearns in a comedy bicycle offering with "crazy" wheels and a thrilling auto-race finish. Other features are the Five Greens in a comedy musical offering, with juggling feats and comedy magic; Alf Ripon, the Scotch ventriloquist, and his funny manikin, "Wee McGregor;" the Two Flying Minervas, in mid-air acrobatics; the Connolly Sisters, eccentric singers and entertainers; Norton and Elliott, paper manipulators and harmonica soloists; the Three Dreamers, comedy singers, talkers and dancers; Orrin Davenport and company, in a wonderful riding exhibition, Mr. Davenport being the world's somersault champion, and four other acts.

VAUDEVILLE. Shenandoah. Lottie Mayer and her Five Bathing Beauties, the Three Flying Kays, McGrath and Yeoman, in "The Lunatic and the Lady;" Daldano and Milano, "the harpist and the singer;" Killian and Moore in a singing and talking act, and exclusive photoplays.

The Juniata also offers a high-class bill of attractive photoplays.

COLUMBIA BURLESQUERS. Standard. Company headed by Harry Cooper, German comedian, and June Mills, prima donna, will present new two-act musical comedy entitled "A Ladies' Man" and clever vaudeville.

"FOLLIES OF PLEASURE." Gayety. New two-act musical comedy; also bright vaudeville. Company headed by Dan Coleman and Violet Hilson, and includes other burlesque favorites.

Next week, May Howard's Big Show.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand Opera House. Bill headed by "The Fair Co-Eds," a tabloid musical comedy presented by 12 performers; other features are Bockman's lions, ferocious animals; the Novelty Dancing Four, in an original act; the Nettle Carroll troupe of five women tight-wire artists; Joe McGee, late of Al G. Field's minstrels, burnt-cork comedian; Wilson and Keller, in an original novelty; De Stephano Brothers, harp and violin players; Dallas Romans, "that Texas girl;" McClure and Dolly, comedy jugglers, and new kinemacolor views.

"FLORENCE AND VENICE." Odeon. Thursday evening. E. M. Newman's fourth travel talk of the present series. The famous art-treasures of the two cities named are shown, also their most renowned palaces and other beautiful structures, including, as well, an excursion to Fiesole, a delightful little suburb; a picturing of the secluded life of the monks in the monasteries at La Certosa and Vallambrosa, a gondola tour of Venice, a visit to the island of Bursho, where Venetian lace is made and to Murano and its glass-makers.

Under the art-direction of F. R. Benson the Stratford-on-Avon Players of England come to the Olympic on Dec. 22 for Christmas week. Their repertoire is: Monday, "The Merchant of Venice;" Tuesday, "King Richard II;" Wednesday matinee, "King Henry V;" Wednesday night, "Romeo and Juliet;" Thursday matinee (Christmas day), "Merry Wives of Windsor;" Thursday night, "Taming of the Shrew;" Friday, "Much Ado About Nothing;" Saturday matinee, "As You Like It," and Saturday night, "Hamlet."

A Curious Play, Curiously Fathered, Is "General John Regan," Irish-Life Satire

Its Author Is a Cathedral Canon of the Church of Ireland, Son of a Belfast Vicar, and Husband of the Bishop of Killaloe's Daughter—Play's Story Humorously Pillories the Irish for Their Alleged Munchausen Proclivities.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

SO distinctly out of the ordinary and so important as one of the very latest contributions to the modern allegedly realistic school of native Irish drama is "Gen. John Regan," which I saw at the Hudson Theater during the closing days of my recent play-reviewing visit to New York City, that the fact of my having been too busy to write my review of it before returning to St. Louis does not in the least diminish my duty of making a report on its dramatic value to the Post-Dispatch's play-going readers, for whose informative benefit I was sent to see the more notable plays now on the metropolitan stage.

This curious little comedy of life in a present-day Irish village, while not arousing the storm of angry Celtic protest that greeted Synge's "Playboy of the Western World," and which especially marked the latter's presentations in this country, is nevertheless not by any means relished by Irish-Americans of sustained love for the island home of their ancestors. There is little cause for wonderment at this truth of racial indignation, in view of the fact that the basis of the play's entire story is the alleged ability of the Irish, mainly because of a rich imagination and a childlike vanity in meeting the expectation of alien vistors, to lie more readily, resourcefully and persistently than the people of any other nationality under the sun.

Also, as the comedy originally was presented in London, where it scored a great success with a public unduly prone to acclaim satirical thrusts at either the Irishman's or the Scot's supposedly weak points of character, the venom of religious bitterness was injected by presenting the village priest in an intoxicated condition as one of the play's leading "comedy" incidents. This scene, however, has been eliminated from the American performances of the work, other modifications have been made, and some clever strokes in humorous character drawing, it may be conceded by all, are accomplished by several members of the American company.

It may be additionally interesting to learn that the novel from which the play is made was written by George A. Birmingham, which is the pen-name of the Rev. James Owen Hannay, M. A., rector of Westport, County Mayo, canon of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, a member of the General Synod of the Church of Ireland, son of the Rev. Robert Hannay, D. D., vicar of Belfast, and husband of a daughter of the Rev. F. R. Wynne, D. D., Bishop of Killaloe. The Rev. James Owen Hannay has written a number of popular novels and also is the author of "The Spirit and Origin of Early Christian Monasticism." Wherefore, surely, it may be said that no play more curiously fathered has come to the attention of the American public during the season now under full headway.

To Arnold Daly of the American company falls the star role of this latest so-called realistic comedy of Irish life and character. Mr. Daly is seen in the breezy Munchausen role of Dr. Lucius O'Grady, a dispensary physician in the dilapidated village of Ballymoy, whose highly developed and keenly self-relished talent for making glowing fiction seem cold fact gives to the play its sole reason for being.

Into the squalid market square of this down-at-the-heels hamlet of Ballymoy there motors one fine day a certain rich American tourist, Horace P. Billing by name, capably played by Frederick Burton, who laughingly brings his machine to a full stop because of the justifying fact that a Ballymoy donkey, restfully released from the shafts of its own jaunting-car, claims a native priority in holding the right of way beside the town pump. The wealthy American is so humorously, yet a bit impatiently, impressed by the ragged sleepiness of Ballymoy and its people that he pledges himself to wake them up for their own good. Yielding instantly to the typical village curiosity concerning the object of his visit, he makes it known that he has come to arrange for the erection of a statue to the late Gen. John Regan, a former Ballymoyan whose name now shines with imperishable renown as that of "The Liberator of Bolivia," in whose alien soil the bones of this Irish lover of freedom have found their last resting place.

Naturally enough, the good though somnolent folk of Ballymoy are profoundly gratified by this announcement of a proposed memorial to so distinguished a Ballymoyan. The one and only drawback to their perfect satisfaction is that not a soul in all the village has ever heard of Gen. John Regan until this eventful day. Again quite naturally, they are reluctant to acknowledge that a son of Ballymoy though so celebrated in North and South America, is without fame and lacking even a known identity in his native town. This is embarrassing, to say the least, and the perplexed villagers are in a diverting plight of parochial pride marred by parochial ignorance concerning the Ballymoyan for whom their pridefulness is demanded. Then, to their fullest dismay, Horace P. Billing further announces that he is writing a biography of Gen. John Regan and that he will at once begin in Ballymoy the task of collecting complete data as to the early life of that great and good man.

It is here that Dr. Lucius O'Grady emerges upon the scene, fully equipped by nature and more than willing in soul to rescue his fellow-Ballymoyans from the civic shame into which their utter lack of information bearing upon Gen. John Regan threatens to plunge them.

Dr. Lucius O'Grady permits no pent-up Utica to confine his powers. If it is the full details of Gen. John Regan's boyhood days in Ballymoy that are desired by Millionaire Billing, and especially if the supplying of these details will lead, as promised, to the free spending of Billing's money in Ballymoy for the statue and the joyous celebration attendant upon its unveiling, these details shall be forthcoming.

And forthcoming they are. With almost inspired mendacity, Dr. Lucius O'Grady invents the early Ballymoy home of Gen. John Regan, pointing out the very place itself to the delighted Billing. As instantly does the latter bring forth his trusty camera and proceed to photograph this soon-to-be historic homestead, now the official quarters of the local Royal Irish Constabulary. But no, O'Grady tells Millionaire Billing—this house is not the actual birthplace of the immortal Regan. It is merely the shelter to which that hero's struggling parents removed shortly after the auspicious event of Gen. John Regan's nativity. The General's veritable birthplace, however, is still in existence. It is a little abandoned cabin in a now barren field, some distance from the village. Instantly, again, does Horace P. Billing arrange to be transported thither for purposes of photography and reverent musing. Are there any living kinsfolk of the dead hero? Surely, replies Dr. Lucius O'Grady, most fluent of liars. But there is only one, a grandniece, by name Mary Ellen, and she, such is life's irony, is a menial in Doyle's Hotel, where already Millionaire Billing, with Dr. O'Grady and other Ballymoyans, have enjoyed several companionable libations of Irish whisky or Dublin stout as their varying tastes preferred. Mary Ellen is brought out in all her picturesquely sloven garb of shreds and patches. She is an honest, slow-witted, unsuspecting damsel, with but one reply to any questioning—"I might," "It might," "He, she or they might," as occasion seemed to demand, being the invariable tenor of this reply. As a result, Mary Ellen splendidly qualifies as Gen. John Regan's grandniece, the sole survivor of the Regans in all Ballymoy. She, too, is photographed by the American worshiper at the Regan shrine.

Millionaire Billing is vastly tickled. He will draw his check for the cost of the statue. The details are arranged then and there. Dr. Lucius O'Grady will contrive to have the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland come to Ballymoy for the purpose of unveiling the statue. The Lord-Lieutenant never visits an Irish village on festal occasions without donating the sum of £300 for a public work, this being done to popularize his administration of Irish affairs. This, too, will mean more money for Ballymoy. Owing to Millionaire Billing's characteristic American haste, the statue must be completed within a fortnight. Dr. Lucius O'Grady will see that it is completed. He reasons in his own secret soul that the one prime necessity of the situation is to make sure of all the money in sight, thus letting Ballymoy in for a grand jollification, with rich pickings on the side.

And then sudden tragedy menaces Ballymoy and its people. Millionaire Billing has departed. Dr. Lucius O'Grady, busy with the details of the approaching celebration, had thought that Innkeeper Doyle would attend to the mere formality of obtaining Millionaire Billing's check for the cost of the statue and the festivities of its unveiling. Innkeeper Doyle had supposed that Dr. O'Grady surely would look after this detail. The check has not materialized.

The statue, a second-hand monument, rejected at the last moment by its original purchasers, has been ordered from a Dublin cousin of Innkeeper Doyle's, a dealer in tombstones. It had been cheaply priced and there would have been a neat little rake-off. But now all spells bankruptcy and shame. Not so—again rushes Dr. Lucius O'Grady to the rescue. From whatever sum the Lord Lieutenant may donate to Ballymoy, enough may be deducted to pay for the statue and its joyous unveiling. Ballymoy shall not be disgraced in the world's eyes.

Thenceforward the play's story fairly bristles with humorous complications. The Lord Lieutenant, cautiously investigating, learns that there is no proof that such a person as Gen. John Regan ever existed. He sends his aid-de-camp to Ballymoy with an indignant protest, announcing that he scornfully declines to preside at such a bogus function as has been proposed. By masterly lying, Dr. O'Grady gets the dull and pompous aid-de-camp into a false position where, before he knows what he is doing, he has pledged the Lord Lieutenant to contribute 300 pounds sterling to the village. And at this triumphant juncture Millionaire Billing himself returns.

He announces that he invented Gen. John Regan for the sole purpose of "waking up" the sleeping Ballymoyans. Thanks to Dr. Lucius O'Grady, the hoax has succeeded, although O'Grady, too, was among its innocent victims. And Millionaire Billing now is so delighted that he draws his own check for an amount that exceeds even Dr. O'Grady's wildest dreams. The statue to Gen. John Regan, an absurd bit of graveyard sculpture," already has been unveiled with tremendous acclaim.

Tha Slim Woman Is Winning

The day of the slim woman's triumph has arrived. "The thinner one is the more sytlish," say the dressmakers.

This would have been sad news for the fat woman a year ago. She would have had to try dieting or exercise. Nowadays, however, the woman who is too fat for the styles goes to a druggist and gets a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, one of which she takes after each meal and at bedtime, and so reduces her superfluous flesh quickly.

These tablets, being made in accordance with the famous prescription, are perfectly harmless, and they are, also, the most economical preparation a person can buy, for they cost only 75 cents a large case, one of which is frequently enough to start a person losing fat the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. Pretty nearly every druggist keeps this tablet in stock, but should yours be sold out, you can easily obtain a case by sending to the makers, the Marmola Company, Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich.—ADV.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.00.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF—ACTS AT ONCE

Don't pay 50 cents for inferior hair tonics—Use old, reliable, harmless "Danderine"—Delightful dressing, too.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as daudruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you eve rmade. Your hair will immediately take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.—ADV.

Dr. Montesseri Talks About Her Teaching Method

pupils to see with their fingers. By her method the delicacy of touch which all children have, and which is usually blunted after the age of 4, is retained for life and greatly developed. The most attention is given to developing the other senses by the use of toys and playthings. Without realizing that they are being taught, the children acquire co-ordination in their movements, lose awkwardness, clumsiness and uncouthness and acquire certainty and grace.

"A child's love of play," said Dr. Montessori, "is used for its self-development. He is studying and working without realizing it. He learns to write without copybook tedium. He learns to distinguish between rough and smooth by feeling little boards upon which are fastened alternate strips of rough and smooth paper. Afterward he plays with letters and numbers in rough and smooth paper. He presently finds himself tracing these letters and numbers and presently he can write."

By this method children of 4 years have learned to write in six weeks. After three months most of the little people of the "Home of Childhood" write very well. Learning to read is a game that the children play with delight. The prettiest toys of the school are shown to them. The name of every toy is written on a piece of paper, which is folded and placed in a bag. A child draws one of these bits of paper from the bag. If he can correctly pronounce the word written on it, he is allowed to play for the rest of the day with the toy that is named. Short phrases are taught by the use of a blackboard and by encouraging the children to carry on a conversation among themselves. By the Montessori methods even defectives and idiots have been taught to read and write.

The discipline and immobility of the ordinary school are banished. The children, Dr. Montessori said, are permitted as much freedom as compatible with the rights and comforts of others. Rewards and punishments are unknown because the children are constantly engaged in play, which is really work, that amuses and interests them. They do not complain, Dr. Montessori says, because they are always happy, always satisfied.

The principles of freedom and individual responsibility are carried to such a point that the child must extricate itself from its own mistakes and embarrassments, and is required to solve its own problems and puzzles. Independence and self-reliance are developed from the cradle age. The child is made to realize, through liberty, that whatever offends or annoys others, any sort of coarseness or bad manners, is not "good play."

Dr. Montessori said that in her "Houses of Childhood" the children are permitted to move about freely in a large room. They are not seated in stiff rows. They are not forbidden to talk. There is no paralyzing system of silence and forced study. She has gardens at the schools in which the children play and gradually learn the names of flowers and plants. And in this phase of the work, as in all others, the child is left to select for himself the particular flowers or plants he wishes to understand. The tastes of each mind are respected and encouraged.

Zoo as Magnet for Tourists, Is Dieckman's Dream

from going the way of all the rest of the Exposition wreckage.

"That cage has been the strongest argument for placing the zoo in central Forest Park, which is in other ways the logical and proper place for it.

"Cortlandt Harris, Frank Schwarz and Prof. Abbott of Washington University, did very valuable work in organizing the society, and in arousing the first public interest. It was Harris who got the first important donation for the zoo, a camel from the Shriners. He made a tour of inspection of the zoos of other cities, at his own expense.

Cageless Zoo Idea Is New in This Country

"THE cageless zoo plan, while it is new in this country, has been worked out successfully in Hamburg, where an admission fee is charged, and in Rome, where the animal collection is in a public garden. The Post-Dispatch has shown some good pictures of these European animal exhibitions.

"By a system of rock walls and ditches, barriers which will be almost invisible from a distance, we can let lions, tigers and leopards roam over a certain acreage, without the restraint of cages, and still without any danger to the people, or to the more peaceful animals on the tracts adjoining.

"No doubt it will look a little too realistic to some persons, until they get used to it, to see a tiger or a grizzly bear only a short distance away, with no visible barrier between; but this realism will add greatly to the attraction of the scene.

"The arrangement of the tract will include dry cavities where the animals can house themselves. Buildings, in most cases, will not be needed. Very few animals require artificial warmth—possibly giraffes do, but lions and other cat animals, in spite of their tropical origin, do not.

"The zoo will be practically an all-year affair. This has been tried in other places where the winters are as severe as here, and the mortality has been no higher than it is under the plan of keeping the tropical animals in a temperature of 60 degrees.

"The 70-acre zoo tract will extend from the present buffalo inclosure to a point behind the Art Museum, the bird cage being near the eastern end.

"I predict that, when the new zoo is open, there will be no difficulty about getting people to come and see it. The reason they do not visit the Art Museum now is not so much that Art Hill is inaccessible as it is that many persons don't care about art. The zoo will get the people into the park, without any car line or other new means of transportation. Incidentally, it will help the Art Museum attendance a lot.

"The Zoological Society will be kept up just the same. We plan to enlist the school children as members, and to use their dues in a fund for buying the animals which children like most. At present we are not asking for any gifts of animals, and we are deferring a good many offerings. Mr. Hagenbeck has promised to bring a lion cub when he comes in January, and we will find some way to take care of it."

U. S. A. MAJOR ACCUSED OF INSUBORDINATION

Charges Against Officer Made After Two Weeks Service at Embassy in Russia.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Charges of insubordination and disrespect to Charles S. Wilson, first secretary of the American Embassy at St. Petersburg have been made against Maj. Charles B. Hagadorn, Twenty-third Infantry, now on duty at the War College here.

Maj. Hagadorn some weeks ago at his own request was relieved from duty as military attache at St. Petersburg, after having been there two weeks. Subsequently that order was revoked, but Maj. Hagadorn left St. Petersburg and reported in Washington.

BISHOP DIVORCE FINAL

Banker Wins Fight for Absolute Separation From Wife.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A final decree divorcing Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop and James Cunnigham Bishop, a New York banker, was signed today.

Six weeks or so ago the time limit expired for making Mrs. Bishop's interlocutory decree final and she was still undecided whether to have this done. Bishop successfully appealed to the courts to compel her to take out a final decree. It was said Mrs. Bishop held off in order to prevent her husband from remarrying.

BACKACHE IS A DANGER SIGNAL

Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatism and Serious Diseases Follow.

The kidneys get clogged up, the same as the bowels do. Then they become sluggish, and only filter or strain out a part of the waste or poisonous matter, all the rest remaining in the blood and poisoning the system.

As soon as you notice the first indications of backache, pains in the sides, or aches around the kidneys, take a little Croxone three times a day and end these troubles before they become more serious.

There is no more effective remedy known for the prompt relief and cure of kidney, bladder troubles and rheumatism, than Croxone. It soaks right into the kidneys through the walls and lining; cleans out the clogged up pores; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles, and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter the poison from the blood and drive it out of the system.

A few days' use of this new scientific preparation is often all that is ever needed to end the worst backache, or kidney troubles.

You will find Croxone entirely different from other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it should fail in a single case.—ADV.

Thousands of Women Now Tint Their Hair

Beautiful Hair Is Woman's Chief Charm. The Most Glorious Brown (Any Shade) Can Be Easily and Instantly Obtained With Mrs. Potter's Walnut Tint Hair Stain.

SEND FOR TRIAL PACKAGE.

Even though a mask be placed over a woman's eyes she will still be just as fascinating if she has beautiful hair. Gray, streaked or faded hair will ruin the appearance of any woman, no matter how attractive she may otherwise be. Many thousands of women now tint their hair to any shade desired by using Mrs. Potter's Walnut Tint Hair Stain. This preparation is most easily and quickly applied in the privacy of your own room. Results are always sure and uniform—no previous experience whatever is necessary, and the tint can not rub or wash off nor can it be detected. This method is very far superior to the old way of using henna, sage or old fashioned "hair dyes"—as henna invariably turns the hair red and "dyes" are not always satisfactory.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut Tint Hair Stain is also most excellent for tinting switches and all artificial hair. Any shade from light golden brown to darkest brown or black may be easily obtained.

Send 25 cents and the coupon for a generous trial package which will be mailed you in a plain wrapper.

All druggists sell Mrs. Potter's Walnut Tint and the price is only $1.00.

For the trial package you will have to send direct to Mrs Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., [illegible] Groton Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CHRISTMAS POSTAL STRIKE IN BRITAIN TO BE DELAYED

Conference Takes Action That It Is Thought Will Postpone Walkout.

VOTE WILL BE TAKEN

Employes Seek to Make Fight for More Salary a Political Issue.

LEICESTER, England, Dec. 6.—The threatened strike at Christmas of the Government's 100,000 postal and telegraph employes will probably be averted, but the movement will only be postponed as a result of the action of a conference today in which 200 delegates, representing 22,000 members of the postal organizations, participated.

The delegates adopted a resolution rejecting the report of the Government commission. This favored a slight increase in the salaries of the employes. At the same time they pledged themselves to push their original demand for a 15 per cent increase of wages throughout the service.

The strike proposal was debated at length and the meeting finally decided to leave the decision to a general vote of the members of the organizations.

Federation Is Favored.

A proposal that the postal organizations should unite with the miners, the railway men and the transport workers, was discussed and met with much favor among the delegates.

The conference decided to oppose the Government candidates at all parliamentary elections until the demands of the postal employes are met, and the delegates decided to select four candidates to contest constituencies on the platform of improving the conditions under which the postal employes work.

"We are very near a parting of the ways," said Chairman McCarthy, in opening the conference. "I hope sincerely the Government will not persist in forcing our hands. We are going forward unflinchingly to our goal. I ask you to weigh well your words and your decisions and when the time comes to translate those words and those decisions into action and to act with swiftness, determination and courage."

There has been much agitation among the postal employes for a general strike at Christmas, while the postal work is heaviest, and the action of the conference makes necessary a general vote of the employes on the strike question and it is doubtful whether a strike can be organized in time to become effective by Christmas time.

Aid to Unions Sought.

The Postmaster-General, Herbert Samuel, in his last interview with the leaders of the postal employes' organizations threatened that if there was a strike all the employes who quit their work would be permanently discharged, but the men hope to be able to make a political issue out of their demands and to gain the support of the large trade unions.

The Government is making tentative arrangements to enlist the services of military telegraphers to take the place of strikers, in case of need, as the French Government did in the great railroad strike in that country in October, 1910.

The postal employes' unions are 15 in number and had a membership of 97,200 at the last report. They comprise employes of the postal, telegraphic and telephonic services, all of which are controlled by the Government.

THROUGH SERVICE ASKED ON UNION CAR LINE

West End Business Men's Association Appeals to State Utilities Board.

Interference with continuous traffic on the Union avenue division of the United Railways system at Bircher street, while a viaduct is being built over the Terminal Belt line, has caused the West End Business Men's Association to file a formal complaint with the State Public Service Commission.

The viaduct is being built to eliminate a dangerous grade crossing in North St. Louis, and it is estimated that a year will be required to finish the work.

Meanwhile cars run only to either end of the construction work and passengers receive car to car transfers and have to walk around the viaduct, a distance of nearly half a mile, before resuming their journey, the complaint says.

The commission is asked to compel the United Railways to so reroute its cars through private property to avoid this delay and inconvenience, or establish a temporary bus line to carry passengers from car to car. If neither of these plans is deemed feasible, it is asked that the company be required to build comfortable waiting rooms at either end of the viaduct.

Irrigation Bond Interest Taxable.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Interest on irrigation bonds is subject to the income tax law, according to a Treasury decision today, which holds that so-called assessment districts are not political subdivisions or public utilities within the meaning of the law. Furniture can be bought in many stores, it is true—but nowhere else will you find such attractive combination offers, low prices and pleasing terms as this store presents. Take this offering for example—the China Closet alone is worth more than we ask the entire outfit—an example of the unusual values we are offering our patrons in these columns every week — it will certainly pay you to watch for our announcements and take advantage of them.

For Several Weeks

Are You Awake to Your Opportunities?

Many people have such attractive homes because they watch our announcements and take advantage of the special values we offer from week to week. Their income may be no greater than yours—their expenses just as high as yours—yet they have far more home comforts than you, and the only reason is that they profit by the opportunities that we offer. Hundreds of such patrons will grasp this opportunity tomorrow—they will be glad to profit by it—and it would pay you to do so, too. Remember, $1.00 is all the initial payment that is required.

A Combination Bookcase

The Construction

This Combination Bookcase is made of selected oak throughout—it is 72 inches high, 37 inches wide and is set off with attractive 12x12-inch pattern plate beveled mirror—the Bookcase is roomy, has adjustable shelves and dust-proof glass door—the Writing Desk is nicely arranged with drawer and pigeonholes as shown in the picture—and has large compartments underneath.

Guaranteed Construction

We secured these Bookcases from one of the best-known makers in the Middle West—and we have their written assurance that we can guarantee these Bookcases to our trade—so confident are they of the high quality of their product that they offer to replace any Combination Bookcase that should prove defective in any way—and this guarantee is not a temporary one, but holds good definitely—for as they say, 'Their Furniture Is Made to Last.''

The 20 Books

With each Combination Bookcase we include 20 standard cloth-bound books—these books are printed from large type, on good paper, neatly bound in cloth covers and the titles are lettered in gold. The stories are written by the world's greatest authors and will give the whole family clean, interesting, stirring and wholesome reading for many months to come.

Note the Value

This Combination Bookcase by itself is well worth $18.50—the books would sell regularly at 75 cents apiece, which would make them worth $15.00—in other words, we are offering you a $33.50 value for $17.50—and if that isn't a bargain, you never saw one.

The Terms Are Easy

You don't need to bring a lot of ready cash when you buy here—notwithstanding the low price we name—we offer this Combination Bookcase and set of books for only $1.00 cash and $1.00 a month—and you can figure for yourself how long a time this gives you to pay for the outfit. COL. CULPEPER'S RUN FROM OFFICE

The Painful, Though Happily Ended, Courtship of Pevely Sadders, His Hired Man, Is the Only Thing in Human Experience That Compares to the Gallant Old Southerner's Effort to Dodge the Political Honors His Admirers Would Heap on Him.

By LEWIS B. ELY

(Copyright, 1913.)

YESTERDAY I drove out to see Col. Meriwether Carter Culpeper, whom his friends call Merry for short. He was on his porch pulling a thorn out of a hound's foot. This done, the brute got up and sniffed me while the Colonel greeted me warmly.

"Colonel," said I, when we had tilted our chairs against the rail and the hound had sprawled at his feet, "you are the picture of contentment here. Isn't this seat here on your porch better than a seat in the United States Senate. What possesses you to leave all this to get out and run for office?"

"Run for office!" he exclaimed so explosively that the hound gave a short bark. "Run for office! I'm not running for office—I'm running away from office. Office is running for me!"

I quietly removed my hat. The hound grinned.

"Colonel," said I, "you are the first Missourian since Thomas Benton who dared to talk to his constituents like a statesman. You defy them."

"And all of you newspapers can go to hell, too! But of course I mean no personal discourtesy to you," he added.

"Thanks, Colonel. But do you seriously mean that sometimes office actually seeks the man?"

"She has camped on my trail and I've done nothing but dodge her for ten years," said he. "She's followed me everywhere on top o' dirt. She's run me over the sea, pursued me under the earth, chased me through the air. She's hunted me back and forth till I've made the geography look like a patch of heel tracks—she's right at my back and coming, always. Yet I don't want to seem an immodest man."

"You don't," I assured him. "Only an extremely modest man would run away from honor and distinction. In fact your modesty seems to me almost abnormal, if you'll permit me to say so."

"Yes," he assented, "the way I've run from her reminds me of Adonis—except that the star-eyed goddess didn't give him such a long run. My running is more like the way my hired man, Pevely Sadders, ran away from his Venus. * * * Oh, Pevely!" the Colonel called. "Pevely—oh, Pee-e-vely!"

PRESENTLY the man-of-all-work slouched around the corner of the house.

"Pevely," commanded Col. Culpeper, "take a seat and tell us about how you ran away from your just deserts. Here's a cigar."

Pevely squatted on a mess of trace chains at the end of the porch, removed his flopping hat which was an old one of his employer's, put the cigar in the hat, and replaced the hat, then spat copiously of tobacco juice, squinted reflectively at the spot whereat he had spat, and began in a nasal whine that resembled the bleat of a sheep:

"It all come about through some feller's stealin' a preacher's white mule down in Taney County. I never done it, but they ketched me and th'owed me in jail at Protem. In them days the jail was kep' by a ol' feller with a gal of marriageable age about thirty-five, I expect she was, and she looked at me like she'd been waitin' all them years fer me. She was awful ugly—awful. Though she had a kind heart. And she took a terrible shine to me."

"You couldn't blame her for that, could you?" whispered Col. Culpeper to me. Pevely Sadders appeared not to have heard, and resumed:

"I don't recollect how it begun, whether I was makin' love to her or she to me, but directly I got a notion that love-makin' would be the quickest way to git out of jail and escape my trial. So one evenin' in a embrace I stole the keys from her belt, and the next mornin' when she come to look in my cage she found her love had conside'bly flown.

"I tromped across country so fast that in two days I had sore hocks and ringbone spavin, fer I knowed what kind of a female she was—the follerin' kind. I was sick at heart and starvin' fer food and I was glad to git a job workin' a balloon. The feller that owned it was doin' the county fairs and the man that had worked the balloon fer him had just died of a hard fall. The dead feller's tights jest fit me; a green one on my right leg and yaller on my left. I looked tolable purty, I expect, with a little white feather in my cap and a whole lot of medals pinned all over my red undershirt."

"The sort of looking fellow that a girl would follow," commented the Colonel, but Pevely Sadders ignored the interruption, continuing:

"THEY had me billed to go up in a balloon a thousan' feet and then drop off in a big ambre'ly fixin', and I was to git fifteen dollars fer makin' the trip. Well, I ought to 'a' got my money before I started because I never did come back. Somebody come runnin' into the crowd jest as I left the ground—she had nigh ketched up with me, the gal from the jail, and she hollered up after me,

'Pevely Sadders gol dern yer ornery soul, I'll git you yit!'"

Pevely sighed and his watery blue eyes took on a vacant expression that suggested a long flight through space. Then he frowned at an evidently painful memory.

"I never stopped till the gal [illegible] down in Texas," he said, "and then I lit in the middle of a nigger camp meetin'. They thought I was ol' Satan with my green and yaller legs, and you never see sech a scatteration! * * * All the niggers run but one. He was a big lame nigger and he come at me with his crutch. I tore a leg off a table and we fit it out, that nigger and me, till we laid one another cold. I woke up fust and got away and hid till nightfall. Then I had to steal a suit o' clothes. It jest goes to show how one thing leads to another. The Sheriff called out some of his friends and tried to round me up. I got lost in a swamp and went hungry two or three days, and finally come out on Red River up along Denison. I had to borry a boat and I worked up towards Muskogee. I felt that that gal was after me somewheres and I was gittin' terrible mixed in my directions. If I had of knowed which way I was goin' I wouldn't of went that way at all—it was up towards ol' Mizzoura and Taney County. But I found out where I was at after while and made out o' there. I come across a feller floatin' a barge down the Arkansaw and went with him. When we struck the Mississip I left him and got work on a packet. Now, I says, I'm goin' to enjy myse'f. But I might of knowed they was no rest fer the wicked. You see that gal had figgered it out that I loved the river, so she had come over and took work on the first packet that come along. That very evenin' after my labors I was settin' by the deck-rail, lookin' up at the stars and singin' ol' Dan Tucker—when a voice I knowed mighty well said right behind me: 'Pevely Sadders, seems to me like I heard that song in the jail at Protem before you went back on me!' * * * Well I sot thar numb fer a minute, she standin' over me. Then before she could say another word I give one spring and jumped clair over the rail and down into the river. I expect I never come up fer fifty feet and when I did I was swimmin' fer shore like a short-haired dog in December—but I could hear her yell acrost the water, 'Pevely Sadders, gol dern your ornery soul, I'll git you yit!'

"FER two weeks after that I never hardly stopped for meals, I paid no 'tention to signals, and never slowed down for cows on the track as I footed it down South on the ties. After while I turned across and got into the Panhandle country and I settled down and begun to eat and pick up, when one night I met a feller that had the same name as her'n. He wa'n't no relation at all, but jest the name scared me, so I lit out agin. I wa'n't strong enough to do nothin' but keep on a-goin' from wharever I happened to be at. Once I got so shamed o' myse'f that I made up my mind to turn back and face her—but I lost my nerve. Why, sometimes I would start up out of sleep thinkin' I heard her voice. I hit the road like a reg'lar hobo. I rid on the blind baggage mostly. Law! When I could sorter feel her gainin' on me I often wished fer another balloon!

"In Southwest Texas she got wind o' me and I got wind o' her. She was workin' in the kitchen of an eatin' house, and a feller that I told my troubles to, he went and told her where I was at, about nine miles down the road at a water tank. That was a fool trick tellin' him my troubles. He come back from the station one evenin' and tol' me he had jest met that woman I had tol' him about. I jumped on the fust freight going away from thar, and, the crew bein' friendly, I rid up inside, in a boxcar towards the injine. At the fust stop we come to I was standin' in the door lookin' out at the place when along come that voice I had dreamed about, sayin', 'Pevely Sadders, was you figgerin' on gittin' off yere?' and she flopped he[illegible] up beside me. I was so flabbergasted I like [illegible] fell over backwards.

"D'rectly the train started and she says to me kind o' ca'm and reasonable, 'Pevely,' she says, 'why cain't you and me git along better, anyway?'

"'To tell you the truth,' I says, 'it's because you ain't my style.'

"'Well, Pevely,' says she, 'people oughtn't to be so dang pertickeler about style. It ain't style I'm after,' she says, 'it's jestice. And when I'm boun' to have a thing I'm boun' to have it; that's all. Now you was sweet on me, you hoss thief you! You come a-spoonin' aroun' me and stole my keys—and the sooner you quit this foolishness and settle down and git married the better it'll be fer both of us.'

"THE train was goin' 30 miles an hour. She seen me lookin' sorter wishful out the door, and she says, 'Pevely, I jest natu'lly love you so much, if you jump I'm a-goin' to jump along with you. The sensible thing is to stay on till we git to the next town and go and hunt up a preacher.'

"I said nothin', but jest set thar and figgered out a scheme. I remembered I had saw a Winchester rifle in the corner of the ingine cab. If I could slip up to the ingine and lay holt of that rifle I could make the ingineer cut the ingine loose from the train and run away from it and her—if she'd only stay whar she was.

"'Gal,' I says, 'let's climb out on top of the car, and if you'll set up thar and wait fer me I'll go up and talk to my friend the ingineer, about gittin' married, and see what he says.'

"'No,' she says, 'I'll go along, too, and see what he says.'

"Then it jest struck me to pet her up a little. 'Honey,' I says, 'if you was to try to walk on the tops of the cars to the injine you might fall between 'em and break yore neck. That would spile yore weddin', Honey.'

"Well, gentlemen, that Honey what I give 'er jest struck 'er like a shock. She wilted and looked at me like a dove and says 'All right, Peev.'

So we clumb up on top and I left her settin' thar and I went forward. I was a desperate man and life didn't mean nothin' to me. Anyhow I never was skeered o' men. I sneaked over the tender and jumped into the ingine cab and grabbed the rifle and covered the ingineer and fireman—'In Humanity's name,' I says, 'stop this train!'

"The train stopped with a jolt that must of well nigh shooken the gal off that car back thar.

"'Fireman,' I says, 'climb back over the tender and pull out the couplin' pin!'

"He done so. Then to the ingineer I says, 'Now start up agin and we'll leave 'em!'

"We pulled away and the gal come runnin' forward. As the gap widened between us she fired after me them same words, 'Pevely Sadders, gol dern your onery soul I'll git you yit!'

"'And you'll git 10 years for this,' says the ingineer.

"'I'll take it cheerful,' I says, 'but you can let me off up the road a piece and go back and git yore ol' train.'

"Which he done. I took the shells out o' the rifle and give it back to him, afore we parted. I lit out across country.

"T'WAN'T no use. In three hours a Sheriff's posse come ridin' out from somewhere and the Sheriff th'owed a rope over me. 'Fer one thing,' says he, 'thar's a lady in town, wants to see you.' He towed me back to the town and thar she was settin' on a box at the depot. The Sheriff th'owed her his end o' the rope.

"'What are you goin' to do about it, gal?' I says. 'Are you goin' to brand me like a steer?'

"'No, Pevely,' she says, 'I'm jest goin' to refresh yore mem'ry. You recollect whar I fust seen you and what you was in fer? You recollect what was missin' in the neighborhood when they took you up? You know, too, what these Texas fellers does to a hoss thief when they git a rope aroun' his neck. I ain't aimin' to tell 'em what I know about you unless the wuss comes to the wuss and you won't do right by me. But if you ain't ready for the parson yit, why you better git ready fer the undertaker. But, Pevely,' she says all sweet and tender, 'you and me can git along all right, because I'm jest natu'll [illegible] terrible attached to you and you'll git right fond o' me if you'll only give yourse'f a chance.'

"'Well,' I says, 'git yore ol' parson. I'd a whole lot rather git married, as to git hung any day.'

"So that's how she caught me," Pevely concluded, "and, gentlemen, you may be surprised, but me and her's been livin' together for about 15 year now—and she ain't so damn bad after all!" Pevely left us.

"Colonel Culpeper," I remarked after a long pause, "it may be the same way with you. Office is likely to get you if she keeps after you—the senatorship, you know—and you may not find her so bad after you get used to her."

"She'll have to go some if she catches me," replied Col. Culpeper reflectively. He seemed to be addressing the hound at his feet. The hound cocked an eye at him, rakishly elevated one ear, lolled its tongue out in a panting grin and pounded the porch floor with its tail [illegible] times.

SYMPHONY SOLOS BY OWN MEMBERS ALL THIS WEEK

Innovation Which Brings Recognition to Members Arouses Sharp Interest.

IDA DELLEDONNE TODAY

Max Steindel and Sarli Will Share Program With Herma Menth, Pianist.

For the first time in its history the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will carry the bulk of the solo work for the three concerts this week. At the "pop" concert this afternoon Mme. Ida Delledonne, harpist of the orchestra and its only woman member, will be the soloist, playing a composition of her husband, Domenico Delledonne, who belongs to the bassoon section of the orchestra. At the same concert one of the numbers will have 'cello and clarinet obligati by Max Steindel and Toni P. Sarli, respectively, and in the regular Symphony concerts Friday and Saturday Max Steindel will be a soloist, enjoying that distinction jointly with Herma Menth, the Austrian pianiste.

The exploitation of members of the orchestra at the "pop" concerts is not new, but never before has a local musician been accorded the honor of a solo at a regular Symphony concert.

The St. Louis orchestra is alone in this regard. All the other big orchestras follow the custom of giving their first 'cello and their concert master regular symphony concerts, and the only reason this custom has lain in abeyance here is the proverbial slowness of St. Louis to recognize excellence in its midst.

Executive Committee Opposed.

The Executive Committee of the Symphony Society always has opposed any effort on the part of Conductor Zach to honor his own men in this way because the members know the city and believed a local artist would fail to interest Symphony audiences. The face that more interest is being manifested in the Symphony concerts of this week than in any that have preceded them is proof that the orchestra and its men are coming into their own in St. Louis, say local musicians, and augurs an eventual dissipation of this deep-seated feeling of distrust of local ability, in music at least.

Steindel is not a St. Louisan, however. He came here two years ago to join the orchestra after a series of musical successes second to none in the history of the art. He with his father, Albin Steindel, and his two older brothers, Ferdinand and Albin Jr., composed the famous Steindel Quartet that was the artistic sensation of Europe for 10 years.

Young Max was only 7 years of age when he went on his first concert tour with the quartet and the others were eight and nine. A special 'cello had to be made for him as he was too small to manage the usual sized instrument. On this tour each of the children and their artistic father were decorated by Queen Victoria of England, and by King Leopold of Belgium, as well as several lesser royalties, and critics everywhere regarded the quartet as the best chamber music organization in Europe.

Made Solo Concert Tour.

Max came to America to join his uncle, Bruno Steindel, who is first 'cello in the Thomas Orchestra of Chicago, two years ago, later making a solo concert tour with great success. Both his brothers are in America, Ferdinand being an orchestra conductor in Bismarck, S. D., and Albin having joined the first violins of the Thomas Orchestra. Max is leader of the 'cello section of the St. Louis orchestra.

At the concerts of Friday and Saturday he will play "Variations sur un theme rococo" for violoncello, by Tschaikowsky, a composition which won him a record-breaking ovation in Leipzig 10 years ago. Steindel is the youngest member of the orchestra, having celebrated his twenty-second birthday last week.

Herma Menth, the other soloist for the two concerts, is making her first St. Louis appearance on that occasion. She is regarded as one of the leading young pianistes of Europe, and already has made two successful concert tours in America. She is especially noted for her interpretation of Chopin and Liszt. In the St. Louis concerts she will play the Liszt concerto in E flat, No. 1.

The complete program follows:

Soloists—Herma Menth, pianist; H. Max Steindel, violoncellist.
Rimsky-Korsakow—Suite ......Scheherezade
Liszt......Concerto for piano No. 1, in E flat
Richard Strauss—Love scene from Feuersnot
Tschaikowsky—Variations for violoncello on a Rococo theme. Op. 33.
Chabrier—Overture ....Gwendoline

The program for the "Pop" concert this afternoon is:

Mme. Ida Delledonne, harpist.
Overture to Le Roi l'a Dit ....Delibes
Waltz—Love Whispers (first time).....Andre
Symphonic poem—Danse Macabre— Saint Saens
Harp solo—The Rivulet ......D. Delledonne
Overture—Der Freischutz ....Von Weber
Under the Lindens ....Massenet
From Scenes Alsaciennes; obligato, Mr. Steindel, cello, Mr. Sarli, clarinet.
Prelude (by request) ....Rachmaninow
Waltz—Bad'ner Mad'ln ....Komzak

U. S. Aids Kentucky Banks.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 6.—The United States Treasury Department today extended for 90 days a loan of $275,000 made to three Lexington banks out of the national crop-moving fund. The request for the extension was made because the tobacco crop, the principal produce of Central and Eastern Kentucky, is being moved slowly. About 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco will be handled in Kentucky.

The Christmas Piano Store

A Truly Artistic Player-Piano

Very Moderately Priced

THIS season of Christmas purchasing lends itself particularly to the educational phases of Vandervoort's New Piano Salon. To have considered the purchase of a piano or player-piano, of new name and fame, at economical prices would scarcely appeal to the public under most circumstances. But these player-pianos, which bear a name which means something definite in the mind of the public, and sold by a store whose word-of-quality has been impressed by years of steadfast dependability, is another matter altogether.

Vandervoort Player-Pianos at $410 to $455 afford very remarkable values to Christmas purchasing people. They are made especially for this store, and guaranteed to us and to you by the manufacturers. The piano itself is a thoroughly good instrument, excellently built throughout of finest materials by expert piano makers. In tone, touch and action it is exceptional. In durability, no piano can surpass it.

Into this piano has been installed a marvelous player action which permits anyone to play by means of the music roll. Every shade of expression is at your instant command.

This "player" part is used in player-pianos which cost upward of $500 in every section of America.

Vandervoort's Easy Terms of Purchase

$10 first payment puts this player-piano in your home. ($15 for the $455 instrument.) $2 per week pays the balance.

You are allowed a 30 days' trial privilege and a one year's exchange privilege.

You are given a ten years' guarantee signed by both the manufacturers and ourselves. And in the event of the purchaser's death all further payments will be immediately canceled and the instrument will become the property of the purchaser's heirs, free, clear.

This Player-Piano for Your Home This Christmas

To sit at a piano and play perhaps the first music you played in your life. To know that it is really you who is playing—to put into the music that rhythm and meaning which you alone know! Life will have a new beginning.

Vandervoort's has made this possible to you. There are other player-pianos here besides the "Vandervoort." The Chickering, the Vose, the Fischer, the Haines Bros., the Milton, the Stratford—any one of which may be purchased on proportionately convenient terms.

Player-Piano Music Rolls, 5c Per Exchange

Pay us $1.00 each for Music Rolls, regardless of list prices, and then you may exchange as often as you please at a cost of 5c per roll per exchange. Popular music may be had as soon as published.

CHECK the measurements—leg room, depth and width of seats—with those of any car selling from $1000 up to $1400—you'll find this is a "big" car in inches as well as "immense" in efficiency. Maxwell 25

Extravagant Assertion

WHO WAS the "biggest" general in the world? Napoleon, he conquered Europe—and he was five-feet-three!

WHO WAS the "biggest" statesman in the world? Bismarck, he built the German Empire—and he was six-foot-four!

SO YOU SEE MERE SIZE DOESN'T determine who nor what is biggest. It is achievement that confers that title "biggest."

WE MAINTAIN that the biggest automobile in the world is the one that does the biggest things—and does bigger things than a bigger car can do at the same cost.

AND THAT CONFERS THE TITLE on the Maxwell "25," which sells for $750, and which, though of ample capacity for carrying five full-grown adults anywhere any car will go, yet weighs only 1650 pounds.

THIS CAR CANNOT BE CALLED either small or large—in inches. It is neither a Napoleon nor a Bismarck in physical proportions—but is a combination of both in efficiency and—in competition.

IT IS THE MOST FORMIDABLE rival other cars have ever encountered.

ITS CONQUESTS have embraced the territory formerly held by both the very cheap, and the overly large, underly-efficient cars, selling for $1000 and more.

IT CONQUERS because it meets the needs and the ideas of the majority of informed buyers. It appeals at the same time to the logic of common sense and the sense of the beautiful.

ITS BEAUTY is shown in looks and in performance—handsome is as handsome does—and handsome as is.

THE BUYER WHO must take a peep into the purse before buying, here finds a car within his reach and made to his heart's desire.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the buyer who is easily able to pay the first cost, but whose experience has taught him to look still more closely into maintenance cost afterward, finds in this 1650-pound, five-passenger car the one he has been looking for—because it will do all any 2600-pound car will do—and more—and at half the upkeep cost—or less.

COST OF UPKEEP increases as the square of the weight, the tire makers tell us. And Standard Oil dividends confirm the statement.

CUT THE WEIGHT IN TWO and you divide the upkeep cost by four! Get that—it's the kernel.

BUT WE'RE A NATION of aristocrats—no matter how we protest we're democratic, we are aristocrats. Every American deems himself of the Royal line. We have pride, plus—more per capita than any other people in the world.

AND SO IT HAPPENS that your American demands more than mere utility in the car he buys—he wants style as well as size.

A FEW YEARS AGO a lot of misguided persons had a brilliant idea. They maintained that the "farmer's car" had not yet been built.

WHEN ASKED TO SPECIFY, they said the farmer's car should look like a farm wagon or a dump cart—or some other familiar vehicle.

SO THEY MADE A FEW of those ridiculous, high-wheeled, air-cooled "putt-putters," and gleefully invited the farmer to come and see.

FARMERS DIDN'T COME—they were too busy inspecting the latest improvements in real automobiles. So the high-wheeler soon went out of business.

THAT PROMPTED US one day to make a little investigation and to compile a few statistics—and what do you think?—

WE FOUND that, contrary to the prevalent supposition—the best markets for second-hand cars were not what the blase call the "backwoods and the prairies," but Broadway and 42d, New York; and Michigan Avenue, north of 30th and south of Congress, Chicago!

"ALL THE RUBES LIVE ON MANHATTAN," once said a famous showman. That was more than half true—the other 49 per cent are portioned out to Chicago and other large centers. There live the Four-flushers, the Johnny-speeders and the remittance boys.

MAXWELL MOT

(INCORPORATED)

DEALERS Some makers demand exclusive representation. Still others insist on your taking on a full line in order to get one salable model. We don't do either. Don't need to. We don't believe in "strong arm" methods, nor will we ask you to drop another make of car you have contracted for. We welcome competition. You can stand this car on the floor beside any other at any price—and the Maxwell will get the lion's share.

omobile in the World

—Let's Analyze It

OF IE FREAKS—the experiments, the unfit—there narket. But to the up-to-date farmers of the East, South you cannot sell any but the latest model, made onsible concern—nor to the business men living out-[illegible] zones of the big cities.

sign of this car we set as our standard a car not only the utility, efficiency and economy, but of style and well. Because this car must appeal to those who siness men and successful farmers—who have pride are entitled to it.

DRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS is a lot of money to people—and we designed this car to meet the needs ands of a lot of people.

AKE A LOT of them, to make them at all, at the price.

PLE HAVE A RIGHT TO EXPECT, in the car they thing of which they may be proud, as well as one perform the service.

NO EASY TASK. In fact, it was—it had proven to possible task to other makers, other designers.

DER FOR A MOMENT. It's child's play to design a $5000 car. Mechanically the latter presents no at all—for the engineer can use any material and pounds as he pleases to achieve his results—the buyer car will not only pay the price but pay the "freight" tire and other maintenance bills.

LD'S PLAY as compared with the task set our en- nd metallurgists—to design a touring car of ample to take five full grown adults anywhere, over any comfort.

it will withstand the usage and neglect such a car re- the hands of the average owner who drives—but ne or inclination to care for it—himself.

at the tire bills and the maintenance cost will, like ase price, be within the reach of that "lot" of people t an automobile should be an economy, not an ex- ce.

AND FINALLY, of external design to conform to the current mode of "streamline body," and finished and upholstered so that the wife and daughters will be just as proud of the appearance as the owner is of its performance.

THERE WAS A TASK to test the skill and the experience and knowledge of the best corps of engineers, and the learning of the best metallurgists known to this industry.

AND THIS $750 MAXWELL IS THE RESULT.

HAS IT OCCURRED TO YOU that in the entire history of this industry this is the first time that feat has been accomplished? Well, it is.

AND WE CONTEND it is still impossible to any other concern—any other organization.

WE WERE PECULIARLY SITUATED—ideally equipped to do it. Had no old models to get rid of—none with which this would compete. We had the plants, the capital, the talent and—the experience. You can't beat that combination.

NOW, READ THIS—it's what you are most vitally interested in—deliveries.

WE ARE MAKING 50 CARS PER DAY of this model. That isn't a circumstance, of course. Demand is for five times as many even at this season. Spring demand—we don't dare contemplate.

OUR PLANTS ARE BIG ENOUGH to make 300 per day—and that is what we are preparing for. But special machinery can't be made over night nor produced by necromancy. So we can't hope to reach a production of more than 200 per day before February at earliest.

SO YOUR MOVE IS—to see the car at once—your nearest dealer. Have a thorough demonstration. Talk to your acquaintance who has been fortunate enough to get one. He'll say more than our modesty permits—more than you'd credit from an over-enthusiastic maker.

THEN DON'T DELAY—get your order in. Pay a deposit to guarantee delivery and to assure it at a time when others will be offering premiums. Then you'll be able to rest easy in the knowledge that you've secured the greatest automobile value ever known.

SIX LITTLE SOCIETY GIRLS TO SELL THEIR SEWING FOR POOR

Bazar at Reyburn Home Next Saturday Will Provide Holiday Cheer for Many.

Six little philanthropists, each of whom will be making her debut in society within a few years, are completing arrangements for their fourth annual bazar, at which they sell their own handiwork to raise funds which they divide equally and spend for Christmas baskets for poor families of their own selection. The bazar will be from 10:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. next Saturday at the residence of Mrs. Amedee V. Reyburn, 4634 Lindell boulevard.

Society women and their children are the customers. They come in their motor cars, buy the handicraft at moderate prices, and depart, happy to assist a charitable undertaking.

None can recall how the idea originated. Four years ago six little girls spent all their spare time sewing and gathering articles to be sold at a bazar. The proceeds, usually about $125, are divided among the six girls. Then each girl seeks poor families upon whom to shower a Christmas remembrance. Sometimes charitable organizations supply the names of needy families, sometimes the girls themselves learn of worthy cases.

After the bazar each girl visits the needy families on her Christmas list, ascertaining their needs. On Christmas day each little girl supervises the delivery of the gifts, which consist of food, clothing, coal and toys. As many as four families, with eight or 10 persons in each, are cared for by each girl.

The six girls participating in the bazar are Elizabeth Benoist, 14 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Benoist of 4931 Berlin avenue; Marian Franciscus, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Franciscus of 10 Lenox place, Julia Papin, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Papin of 4642 Berlin avenue; Juliette Reyburn, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amedee V. Reyburn; Marion Bridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson E. Bridge of 23 Westmoreland place, and Irwin Hayward, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Hayward of 4637 Berlin avenue.

The bazar has been held at the residences of four of the girls. After the sixth bazar, the selling mart will shift back to the residence where it first was held. Last year it was at the Howard Benoist home.

ST. LOUIS OFFICIALS WILL STUDY GARBAGE QUESTION

Kinsey and Talbert Depart to Visit "Piggeries" of Philadelphia and Other Plants.

The "piggeries" of Philadelphia, where garbage is reduced with the aid of swine, and the traffic regulations and methods of collecting garbage, rubbish and ashes, at New York, Washington and Philadelphia, will be studied by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements and Street Commissioner Talbert this week.

The St. Louis officials departed yesterday to attend a convention of practical road builders at Philadelphia, which meets for four days this week. They also will study various phases of municipal government in the three other Eastern cities mentioned before returning.

Congressman L. C. Dyer has invited the officials to be his guest for two days in Washington while they are inspecting the city plants and systems. In addition to the "piggeries," Philadelphia has a modern reduction plant that is rated highly by experts.

DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" IS BEST IF HEADACHY, CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS.

If you're headachy, constipated, bilious or stomach is disordered and you want to enjoy the nicest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced, take a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" tonight and in the morning all the poison, bile and clogged-up waste will gently move out of the system without griping and you will feel splendid.

Every member of the family should use this fruit laxative as occasion demands. It is just as effective for grandpa as it is for baby. It simply can not injure. Even cross, sick, feverish children just love its pleasant taste and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing."

For thirty years "California Syrup of Figs" has been recommended by physicians as the ideal stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. Millions of families who are well informed use nothing else, but recently there has come a flood of spurious fig syrups, so we warn the public to ask plainly at drug stores for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," and see that it is prepared by "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Hand back any "counterfeit" with contempt.—ADV.

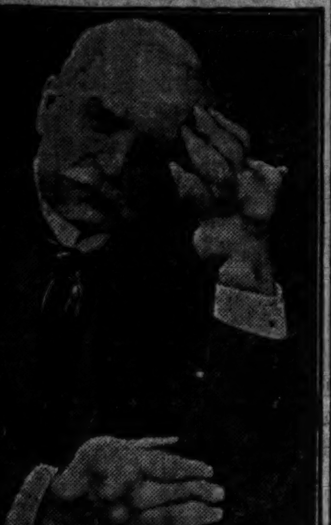
Give Delano a Chance to Cure Your Rheumatism FREE



S. T. DELANO, the Discoverer.

Did Mr. Delano discover or invent a cure for rheumatism? Thousands say that he has the cure that has baffled the skill of the best physicians since the days of mythology.

This is an era of scepticism of so-called "cures," but the Delano method of proof silences all "doubting Thomases." He has a strange way of doing business, but it shows his absolute confidence in the discovery.

If you have rheumatism, he is willing to send you this treatment. There are no strings to this offer. If the medicine fulfills his remarkable claims, send him the price of it (one dollar); if you aren't satisfied that it's the long-waited-for remedy he will cancel the transaction.

The story of this discovery is very interesting. Mr. Delano inherited rheumatism and suffered its tortures for 36 years, but during this whole period he pluckily spent his time and thousands of dollars studying and experimenting with the ingredients of the best rheumatism specifics of all nations. At last, when on the verge of helplessness, his untiring efforts were rewarded with success. He cured himself and gave his medicine to hundreds of others before this extraordinary offer was made to the American public.

The above photograph shows how the rheumatism swelled and twisted Mr. Delano's bones and illustrates stronger than words the agonies he suffered during his experiments.

The readers of this publication are invited to test this discovery for themselves without a penny's expense, no matter where you live.

Write Mr. F. H. Delano, 82-E, Delano Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y., and just tell him that you have rheumatism. Don't send any money before you try the remedy or he will return it to you.—ADV.

THOMAS CONNOR'S WILL IS UPHELD IN SUPREME COURT

Judge Graves Says Action in Name of Insane Wife "Bespeaks Grab for Cash."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 6.—The Supreme Court, in a decision by Judge Graves, sustained the will of the late Thomas Connor, the Joplin millionaire and Democratic politician, who died several years ago.

Connor died childless, leaving an estate worth more than $1,000,000 to five sisters, subject to an allowance for his insane wife, Melissa, confined at St. Vincent's institution, in St. Louis. The will provided that his widow should receive the income from $100,000 during her lifetime if she recovered her reason, but only an allowance of $150 a month if she remained insane.

The wife is still insane and the provisions for $150 a month in the will stands good. The Connors were married in 1874. Three years later Mrs. Connors became insane and was taken to the sanitarium.

Connors died at San Antonio, Tex., March 27, 1909, after his election to the State Senate. After his death his widow was declared insane by the Probate Court and William H. Phelps appointed her guardian. He served one year when he resigned and was succeeded by E. N. Perry of McDonald County. A suit was brought in the name of the widow to break the will and recover a wife's share of the estate. The Circuit Court ruled against her and the case came here on appeal.

"This whole action," said Judge Graves, "bespeaks a grab for cash rather than an earnest and sincere appeal to conscience." The names of Connors' sisters, who get the bulk of the estate, do not appear in the decision.

COURT AWARDS $5448 TO VICTIM OF LOAN SHARK

Borrower Was to Pay $2.50 Monthly on Loan of $25.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 6.—Judgment for $5448 against D. D. Drake, a loan agent, was awarded to Joseph B. Stalker, a railroad employe of Kansas City, Kan., in a decision handed down by the Kansas Supreme Court today.

Stalker alleged he borrowed $25 in 1903 from Drake's agency in Kansas City, Kan., and that he was to pay $2.50 monthly interest on the loan. Suits filed against him when he was unable to meet Drake's claims caused him to travel about the country at great expense, he said, and resulted in his losing several positions. Finally he filed suit for damages against Drake in the Wyandotte County District Court and was awarded $6000. This amount the Supreme Court today reduced to $5448.

PROMOTER WINS FIRST POINT IN EVERGLADE CASE

Circuit Court Awards Florida Man Money, Until Case Is Settled.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 6.—R. J. Bolles of Miami, Fla., president of the Florida Fruit Lands Co., may retain until final adjudication $1,400,000 paid to him by the company for lands in the Everglades of Florida, and in dividends, according to a decision of Circuit Judge Guthrie here today. The decision is in a civil suit brought against Bolles by trustees, representing 12,000 purchasers of the Everglades lands. Former Governor of Missouri Hadley is attorney for Bolles.

Today's decision, it is said, will have an important bearing on the cases in which Boles and seven other officers and agents of the Florida Fruit Lands Co. were indicted by the Federal grand jury here three weeks ago, charged with misuse of the mails and conspiracy in connection with the sale of Everglades tracts. Government investigators declared that the lands sold as farms, were for the most part under water.

MUNICIPAL HOTEL TO PROVIDE SOUP FOR BREAKFAST

Supt. Arendes Thinks That Will Be Better and Cost Less Than Coffee and Bread.

Soup for breakfast is the novel fare to be served at Hotel de Arendes, otherwise known as the Municipal Lodging House at the old Four Courts building.

Superintendent George Arendes announced his choice of soup as a substitute for coffee and "sinkers," which J. Eads How always serves to the hobo, when he was escorting Mayor Kiel, President Lazarus of the Council and Speaker Gazzolo of the House, through the basement lodging house yesterday.

"Hot soup is a nourishing dish and can be prepared at slight cost compared to other dishes," said Arendes. "It is true that many, if not all epicureans, eschew soup before the sun is at the meridian, but I think this is purely a whim that can be overcome by practice. The lodgers who will apply to the city for shelter and sustenance will be hungry men and, instead of bread, molasses and coffee, the old fare, I think hot soup will go farther and cost less."

Arendes also plans to improve the 650 steel cots that were used last winter by covering them with canvas to make a softer surface. No bed clothing of any sort was supplied last year by the city.

The request of J. Eads How, spokesman for the hoboes, that the second floor of the Four Courts be used in preference to the hard, cold granitoid of the basement, was overruled by Arendes and the board. The basement will be whitewashed before the opening next Tuesday or Wednesday and pallets will be made on the floor for those who cannot find a cot.

THREE PARTIES ON PANAMA EXPOSITION COMMISSION

Norman M. Vaughan of St. Louis Is One of Three Democrats Selected by Major.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 6.—Gov. Major today named three Democrats, one Progressive and one Republican as Missouri commissioners to the Panama Exposition. There were more than 400 applications for the Democratic appointments on file.

The appointments are: Norman M. Vaughan of St. Louis, editor of a fraternal paper; John A. Cunningham of Caruthersville, banker; John T. McNatt of Aurora, former Prosecuting Attorney of Lawrence County, all Democrats; W. A. Dallmeyer of Jefferson City, president of the State Fair Board, banker and stockman, a Republican; and W. B. Smith of Princeton, chairman of the Progressive organization for that congressional district.

The Commissioners will receive $5 a day and expenses while at San Francisco. The appropriation for a Missouri exhibit and to pay the salaries and expenses of the commissioners is $100,000. The site of the building at the Exposition was selected by a commission appointed by Gov. Hadley. His commissioners were Senator Frank M. McDavid of Springfield and Joe Black of Richmond. The latter is a Republican and was an applicant to succeed himself, but was displaced by Dallmeyer.

MAN FREED, MAY BE TRIED

Department of Justice Would Push Case Against Banker.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The Department of Justice has renewed its prosecution of C. M. Summers, president of a national bank at Juneau, Alaska, whose indictment on charges of misapplication of the bank's money was recently set aside by the Supreme Court.

The Court found that the Government had placed 56 counts in the indictment, whereas the Alaska laws then permitted only one count. Solicitor-General Davis today asked the Court to modify its decision so that Summers, instead of going free, would be required to stand trial on one count.

Will Teach Your Child How to Be Healthy

Regularity of Bowels from Infancy Insures Good Health in Later Years

BERTHA LEE WOODARD

We cannot all start life with the advantages of money, but every child born is entitled to the heritage of good health. Through unfortunate ignorance or carelessness in the feeding of a baby its tiny stomach may become deranged. The disorder spreads to the bowels and before the mother realizes it the two chief organs on which the infant's health depend are causing it great suffering. If the condition is allowed to continue grave ailments often result.

There is, however, no occasion for alarm, and the sensible thing to do—but it should be done instantly—is to give the baby a small dose of a mild laxative-tonic. In the opinion of a great many people, among them such well-known persons as the parents of Bertha Lee Woodard, 3 years old, of Moultrie, Ga., the proper remedy is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. I. N. Woodard says that little Bertha was troubled with constipation for over a year, and that after trying several different kinds of remedies she found her relief in Syrup Pepsin. It is a mild, pleasant-tasting laxative, which every person likes, does not gripe nor cramp, and contains that most excellent of all digestants, pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is especially intended for infants, children, women, old people, and all others to whom harsh cathartics, salt waters, pills, etc., are distressing. In fact, in the common disorders of life, such as constipation, liver trouble, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, and the various other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels nothing is more suitable than this mild laxative-tonic, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Three generations of people are using it today, and thousands of families keep it constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle, the latter being the size bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

WEST-END WOMEN SELL XMAS SEALS AT BIG HOTELS

Local Society Receives $25 From Man Passing Through With Son for Arizona.

"Every Red Cross Christmas Seal you buy is a bullet in the warfare against tuberculosis," Mrs. Thomas J. Barnidge told one of the guests at the Marquette yesterday, where she and her committee were at work selling the seals in the annual campaign of the Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

"Then let me fire a broadside," spoke up a man who was standing listening to Mrs. Barnidge. He handed her $25 and walked away, refusing to give his name. Later he told Mrs. Barnidge he was passing through St. Louis en route to Arizona in search of health for his young son, who is afflicted with tuberculosis.

Mrs. Barnidge is chairman of the Hotel and Club Committee. Each afternoon and evening she and 21 young matrons and debutantes visit hotels, distribute educational literature and sell seals to those who wish to buy.

The local anti-tuberculosis society has been organized since 1906 and since that time has made rapid strides in its fight against the spread of the malady in this community. Its work is confined altogether to St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Starting out with the establishment of the first clinic for the examination of throat and chest, this society organized a coterie of West End women into a charity circle. This circle gave the first money for work in this community, and ever since has made a monthly contribution of $100.

The organization has advanced from year to year until now it is operating 12 departments. Its chief revenue is from the sale of Red Cross Seals, for which it has the exclusive agency from the National American Red Cross Society. Last year $8100 was contributed by the sale of the little stickers, at 1 cent each.

THEATER ROW CAUSES FINE

Man Punished for Fight in Which Woman Was Hurt.

Roma La Villi, who was arrested Wednesday in Maplewood during a fight following a siege of a Maplewood moving picture theater by Joseph Flood and his wife, was fined $5 and costs yesterday by Justice Ragland on a charge of disturbing the peace. John Osborn, who was arrested at the same time, sent word that he was sick and unable to appear for trial, and his case was continued to Thursday.

Flood and his wife made the complaints against the men, alleging the fight was due to a quarrel between Osborn and Flood over the dissolution of their partnership in conducting the show. Mrs. Flood told Justice Ragland that one of the bones of her left wrist was broken when she tried to separate the men and was knocked down.

Mix This Simple Remedy for Kidneys or Bladder

Weak, deranged kidneys or bladder can be cured in nearly every case by using the following well-known formula: Get one-half ounce Murax Compound, one-half ounce fluid extract Buchu. Take home and mix with six ounces good, pure gin. One to two teaspoonfuls of this mixture after each meal and at bed time will soon put the kidneys, bladder and urinary organs in good working condition. Such symptoms as backache, rheumatic pains in the joints and other unmentionable symptoms are quickly stopped.

Any good druggist has the ingredients for this mixture. Anyone can mix.

One should use the best quality of gin in preparing this mixture, also the genuine Murax Compound, which comes only in sealed wooden tubes. A substitute will not give the desired results.

Local pharmacists say this has had a great demand for the past five years. Published by the Standard Chemical Co. Laboratories of Chicago, Ill.—ADV.

Recipe for the Tobacco Habit

Well-Known Physician Gives Out a Simple Home Recipe for the Tobacco Habit to Be Given Secretly.

A well-known physician, located in the Middle West, who has treated thousands of cases of tobacco habit, in a recent interview made the following statement: "The cost of drugs used to treat the liquor and tobacco habits in the high priced sanitariums amounts to very little. Here is a simple, inexpensive prescription that can be give secretly in coffee, tea, milk, water, or in the food, as it has no taste, color or smell: To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of muriate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound, 10 grains of pepsin. Given in coffee or food a teaspoonful three times a day. This prescription is perfectly harmless, can be obtained at any drug store, and will be found very effective, as it contains many of the drugs used in the sanitariums in the treatment of the tobacco habit in any form."—ADVERTISEMENT.

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS IF YOUR BACK HURTS YOU

Advises Missouri folks to overcome Kidney and Bladder trouble and Rheumatism while it is only trouble.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acid so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—ADV.

Relief From Constipation

It's Me for Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative. No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Co., Columbus, O. All druggists.

TERMINAL'S FINAL PLEA FOR BRIDGE ARBITRARY HEARD

Its Lawyers Present Decree Retaining It and for Hours Attack Government's Interpretation Forever Abolishing Discriminatory Rates.

JUDGE HOOK REMARKS ARBITRARY MUST END

"Glaring Discrimination," Says Judge Smith, When It Is Revealed Revenue to Road Is 10 Cents More in St. Louis Than East Side.

At the conclusion of oral arguments before Judges Sanborn, Hook and Smith in the United States District Court in St. Louis yesterday, on the form of final decree to be entered to carry into effect the mandate of the Supreme Court in the celebrated Terminal Railroad Association case, these facts had been clearly established:

First—That if the Court should enter the form of decree submitted by the Terminal Railroad Association, or substantially the same form as the court's interlocutory decree of last June, the Terminal would continue collecting the arbitrary bridge toll on the theory that it had been legalized and perpetuated by the Court.

Second—That if the Court should approve the form of decree submitted by the Government, the arbitrary on both freight and passenger traffic would be effectively and forever abolished.

Attorneys in Bitter Struggle.

With full realization that the arbitrary hung in the balance, the attorneys for the contending parties to the controversy were engaged in a bitter and determined legal battle before the Court for many hours. The Terminal's lawyers, former Judge Henry S. Priest and T. M. Pierce, attempted to justify the arbitrary on the ground of the reasonableness of the charge for the service rendered, while the Government counsel, Edward C. Crow, stoutly maintained that the arbitrary was an unjust discrimination against St. Louis, and that the Supreme Court, in its directions to the District Court, clearly intended that the arbitrary in all its forms should be wiped out.

The Supreme Court in its mandate directed the District Court to enter a decree that should provide "for the abolition of any special or so-called arbitrary charge for the use of terminal facilities in respect of traffic originating in the so-called 100-mile area that is not equally or in like manner applied in respect of all other traffic of like character originating outside of that area."

Almost at the outset of the argument Judges Sanborn, Hook and Smith asked for a clear and specific definition of the arbitrary. These facts were agreed upon as defining the arbitrary:

First. That on a shipment of coal originating within the 100-mile zone a rate of 32 cents applied from the mines to East St. Louis and 52 cents to St. Louis, the difference of 20 cents paid to the Terminal Association for hauling the coal across the river and making delivery in St. Louis, constituting the arbitrary.

Second. That on a shipment of anthracite coal from Pittsburg, the railroads made the same rate to St. Louis as to East St. Louis, but paid to the Terminal Association, out of their through rate, 20 cents a ton for making delivery in St. Louis. In other words, that in a case outside of the 100-mile zone the railroads in their combined capacity as the Terminal Railroad Association made the same charge of 20 cents a ton for transporting the coal across the river, but relieved the shipper of this charge, it being borne by the carrying railroad in its individual capacity.

What Government Is Demanding.

What the railroads do in the shipment of anthracite coal is what the Government is demanding that they shall be required to do in the transportation of soft coal from the Illinois mines. The Government's position in the controversy may be illustrated by the hypothetical case of a coal dealer who has depots in St. Louis and East St. Louis. On a shipment of anthracite from Pennsylvania—that illustration being used by the court in its effort to determine what constituted the arbitrary—the carrying railroad would make delivery to the St. Louis and East St. Louis depots at exactly the same rate, but on the shipments from the Illinois mines within 100 miles of East St. Louis the rate would be 20 cents higher to St. Louis than to East St. Louis.

The three judges showed a keen interest in the arbitrary issue. After Judge Sanborn, from the statements made by the attorneys and by W. C. Stith, traffic manager for the Terminal, had written a definition of the arbitrary, he read it several times so that there could be no misapprehension on the part of either the court or the attorneys as to what the

"Well, it's fairly clear now, my dear, but the clouds are coming up and I fear it will rain, and you know the doctor told me to be careful about catching cold."

This was in the forenoon.

'MOVIES' USED AS EVIDENCE IN BOSTON COURTROOM

Shoe Manufacturers Attend "Dress Rehearsal" to See Films Machine Operation Shown.

BOSTON, Dec. 6.—Dress rehearsal was held in the United States Circuit Court today for the moving picture show that is to be presented before Judges Putnam, Dodge and Brown on Tuesday, when the United Shoe Machinery Co.'s case comes up for the continued hearing.

The "movie" machine and films were moved into the courtroom today, the shades drawn, and a first-class show was given for two hours before President Sydney Winslow, president of the United Shoe Co.; Louis Coolidge, treasurer; Charles F. Choate, of the company's counsel, and John A. O'Connell.

All the machinery manufactured by the United Shoe Co. was shown while being made and operated. The manufacture of shoes by use of the United Shoes machinery was illustrated, the scenes showing the uses to which the machinery could be put.

The performance lasted two hours. The officials of the company expressed themselves satisfied with the exhibition.

WANTED: YOUNGER SANTA

Little Girl Asks Post-Master-General If He Can't Arrange It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Miss Lodema L. Hile, a tiny girl of Albion, Ind., has asked Postmaster-General Burleson to appoint a younger Santa Claus, who can go to her home, which is a long way from a railroad. Little Miss Hile wrote the big Postmaster-General as follows:

To Mr. Burleson: I wish that you would appoint a younger Santa Claus for I live a long ways from a railroad and am afraid that Santa Claus is now too old to come to my house and I will not get anything for Xmas, for Grandpa says that he used to come to his house when he was a little boy, so he must be pretty old by this time, and oblige a little girl eight years old, with best regards.

GOSSIPS ACCUSE BRIDEGROOM AFTER PARENTS' DEATHS

New Rochelle Man Returns Home, Tells of Hearing Shots, Finding Bodies.

IS ACCUSED OF SHORTAGE

He Denies He Hid Fact That Weapon He Borrowed Was Used in Tragedy.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Dec. 6.—William D. Newman returned here tonight to confront the persons who have whispered his name for the last few days in connection with the death of his aged father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Newman, Nov. 17.

Accompanied by his tearful bride, who was Miss Esther Leary, young Newman arrived from Great Barrington, Mass., where he had been staying at the summer hotel of his father-in-law, Cornelius J. Leary, a prominent resident of New Rochelle. Leary had telegraphed him last night that stories were being circulated that a charge was about to be lodged against him. Young Newman took the first train this morning that would get him back to New Rochelle.

It is likely that at least he will be charged with abstracting from the funds of the National City Bank of New Rochelle various sums, aggregating possibly $1000. While the young man even denies these charges, his father-in-law admits there is considerable foundation for them.

A revolver which young Newman says he borrowed from a fellow clerk but which the owner says he never loaned, was the weapon with which the elder Newman and his wife were killed.

Man and Wife Killed.

George D. Newman was a diamond setter, formerly employed at Tiffany's On the morning of Nov. 17, as he and his wife were getting their breakfast, Mrs. Newman was shot three times and the husband fell dead beside her with a bullet in his brain.

The accepted version of the tragedy had been that Newman, fearing the loss of earning power through his diminishing sight, had killed his wife and himself. But when Coroner Livingston held an inquest Wednesday, it was developed that the pistol found formerly had belonged to the paying teller of the National City Bank, that he had missed it some months ago, and that William D. Newman, the son, was one of the few persons who could have access to it at the bank. George Mueller, the paying teller, identified the revolver, and Louis Newcome, a detective, testified that he had traced certain defalcations to the accounts of William D. Newman, and that the bank believed Newman had stolen in the neighborhood of $1000 from the bank.

District Attorney Winslow will take up an investigation of the whole affair Monday morning.

Kept Marriage Secret.

Miss Leary is a Roman Catholic, and the Newmans were Episcopalians. Young Newman, it is understood, became a Catholic in order to marry her, but he never let his parents know that. As he earned a small salary, he and Miss Leary feared the parents would not consent to their marriage, especially as his parents were dependent on him. He was willing to wait, but she was not, and they were married by a Catholic priest July 4 last. They kept their secret well, but soon learned that Leary, far from being opposed to the marriage, was ready to send out invitations to the forthcoming wedding. Later the invitations were changed to announcements.

They decided to send out the announcements on the night of Nov. 16 and the next morning the mail took to the Newman home an announcement of the wedding.

Young Newman wore a diamond pin, a gold watch chain and a jeweled Elks' charm when a Post-Dispatch correspondent found him at his home tonight.

He said he was in the front room dressing when he heard the pistol shots from the direction of the kitchen. He rushed there and found his father dead and his mother dying.

Denies He Concealed Anything.

"The pistol lay there on the floor," said Newman with emotion, "and I straightway explained to Coroner Livingstone that it was a pistol I had borrowed in the bank from a fellow clerk. To say that I attempted to conceal the fact that this pistol had been in my possession is an outrage. I was the first one to give the information.

Friends of Newman, especially his father-in-law, and the family physician insist the elder Newman shot his wife and killed himself because he was despondent and hopeless. Leary said tonight Newman went among his old friends two days before his death and told them good-by.

The Coroner would not make public tonight the minutes of the inquest. One woman testified that from her window in an adjoining flat she had heard a voice, which she believed to be that of Mrs. Newman, cry out a few minutes after the shots had been fired: 'On Willie, you have killed your father."

Coroner Livingstone admitted that he thought this woman either was mistaken or unduly excited.

MULHALL CHARGES UPHELD IN HOUSE REPORT ON LOBBY

Committee Findings, to Be Read Tuesday, Condemn Operations of Manufacturers' Association.

BARTHOLDT EXONERATED

McDermott and Ex-Congressman Watson of Indiana Are Sharply Criticised.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The New York World and Post-Dispatch's exposure of the "invisible government," by the publication of Col. Martin Mulhall's confessions of lobbying for the National Association of Manufacturers, is vindicated in the report which will be made to the House of Representatives by the Garrett investigation committee next Tuesday.

The report, which was completed today by the Democratic majority of the committee, contains the following findings:

1. Representative James T. McDermott, the union labor Democrat from Chicago Stock Yards District, was guilty of improper conduct as a public servant when he placed himself under financial obligations to persons opposing legislation pending in Congress.

2. Former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana conducted himself with doubtful propriety when, capitalizing his influence with members of Congress, he undertook to lobby, though the tariff commission plan, for the manufacturers' association.

3. The National Association of Manufacturers merits the severest condemnation for its lobbying operations, its efforts to control the action of the members of Congress by assistance or intimidation, and its activities in the realm of the "invisible government."

4. Not a scintilla of evidence warrants the connection of the name of Representative Sherley of Kentucky with the operations of the Manufacturers' Association.

Bartholdt Is Exonerated.

Representatives Bartholdt, Webb, Calder, Burke and Fairchild also are exonerated.

The report contains no definite recommendation of action by the House on the lobbying revelations. Although it is customary for investigating committees to formulate such recommendations, the Garrett body decided to evade this responsibility. The Democratic majority was confronted particularly with the question of recommending the expulsion, censure or exoneration of McDermott, a fellow Democrat, and sidestepped the embarrassment.

The committee "passes the buck" to the House. In order to perform this subtile operation most effectively, the committee will have the report, which is a voluminous document, read to the House by the clerk, instead of being dropped into the document hopper, as is customary.

After the reading of the report it will be in order for any member to offer a resolution proposing action on the case of McDermott and on the revelations as a whole.

Calls Report a "Whitewash."

It was disclosed today that there will be one, and perhaps two, minority reports presented from the committee. Representative McDonald, Progressive, regards the findings of the Democratic majority as virtually a whitewash of the National Association of Manufacturers, Representative McDermott and others involved in the disclosures.

At a meeting of the committee tonight MacDonald was unsuccessful in inducing the majority to recommend drastic action in regard to all of the spirit of pity, btu felt compelled to announced that he would give a separate report.

The regular Republican members of the committee also are contemplating presenting independent conclusions.

The Democratic majority of the committee, while recommending no punishment for McDermott, was unable to exonerate him. It dealt with him in a spirit of pity, but felt compelled to censure him for his conduct.

"Your committee is of opinion," the report says, "that the most serious question of propriety affecting McDermott is not in connection with the N. A. M., or the other matters related, but grows out of his acts and dealings with the Liquor Dealers' Association of the District of Columbia and with George Horning, one of the pawnbrokers, to which allusion has been made."

McDermott Exonerated of Forgery.

The report recites in detail the testimony of McMichael, that McDermott said he had received $7500 for fighting anti-loan shark legislation, and that the dealers arranged at a New York conference between the Congressman and Horning, representing the pawnbrokers, and John A. McDermott, a report of the organized brewers of the country.

McDermott is exonerated by the committee of the charge of forging the name of Mulhall in indorsing and cashing the $250 check given to the Congressman's campaign fund by Harold McCormick, but which was made payable to Mulhall. The latter cashed the original check. McDermott, in the meantime, had procured a duplicate payable to Mulhall, which he cashed.

The American Federation of Labor receives a clean bill of health.

PHOEBE COUZINS DIES IN POVERTY IN BARREN ROOM

First Woman Lawyer Ill in Pine Street House for Three Months.

CAREER REMARKABLE ONE

Served as U. S. Marshal and Gained Fame on Lecture Platform; Was 73.

Miss Phoebe W. Couzins, 73 years old, first woman graduate of Washington University, first woman lawyer in America, and United States Marshal in St. Louis in the latter part of the first Cleveland administration, died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a room at 2722 Pine street, where she had lived in destitution for three months.

A narrow cot, almost the only article of furniture in the room, was her deathbed. Save for the tenancy of the one bare room by Miss Couzins and her brother, John Couzins, 63 years old, who slept on the floor, the house has been unoccupied.

A long illness, due in part to poverty, led to a sudden and acute attack at noon yesterday, when she asked her brother to call Dr. L. C. McElwee, formerly her physician. After 2 o'clock, when it appeared that she was dying, neighbors sent for a Catholic priest and an Episcopal clergyman. The priest, who is the white pastor of a negro parish, arrived shortly after Miss Couzins died.

Wanted to Go Back to Washington.

Her last words, her brother said, were about going to Washington, the scene of some of her former successes as a public speaker.

"If I can get back to Washington, John," she told her brother, "and get to work again, things will be all right."

Oil lamps, borrowed from roomers in adjoining houses, were lighted in the room as the body lay on the cot, and by this light an undertaker prepared the body for removal to the Lynch & Tully establishment at 4229 Olive street. There, it was announced, it will be on view Monday morning to those who may wish to call. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon.

The career which thus closed in obscurity and hardship was a remarkable one. She had established a reputation as a writer and speaker before 1871, when she won the degree of Bachelor of Laws in Washington University. Her father, John E. D. Couzins appointed United States Marshal in 1885, made her his deputy, and when he died six months before the expiration of his term, she was appointed to fill out the period. In this position, she was called in to enforce the Federal laws against "bootleggers" and other lawbreakers, and her administration of the office was a vigorous one.

Wide attention was attracted by Miss Couzins' unique official position, and she turned this distinction to good advantage on the lecture platform. She spoke in the temperance cause, but parted company with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and other forces when they took up the advocacy of prohibitory laws. She was also a pioneer in what was at first known as the "woman's rights" movement, but she later became an anti-suffragist.

She made anti-prohibition speeches in many states, and took part in the state campaigns against prohibition amendments. In later years she made known the fact that she was financed, in these speeches, by St. Louis brewers. She declared that so long as he was in active control of his business, affairs, the late Adolphus Busch provided for her, and that he had promised to take care of her for the rest of her life. This statement has been denied by representatives of the Busch family.

Campaigned for Bryan.

Miss Couzins took an active part in the Bryan free silver campaign of 1896 and was complimented on her fluent handling, in speeches, of intricate questions of finance. She mentioned a few weeks ago the fact that she had been considered an expert in financial matters, and pointed to the strange contrast between this fact and the financial destitution to which she had come.

Her latest public appearance in St. Louis was made at the old Liederkranz Hall, on Chouteau avenue, in 1906. Sitting in a chair on the stage—for she had at that time lost the use of her legs—Miss Couzins denounced Gov. Folk for clamping the Sunday lid on St. Louis.

She came here in June, 1907, to attend the Washington University commencement exercises, but was piqued because she was not invited to speak at the exercises or at the alumni banquet.

The fact that she was living in destitution here became known late in October. At that time she was without any regular supply of food. When her condition became known, a number of friends came to her aid, one of them being Mrs. William H. Thomson, wife of the vice-president of the Boatmen's Bank.

Through the gifts, she and her brother were kept from hunger, and were enabled to pay their rent of $12 a month. Miss Couzins was twice sent to the city hospital, but refused to remain, objecting to the garb which the hospital patients are required to wear.

The woman who rents rooms to help make the income meet expenses cannot afford to waste money in her advertising. Post-Dispatch Wants assure the best results and can be relied upon to rent the rooms with least delay.

First Woman Lawyer Who Dies in Poverty at Age of 73

PHOEBE COUZINS...

BRYAN, HAILED AS 'NEXT PRESIDENT,' REBUKES SPEAKER

Denies Highest Ambition Is to Be Chief Executive, as, He Says, Is Popular Belief.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6.—When former Congressman L. Irving Handy of Delaware introduced Secretary of State Bryan to the guests at the annual dinner of the Sons of Delaware here tonight as "the next President of the United States," Secretary Bryan told the diners he hoped they would not treasure up against Mr. Handy the "political indiscretion" he had just committed.

"He means well," Secretary Bryan said, "and it only indiactes how a habit he learned about 17 years ago became fixed."

"I believe the toastmaster is of the opinion of many others," Secretary Bryan continued, "that my highest ambition has been to become President of the United States. That is not so. From my earliest manhood I have set a worthier and higher ambition. I have considered that office as only a means to an end.

"I consider no one worthy to occupy that high office who is not more interested in the things he can accomplish than in the fame that it brings.

"I am happy, and I want you all to believe me when I say so, to see those things so near to my heart being done by another—happier than if I were in that place.

"I am happy to see a nation of people change its point of view and adopt those things which have always been close to my heart."

Bryan Approves Wilson's Plan for Presidential Primaries.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Secretary of State Bryan today placed his stamp of approval on President Wilson's scheme for presidential primaries in no uncertain terms. He also made the prophecy that the campaign for the change from the convention system will be a short one and that it will go into effect before the next presidential campaign begins.

The Secretary of State gave his endorsement and made his prophecy at a meeting of the national conference on popular government held in Continental Hall here, when he spoke on "The People Rule; How to Make It a Fact."

"The President has proposed a new reform," he said. "He has called for a presidential primary. No one can believe in the rule of the people without supporting this measure. The public sentiment of the country is ripe for the change. When it is effected the President who reaches the White House will know that he has the multitude, not a few persons behind him."

DE LUXE VOYAGE ABROAD FOR BABY ADOPTED BY LEEDS

Happy Rich Couple Will Have Special Cow for Youngster on Houseboat on Nile.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Warner Mifflin Leeds, with their new daughter, who, up to Friday, when they adopted her in the office of the Nassau County Clerk at Minneola, was Miss Katherine Kennedy, yesterday boarded the North German Lloyd liner, Berlin, to sail for the Mediterranean. A nurse for the baby, a maid for Mrs. Leeds and Mr. Leeds' valet accompanied them.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Leeds and the baby are expected to be abroad a year, during which time they will make a trip up the Nile in a houseboat, the departure of Mr. Leeds yesterday seemed to be the result of a sudden decision. Mrs. Leeds, the baby, nurse and maid occupied Captain's quarters, while Mr. Leeds and the valet were assigned to a stateroom.

Hunted Baby for Years.

This was the first birthday of the baby, which now will be known as Joy Louise Leeds. Just before the vessel sailed, Mr. Leeds came out of the cabin, where he had been secluded with the new-found treasure. He looked happy.

"My wife has longed for a baby of her own for 20 years," he said, "and she was unfortunate in not having one. We decided to find a child that would take the place of the baby we were denied.

"For years we have hunted high and low and finally through Miss Clara Spence, a teacher in the girls' school, we found the right baby. We knew the minute we saw her she was the child for us.

"The public knows as much about the child's parentage as we do. Be careful what you print about this little one. Do not cast any shadow over her antecedents."

Mrs. Leeds Is Joyous.

Just then Mrs. Leeds came into the corridor. She was beaming. She had found a new idea, a new charm in life.

"How do I feel?" she exclaimed. "I cannot tell you how happy I am. I am in possession of this little mite. No mother could be happier with a child of her own. From this minute on Joy is mine and so she shall remain."

At Plandome Mills, Mr. Leeds' country estate, it was reported that a fresh, healthy cow would be taken to Europe from the farm to provide the best of milk for Joy. This was denied by the superintendent of the estate. It is admitted, however, that before boarding the houseboat for the Nile trip, Mr. Leeds will acquire a cow and make her a member of his party.

2 POLICEMEN AND NEGRO DICE PLAYER KILLED IN FIGHT

Patrolmen Blair and Lamb, Latter the Oldest on St. Charles Force, Shot in Battle With Three Negroes Who Refused to Leave Town.

TWO BLACKS ESCAPE, SHOT AND CAPTURED

Men, to Whom 148 Rounds of Cartridges Had Been Sold, Caught by Drummer and Farmers; to Be Brought to St. Louis.

Policemen John D. Blair and David Lamb of St. Charles were killed and Tom Black, a negro, was also slain in a revolver battle between the two policemen and three negroes in the "Frenchtown" section of St. Charles at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The two surviving negroes, Harry and Andrew Black, brothers, and cousins of Tom Black, were captured five hours later near Machens Junction, St. Charles County, by Theodore and Ed Isemann, sons of a farmer, and by Max Pumphrey of Moberly, a traveling man. They started out after a telephone message had informed them that the negroes had fled in that direction, and, lying in wait beside the M., K. & T. track, halted the negroes and, when they ran, shot them in the legs.

Negroes to Be Brought Here.

The negroes were bound with ropes and taken to the Machens depot, to await an early morning train for St. Louis. They could have been taken back on a train reaching St. Charles at 12:50 a. m. Sunday, but as several hundred men were in the streets, the St. Charles authorities decided that the prisoners would be safer in St. Louis.

Several hundred were at the M., K. & T. station when the train arrived at 1 a. m. today. They refused to listen to those who said the negro prisoners had been taken to St. Louis, and insisted on searching the train.

Lamb, the town's oldest policeman in point of service, having been on the force 20 years, was unconscious at St. Joseph's Hospital until he died at 1:15 o'clock this morning. He was 5 feet 8 inches in height and weighed 125 pounds, but had been reputed to have grit in inverse proportion to his size. He went voluntarily to reinforce Blair in the effort to arrest the three negroes.

The three negroes, who are said to have come from St. Louis or from the Creve Coeur neighborhood in St. Louis County, arrived in St. Charles yesterday morning on a freight train. They at once began drinking, shooting craps and inciting disturbances.

Breaks Up Craps Game.

Policeman Blair heard, from other negroes, that the blacks were shooting craps in a negro tenement house known as the "pipe factory," from the fact that it was once a factory. Blair went to the house, stopped the craps game and told the trio to leave town.

After Blair had gone the negroes went into the business part of town, and at the Ringe hardware store, the police say, they bought 148 rounds of cartridges for revolvers. Then they went around saloons, drinking and talking insolently to other negroes and to white men.

Complaints of their behavior reached Blair, and he set out to look for them, determined to look them up. They left Main street, and Blair followed them to Fourth and Randolph streets, near the Wabash Railroad tracks, four blocks from the station.

Monk Pallardy, who saw the encounter from a distance of a half-block, said last night that, as Blair approached them, the negroes stopped and began to roll dice on the sidewalk. He said Blair seized Tom Black, and that the other negroes immediately began firing their revolvers, wounding the policeman in the body. Blair fired one shot, which pierced Tom Black's head, and the negro fell on the walk.

At this moment, Pallardy said, Policeman Lamb, whose home is in the neighborhood, and who had just set out for the city hall to report for night duty, ran up. Before he could use his revolver, he was felled by two bullets, and Blair also fell, shot twice through the head and once in the abdomen.

Mayor Calls Out a Posse.

Pallardy said he was positive that Harry and Andrew Black shot the policemen, and that Tom Black did not fire a shot.

As soon as the news of the shooting reached the St. Charles officials, Mayor Olson issued a call for a posse and offered a $100 reward for the arrest of either of the fugitives. Sheriff Dierker of St. Charles County was away on a deer hunt, and Deputy Sheriff Rupp started in an automobile with other officers. A message was sent to William Desmond, former Chief of Detectives of St. Louis, and he set out for St. Charles with two men from his detective agency.

Inquiry showed that the negroes had been seen running east on the Katy railroad tracks, and Waldo P. Hines, former Sheriff, telephoned to Machens, 12 miles from St. Charles, and asked J. H. Machens, Postmaster there, to send out men to capture the negroes. Posse

PRESIDENT WANTS U. S. PROTECTORATE OVER NICARAGUA

Executive Notifies Senate Committee He Will Press Plan at an Early Date.

BRYAN PREPARES TREATY

Bitter Fight Over Proposal Foreseen in Congress; Provides for Canal Rights.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The plan to establish an American protectorate over the republic of Nicaragua will be pressed for consideration and action at an early date. President Wilson has formally notified the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to that effect. Whenever the Mexican situation has subsided to a reasonable quiescent stage "drumstick diplomacy" will be brought forward.

Members of the Foreign Relations Committee were much perturbed this afternoon. Notification of President Wilson's desire and intention created uneasiness and apprehension among Democrats and Republicans. A long and bitter fight was foreseen. By inference, at least, the majority would be compelled to approve the "dollar diplomacy" of Taft and Knox and take an advanced step by providing for "drumstick diplomacy" as its successor.

Complete Suzerainty Contemplated.

The proposition for the establishment by the United States of a protectorate over Nicaragua goes far beyond anything previously suggested and made effective. It is desired to create a suzerainty so complete that it would involve responsibility by the United States for the indebtedness of the Central American republic. This would be secured by inserting the Platt amendment, as applied to Cuba, in the treaty arranging for a canal concession.

In return for the protection afforded and the payment of $3,000,000, the United States would be given a perpetual concession for the construction of a ship canal over the old Nicaraguan route. In addition, Fonseca Bay, on the Pacific coast, would be surrendered for a naval base. The Great and Little Corn Islands in the Carribean would be given for fortifications, by which to better guard the Panama Canal.

After the approval of the treaty the United States would be in a position to guarantee all loans made by American capitalists to Nicaragua, such as the $3,000,000 recently arranged by Brown & Bros. of New York. A plan would be made effective for supervising the collection of customs. From the same source the interest and public debt of Nicaragua would be paid.

Treaty Returned to Bryan.

This proposition was laid before the Foreign Relations Committee several months ago by Secretary Bryan, who appeared in person and explained it. He subsequently drafted the treaty embodying his views and sent it to the committee for ratification. By an overwhelming vote the committee directed its chairman, Senator Bacon, to return the treaty to Secretary Bryan, with the request that he eliminate all features except that providing for a payment of $3,000,000 to obtain the right of way in perpetuity for building an inter-oceanic canal. The matter then was permitted to lapse by the administration authorities.

The notification given the Foreign Relations Committee that it must prepare to take up the Nicaragua protectorate plan was the first sign that Secretary Bryan was ready to resume the fight for making operative his new policy toward the Central American republics.

It would be mild to say the Foreign Relations Committee is torn by conflicting emotions. The Democrats have always opposed the mere mention of a protectorate. The Republicans have balked at going farther than protecting American loans, made under the "Dollar Diplomacy" plan and stopping short of anything savoring of a suzerainty.

Outcome in Senate Problematical.

To what extent Secretary Bryan will revise the provisions of the Platt amendment, thereby making the protectorate plan less objectionable, has not yet developed. The new draft of the treaty is expected to show many changes calculated to remove the most formidable opposition and make it easier of acceptance.

The outcome in the Senate is a matter of conjecture. The opinion prevails that if the administration officials can demonstrate that the proposed policy is essential to maintain the Monroe Doctrine and at the same time to extend the commercial and financial prestige of the United States, it will meet with support from the Democrats. Such Republicans as were enthusiasts over "Dollar Diplomacy" also are expected to receive the new policy not only as being beneficial from all points of view, but an indorsement of that advocated by President Taft and Secretary Knox.

PRESIDENT TAKES DRIVE, VISITS SHOPPING DISTRICT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—President Wilson's cold was muhc better today. He dictated some letters at the executive offices and signed some commissions, but saw no callers.

Later the President took a drive through Rock Creek Park. It was the first time he had been out of doors since last Tuesday. He was accompanied by Dr. Grayson, his physician.

After his ride through the park the President took a walk late in the day with Dr. Grayson, strolling leisurely from the White House in the retail district for nearly an hour. He stopped in front of several photographic studios where he viewed photographs of the recent White House wedding party. Dr. Grayson announced tonight the President's cold was much improved.

HEIRS TO DECIDE WHO DIED FIRST IN AUTO WRECK

Estate of Mrs. Marie Drey Involved by Question of Which of Four Lived Longest.

In the settlement of the estate of Mrs. Marie Drey, the inventory of which was filed yesterday in the Probate Court, trustees are confronted with the problem of determining whether Mrs. Drey, her daughter or her two granddaughters died first in an automobile accident in which all four were killed in St. Louis County, July 2 Her personal estate is listed at $805,190.48.

If Mrs. Blanche Somers, the daughter, died before her children, her husband. David Sommers of 4362 West Pine boulevard, is entitled to her one-fifth share in her mother's estate. If Mrs. Sommers died after her children, then Sommers, according to the will, is entitled to a courtesy interest in his wife's legacy, and the remainder reverts to the residuary legatees. A curtesy interest usually is a child's share.

Leo A. Drey, a son and one of the trustees, said yesterday the trustees had been unable to decide the question of who died first. All four were killed almost instantly. He thinks it certain, however, the matter will be adjusted out of court to the satisfaction of all concerned in friendly fashion. The presumption of law where persons are killed in a common accident, is that the younger person is the laost survivor.

Sommers, who was injured in the accident, was the only member of his family to survive.

Mrs. Drey bequeathed her estate equally among her five children—Leo A. Drey, Eugene Drey, Mrs. Blanche Sommers, Mrs. Alice Lippman and Miss Bertie Drey. The will provided the shares of the three daughters be held in trust of their brothers and David Sommers until Jan. 1,1915, the daughters to receive the income in the meantime.

The personal property in Mrs. Drey's estate is itemized as follows: Accounts, $21,500; stocks, $399,500; bonds, $233,500, cash, $5065.06, and chattels, $605. Besides the personal estate, Mrs. Drey owned realty at the southeast corner of Berlin and Euclid avenues and a one-third interest in realty at the southwest corner of St. Charles and Eleventh streets.

TELLS HOW MEXICAN REBELS KILLED AMERICAN

Mining Man Says Soldiers Celebrating, Stabbed Partner to Get His Revolver.

NOGALES, Mex., Dec. 6.—George Baker, a mining man, arrived here today from the Mexican territory of Tepic bringing the first authentic account of the killing at Huajoori Tepic, Sept. 2 last, of his partner, Morris Root.

Baker said that on the day Root was killed their 80 Mexican employes had become drunk at a celebration of a Constitutionalist victory. They coveted Root's revolver and entered his house to attack him. One of the celebrators stabbed Root through the heart from behind and also inflicted other knife wounds. Then, taking the murdered man's revolver and waving the knife with which he had been stabbed, the Mexicans advanced upon Baker, demanding money.

Baker evaded them, and after remaining in the neighborhood long enough to bury Root's body, departed north.

He said the scene of Root's murder was near the Tepic-Sinaloa line, 85 miles from a railroad.

GIRL, 17, ARRESTED AS A MATRIMONIAL FAKER HAD 17 RINGS

Father and Two Other Members of Family Said to Have Aided in Getting Suitors by Mail.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. — Mary Louise Farris, a 17-year-old girl, is being held by the police here on request of D. J. Haley, Chief of Police of Princeton, Ind., as a suspect in connection with an Indiana matrimonial bureau.

Among the possessions of the girl the police found 17 rings, 15 of them suitable for engagement rings, and two plain gold wedding rings.

The girl when taken also had in her possession $725.

Father, Indicted, Asks That Girl and Jewelry Be Sent Home.

PRINCETON, Ind., Dec. 6.—Three members of the family of Miss Mary Louise Farris recently were indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of violating the postal laws in conducting a matrimonial bureau here. Her father, Martin W. Farris, her mother and a sister were alleged to have swindled men in many parts of the country with their scheme.

According to the Government agents, the daughter answered letters which proposed marriage and promised to go to the men upon receiving money to pay her expenses. This, the Government charged, she failed to do. It also was alleged she received many presents from her numerous fiances.

Farris, who formerly was City Marshal here, today telegraphed the Washington police asking them to send his daughter home, and requesting that the jewelry she had be expressed to him. He did not explain how Miss Mary acquired such a large assortment of rings.

British Cabinet for First Time Acts Against Ulsterites.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The British Cabinet, by a royal proclamation promulgated tonight, prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland, for the first time grasped the nettle of the revolution in Ulster which it had hitherto ignored, although the followers of Sir Edward Carson for months have been advertising their military preparations in every possible way and daring interference with them.

The comment of the Ulster leaders is to the effect that the King's proclamation comes too late. They say there already are 80,000 serviceable rifles, half of them quite modern weapons, and millions of rounds of ammunition in the possession of the Ulster volunteers.

Two Killed When Cars Collide.

SAGINAW, Mich., Dec. 6.—Two persons were killed here tonight and several others were injured, one probably fatally, when a heavy interurban car crashed into a local street car. The dead are Mrs. Margaret Hughes, 65 years old, and Edward Robison, motorman. They were aboard the city car. The accident occurred at a switch.

Gertrude Lampel Mahoney Asks Divorce in Clayton After Return From Paris.

WEDDING IN 1909 SURPRISE

Parents Were Called by Telephone to Church Where Ceremony Was Performed.

Mrs. Gertrude Lampel Mahoney, 23 years old, who lives at the handsome home of her wealthy father, Franklin L. Lampel, on the Clayton road, near the Country Club, has filed suit at Clayton to divorce Frank Four Mahoney, 29, who now lives in Chicago with his parents.

Mrs. Mahoney returned to St. Louis a week ago Friday after a six-months' stay in Paris with her mother, and immediately consulted her attorney, Police Judge Karl Kimmel, who filed the petition Wednesday. The petition immediately was placed in a private drawer and the filing of the suit was not revealed until it became known at Clayton yesterday.

When she married, June 8, 1909, Mrs. Mahoney gave up a three-months' tour in Europe which she had agreed to take with her parents and sister, Estella. Last June Mrs. Mahoney decided to go to Europe to separate herself from the man for whom, four years ago, she had abandoned a similar journey.

Wedding Surprised Parents.

A Post-Dispatch reporter called at the Lampel residence last night, and Miss Estella Lampel, 19, said her sister and her parents were visiting in St. Louis.

"Gertrude kept her unhappiness from her family a year," Miss Lampel said. "The morning she married, four years ago, she telephoned to our house, announcing she was to be wed in a half hour at Christ Church Cathedral, and that we better hurry to witness the ceremony. This surprised the family greatly, for mother thought the trip to Europe, which Gertrude had agreed to make, might break her infatuation for Mr. Mahoney. Gertrude had known Mr. Mahoney a year before they were married. She was then 19."

Charges Husband Was Jealous.

Mrs. Mahoney alleges her husband was jealous, struck her twice and on one occasion created such a disturbance as to overturn a table, attracting the neighbors and police. She also alleges he was in ill health.

Mrs. Mahoney is a graduate of Hosmer Hall. She possesses a fine voice. Before her marriage, her friends say, she considered a stage career. At the 1909 Charity Carnival at Forest Park Highlands she gave an impersonation of Fritzi Scheff that won great applause. She is a petite brunette. Her father owns the F. L. Lampel Sponge and Chamois Co., 815 Locust st. At the time of her marriage, the Lampels lived at 3635 Castleman avenue.

Mahoney, while in St. Louis, was contracting agent for the Union Pacific.

TRADE COUNCIL IS SUED

Brick Laying Contractor Asks $50,000 Damages from Labor Leaders.

E. J. Ash has filed suit against Roland Adams, Edward S. Feeney, O. V. Lowe, union labor leaders in Alton, and 20 other men in the Building and Trades Council, for $50,000 damages in connection with a boycott placed on Ash by the Building and Trades Council.

Roland Adams, walking delegate, said Saturday that the Building and Trades Council refused to work with Ash, who is a bricklaying contractor, because he had nonunion men in his employ. He said the suit would be contested.

MAN STRANGELY KILLED IN YARD ADJOINING HOME

Ellis Ernst, 72, Evidently Struck on Head With Heavy Instrument.

SECOND CRIME IN WEEK

Coal Dealer of 2641 Chouteau Avenue Believed to Have Been Robbed.

Another mysterious murder, the second within a week, committed by a blow which fractured the skull, last night caused the death of Ellis Ernst, 72 years old, a coal dealer of 2641 Chouteau avenue.

Ernst left his home at 5 o'clock and went to the coalyard which he conducts next door, at 2643 Chouteau avenue. After four hours had passed and he had not returned, his son, Walter, and daughter, Louisa, went to look for him

They found his body lying in a secluded part of the coalyard. Dr. Benjamin Shanklin of 1415 South Jefferson avenue, who was called, said he had been dead for more than an hour.

Struck With Heavy Weapon.

The skull was broken above the left ear with a deep fracture which the doctor said was due to a blow with a heavy weapon. Dr. R. Emmett Owen of 2627 Chouteau avenue, who was also called, was of the same opinion.

That the motive of the crime was robbery was believed by the police from the fact that no money was found in his pockets, although, according to relatives, he usually carried a considerable sum.

The physicians dismissed the possibility that Ernst might have been killed by a fall by declaring the wound to be so deep that it could have been caused only by a blow struck with strength.

Paid Men Off on Saturday.

It was Ernst's custom to pay off his employes in the coalyard Saturday night, and he therefore had more than the usual amount of money in his possession. He paid them between 7 and 7:30 o'clock, according to his habit. The attack is believed to have occurred soon afterward.

The body, lying face downward, was found at the end of a driveway, about 40 feet from the front entrance to the coalyard. No weapon was found.

Walter Ernst said that a gold watch, which his father always carried, was missing. He did not know how much money Ernst had after paying his two employes, men who had been with him for years, according to the son, who were trusted fully.

Ernst had been in the coal business on Chouteau avenue for 50 years and was well-to-do.

The suggestion that he might have been kicked by a horse was dismissed when it was found that the stable had been locked up for the night.

By an attack supposed to be almost similar, John Meister, 50 years old, a well-to-do teaming contractor, was killed early last Monday in a stable in the rear of his home. He was struck down by repeated blows with a four-foot piece of gas pipe, three of which fractured the skull in three places. He died in the afternoon. About $100 was missing from his pocket. The police as yet have no clew to the murderer.

cuting Attorney Daudt joined in this request, and asked that the men be taken dead or alive.

Machens told the men who were in the postoffice, and the Isemann brothers and Pumphrey volunteered, although warned that the negroes were well armed and desperate.

They went up the track, some distance west of the depot, and when the negroes approached, they arose, covered them with revolvers, and commanded them to halt. When the negroes ran, all three fired, aiming low, and an instant later the negroes were groaning on the ties, with bullets in their legs.

After they had been bound and taken to the depot, they admitted their identity. One of them was armed, but the other said he had had a revolver, and did not seem to know what had become of it. They were very apprehensive about returning to St. Charles, and when they learned that they were to be taken to St. Louis, their suffering from their wounds seemed somewhat abated, and they sat up on benches and puffed cigarettes.

Former Sheriff Hines, Deputy Sheriff Heady of Wentzville and John Grote went in an automobile to Machens, to take charge of the prisoners. Many of the men on the streets in St. Charles thought they were going to bring the negroes back at once, and gathered along Main street and at the Katy station to wait for them.

Policeman Blair was 45 years old, and left a wife. Lamb is 46, and has a wife, one child and two stepchildren.

Bright of 4366 Forest Park boulevard, secretary of the St. Louis Horse Show and one of the owners of the Imperial Laundry at Walton avenue and Delmar boulevard, is recovering at his residence from a slight injury to his left lung, the result of being kicked over the heart by a mare he was attempting to harness at his stock farm near Miama, Fla., several weeks ago.

Bright expects to be able to attend his business affairs within a few days. He was unconscious for several hours after being kicked and for a time it was thought the injury was serious. He was brought home last week.

REGENERATION LED TO ARREST, SAYS GIRL PSYCHIST

Soul Awakening Caused Joy That Made People Think Her Insane, She Declares

NEIGHBORS CALLED POLICE

Hospital Patient Asserts She Overcame Twelve Conditions of Mentality.

Miss Marie Elnora Tilton, 25 years old, of 4124 Morgan street, a teacher in psychic phenomena, who since Friday has been a prisoner in the observation ward of the city hospital, last night told a strange story of how she happened to be placed there. Miss Tilton declares she has achieved a regeneration of soul and body by overcoming 12 different conditions of mentality. She says that because of her demonstrations of joy during an awakening to full consciousness of her psychic victory, people in the neighborhood thought she had gone crazy and sent for the police.

Miss Tilton says she came here from West Baden, Ill., two weeks ago last Tuesday, and opened a studio at the Morgan street address, where she conducted classes in the study of "soul regeneration." She asserts that at once she gained a large clientele of pupils. She declares that another psychologist in the neighborhood was pursuing a similar line of study and became envious.

Two weeks ago Friday, the woman asserts, her "awakening" or "regeneration of soul" came and that her ecstatic expressions at that time attracted her neighbors, who summoned the police. Miss Tilton said because she talked in terms of the deep study to which she had devoted her life she was regarded as a religious fanatic and placed in the observation ward of the city hospital, being later released.

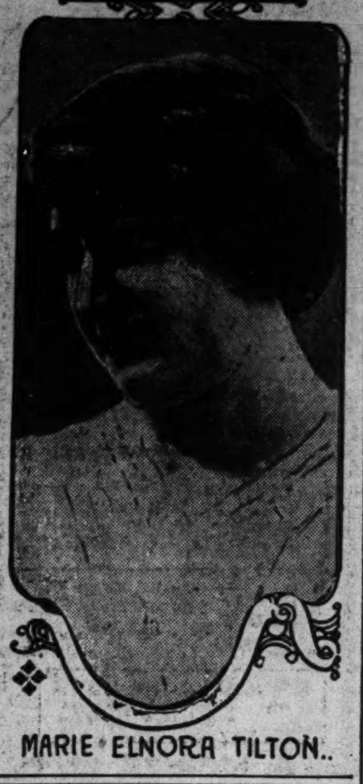
She Was Arrested Second Time.

Upon returning to her studio and classes, she says, her neighbor psychologist and others began to misrepresent her, and she appealed to the police for protection. Thursday, she says, her "awakening" continued and was in violent process when police arrived, who again placed her in the observation ward.

Miss Tilton says her family name is Harmon, which she has at times used, although Tilton is the name she has adopted. She says during the development of her mentality she has used several different names, each being chosen to fit the condition of her mind. The last name so used was Marie Wilson, which name appears on the city hospital register.

The 12 mentalities through which she passed, she says, are classified as crying, sickness, stubbornness, stability, imagination, hallucination, fear or psychic limitation, blindness or the unreal, misery, the pre-natal or strife, and lastly consciousness. The "awakening to consciousness" constitutes "soul regeneration," she declares, and means a full realization of victory over all the lesser mental stages, over all things physical, and the beginning of a new life.

PSYCHIC TEACHER WHO IS IN CITY HOSPITAL



MARIE ELNORA TILTON..

Her Release Will Be Asked.

She said that the planting of a wheat grain, its growth, sprouting and ultimate harvest, inspired her with the idea of soul regeneration.

With Miss Tilton lived Mrs. Ethel Ligon as housekeeper. Mrs. Ligon, who is now stopping at 2655A Olive street, says she has known Miss Tilton for years and has never believed her irrational. Miss Tilton, she says, was incessant in her study.

Mrs. Ligon says an effort, backed by physicians, will be made to intercede for Miss Tilton, establish her sanity by examination and bring about her release.

DECISION ELATES MINERS

Labor Federation Believes Opinion Means Release of 1000 Men.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 6.—Attorneys for the Western Federation of Miners interpret the decision of Judge O'Brien to mean that all persons arrested under the injunction since the arrest of Allouez strikers will be released. The cases involve nearly 1000 miners.

Enthusiasm for the cause, rather than any intention to violate the injunction, led to the arrests, in the opinion of the Court.

The strikers were jubilant tonight and celebrated what they termed a victory.

Two hundred workers were imported today for the Calumet and Hecla subsidiary mines.

ST. JOSEPH PASTOR, DISAPPOINTED, HANGS HIMSELF

The Rev. George L. Engler Had Failed to Get Book on Poultry Printed.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 6.—The Rev. George L. Engler, who had lived in St. Joseph many years, hanged himself tonight in his home here. He was found by his wife. He had prepared carefully to end his life. Coroner Lynch said the minister had been unable to get the consent of a publisher to print a pamphlet he had prepared dealing with the culture of poultry.

The Rev. Mr. Engler had preached in many towns in this neighborhood and was well known as a lecturer. His wife attributed his act to the fact that he used ether in generating gas for a stereopticon, declaring her husband must have been under the influence of the ether when he fastened the noose about his neck.

KING ALFONSO IS ADVISED HE MUST TAKE YEAR'S REST

Absolute Quiet Prescribed for Throat Affection Which Makes Rapid Advance.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

MADRID, Dec. 6.—Deep anxiety prevails in court official circles owing to the well-authenticated report that a Viennese specialist, consulted by King Alfonso, takes a grave view of the King's health.

The affection of the throat from which the King has been suffering for years, has spread to the post-nasal organs and is progressing upwards. Unless it can be checked consequences of the gravest kind are feared. Alfonso has been advised that the only possible hope of arresting the disease lies in undergoing a regular course of treatment for a year, living an absolutely quiet life and abandoning all official work and social and other excitements.

The King is reported to have replied: "You don't guarantee a cure, and I can tell you that a year as an invalid would certainly finish me."

The King's courage excites intense admiration, but his restless energy and fatiguing pursuits aggravate his condition.

WEBSTER GROVES ELECTION WON BY DRYS, 1043 TO 183

Prohibition Victory Does Not Bar Importation of Liquors by Private Families.

Webster Groves, model town of St. Louis County, yesterday decided, by a vote of 1043 to 183, against the admission of saloons, the result coming after a six weeks' campaign in which the women banded together to pledge their husbands to ballot for the "dry" cause, and in which public sentiment was aroused by sermons in the churches and by a house-to-house canvass of temperance workers.

The town was awakened at 6 o'clock by the explosion of bombs at the polling places and by troops of Boy Scouts, who rode through the streets on horseback blowing the reveille on bugles.

Children in the public schools Friday wore white ribbons to show that their fathers would vote to exclude saloons. The women, led by Mrs. Joseph Weir, had taken a straw vote, in which 1600 ballots were cast, 80 per cent of them against liquor. About 70 men and 50 women were enlisted as canvassers, and the town was blocked off into districts.

An argument which converted many "wet" sympathizers was that a prohibition victory would not deprive citizens of the right to keep beer and liquor in their houses. Saloons bordering the town on the north and east and liquor dealers in St. Louis report a large sale of case beer in Webster Groves, several truck loads often being sent out on Saturday night.

Negroes Vote for "Drys."

In order to banish saloons, Webster Groves incorporated and passed an ordinance setting the fee for a saloon license at $5000 a year. For 17 years this sum proved prohibitive, and no saloon was opened in the town.

Recently a rumor arose that a saloon man in Maplewood, with the backing of the breweries, was preparing to invade Webster Groves. Popular fear and resentment took shape in the vigorous campaign just ended, the effect of which is to repeal the ordinance and make it impossible for another vote to be taken on the question for four years.

BIG PRICES PAID FOR FLOWERS, TO AID OLD PEOPLE

Proceeds of Sales to Be Used to Install Heating Plant at Home.

Several hundred girls and women sold flowers on the downtown streets yesterday to raise money for the installation of a heating plant in the new 18-room house of the Christian Old People's Home, at Taylor, Margaretta, Mansion and San Francisco avenues.

Hurrying business men, as well as strollers, were halted when large bunches of roses and chrysanthemums were flourished before them, or when fair fingers seized upon their arms and could not be shaken off until a flower was purchased.

The buyers were permitted to set their own price, and some paid as much as $5 and $10 for a single buttonhole bouquet. Many matrons enlisted in the sale, and a chaperon was in charge of each block.

The enterprise was conducted by the Christian Women's National Benevolent Society.

Among those actively interested in the flower sale were Mmes. M. R. Baldwin, Hudson Stilwell, Walter B. Stevens, L. P. Crigler, Frank M. Grant, Henry Fairback, A. L. Meyer, A. E. Morgan, H. B. Remarkable Skin Cure in St. Louis

C. I. Swinhart Tells of Complete Relief From Skin Disease by Use of D. D. D.

St. Louis, Mo.

I had eczema on both feet so bad that I had to wear bandages. I could not go two days without scratching the skin off. The first bottle of D. D. D. I used I thought it was like all the rest of the cures I had used. But by the time I had used three bottles almost all trace of the eczema had disappeared.

I have used just four bottles and am positively cured. So you see four bottles has cured an extra chronic case of extra long standing.

I have been born and raised in St. Louis and am quite well known.

C. I. SWINHART, 4729 Maffitt av.

So confident are we that the D. D. D. Prescription will reach your case, too, that if the very first full-size bottle fails to do exactly as is claimed, it will not cost you a cent. Drop in and let us tell you about this great remedy, D. D. D.

LAST NOTE FROM JAPAN ON LAND LAW UNANSWERED

Channels of Diplomatic Correspondence Exhausted and No Results Obtained.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—It was inferred in official circles here today that the channels of diplomatic correspondence between Japan and the United States over the California alien land law have ben exhausted without results and that any action looking to an adjustment of the tangle must come from a new move by one power or the other.

The correspondence was exhaustive and the last note presented by Japan many weeks ago remains unanswered at the State Department, for the reason, it is said, that despite the numerous changes, the controversy remained exactly where it was at the start.

It is understood that Japan throughout maintained its treaty rights were invaded by the law, while the United States argues as persistently to the contrary.

If I Ate That I Would Die

You Will Never Fear Food If You Go to a Dinner Carrying One Little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

You needn't pass up all those savory dishes just because you are afraid of what the stomach will say to them. Armed with a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you can bid defiance to the most cantankerous stomach and be assured that your food will be perfectly digested in spite of the stomach's objections.

"At Every Banquet You Will Always See Some Person Who Is Afraid of Food."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a compound of pepsin and those elements that must be secreted by the stomach if the food is to be digested. When the stomach fails to secrete enough of these digestive agencies, the only sane remedy is to supply a sufficient quantity of these elements to digest the food. This is the service for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were made and they are recommended by leading doctors and scientists. One or two of these tablets is sufficient to digest the largest dinner. They stop almost instantly all forms of indigestion, such as sour stomach, belching, heartburn, dizziness, brash and dysentery. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain digestive elements, a single grain of which is capable of digesting 3000 grains of food, such as meats, eggs, grains, vegetables, starches and mineral matters of all kinds.

If your stomach is sluggish or worn out, let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do your digesting for you until the stomach can recuperate. Give it a little vacation. It has a hard enough struggle at the best, with all you put in it. And even when your stomach is in perfect condition, you will occasionally need one after a big banquet or other social affair that taxes your stomach to the uttermost.

Make Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the ever-ready friend and assistant to your stomach. Get a 50c box of your druggist today.—ADV.

MEXICAN REBELS CHECKED IN MOVE TOWARD CAPITAL

Defeated Federal Generals Reorganize Forces and Start Flank Movement.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—In the absence of any change in the political situation in Mexico, official interest in Washington centered today upon military operations. Confidential reports indicate that the victorious march southward of the Constitutionalist arms has received a check, the extent of which is not yet known.

Owing to the absence of telegraphic communication and to the reluctance of the officials here to divulge any of the movements of the contending armies in Mexico, it is not possible to ascertain all of the phases of this last military development. It is understood, however, that the Federal leaders in the north who were believed to be fleeing northward toward refuge in Texas actually had abandoned that purpose. Instead, it is reported they have reorganized their forces and begun a flanking movement on the army which Gen. Villa, has rushed towards Chihuahua. Villa's communication would be seriously jeopardized by a sudden incursion from a formidable force of 1500 Federals commanded by Orozco, which is rapidly advancing toward him, apparently with the purpose of driving him into Chihuahua.

Meanwhile at least two other Federal generals with fragments of the army, reassembled after the battle of Tierra Blanca, are reported to be concentrating on Chihuahua with the purpose of entrapping Villa's command.

American Refugees Report Conditions in Monterey as Desperate.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6.—The first passenger train that has come direct from Monterey in several months, arrived here today, bringing hundreds of refugees including a number of Americans. The passenger reported that the conditions in Monterey were desperate.

Monterey Bank Burns Currency to Keep Rebels From Getting It.

LAREDO, Tex., Dec. 6.—To keep its bank notes out of the hands of the rebels who are menacing the city, the Banco Mercantile of Monterey, Mexico, the last remaining bank but one in the place, yesterday burned the entire issue left in its vaults and closed its doors, according to refugees who arrived here today. The refugees had no information as to the face value of the destroyed currency. The bank was capitalized at 2,500,000 pesos and had a surplus of 500,000 pesos. It was solvent, the refugees say, and quit business with the consent of the Government.

Federal Evacuation of Chihuahua Believed to Be Trap for Rebels.

JUAREZ, Mex., Dec. 6.—The feeling spread among Rebel leaders today that the Huerta Government was preparing surprises in connection with the projected march of Gen. Francisco Villa's army toward Mexico City.

Some belief was expressed that the Federals, in evacuating Chihuahua, planned a more concerted and energetic defense in the central and southern states.

Gen. Villa's intention to augment his present army of 7000 by the scattered bands about Torreon and Zacatecas, and to mass a solid force of 20,000 or more rebels on the march to Mexico City would place the rebels in a unique position.

Heretofore they have been scattered, while the strength of the Federals was divided by their having to garrison the northern cities.

Gen. Villa tonight was encamped at Suaz, about thirty miles north of Chihuahua. Federico Moye, the civil Governor, announced his readiness to turn the city over to the new authority. It is the first time since the days before President Diaz that this capital has changed authority while a revolution was pending.

Word came from the vicinity of Ojanaga that Gen. Mercado and the other Federal officers and troops were slowly approaching the border, and many of the civilians were on foot. The rebels had guaranteed not to disturb them until the border was reached.

Behind the refugees a bullion train is straggling across the desert with $2,500,000 worth of the metal from the silver mines at Parral.

British Flagship Suffolk Sails From Vera Cruz to Tuxpam.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 6.—The British flagship Suffolk left here today for Tuxpam. The transport Progresso sailed from Progresso with 200 infantry and 300 conscripts to reinforce Gen. Maas, operating against Gen. Aguilar in the oil regions.

JURY DECIDES TENT IS NOT A BUILDING

Commissioner's Fight to Put Shows Out of Business Stopped When Verdict Releases Man.

A tent used for a motion picture show is not a building, in the opinion of a jury in the Dayton Stree Police Court. Building Commissioner McKelvey contended that a tent for such purposes is a building of the fourth class and caused the arrest of M. J. Nash on a charge of erecting a picture show tent at Jefferson and Dodier streets in violation of the building code, which prohibits buildings of the fourth class within the fire limits.

There are 27 tent picture shows in the city and it was the announced purpose of McKelvey to make a test case in the arrest of Nash, with a view to eliminating all tent shows in the city. The proprietors of tent shows announced they would carry the case to the highest court in the event of a decision against them. The jury acquitted Nash.

POINCARE ASKS SOCIALIST TO HEAD FRENCH CABINET

Senator Doumergue Has Moderate Ideas—He Consults Former Premiers.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—Senator Gaston Doumergue, upon whom the attention of France is now fixed as President Poincare's candidate for head of a new Cabinet, is, at 50 years of age, one of the most prominent politicians in the republic. He has seen 20 years' parliamentary service in both houses, and has served as a member of four cabinets.

M. Doumergue is a Socialist. The French Socialists are divided into various sections, however, and his Socialism is of a moderate type as compared with the thoroughgoing quality adopted by Jean Jaures. M. Doumergue belongs to the groups which combined to overthrow Premier Barthou, although, as he is in the Senate, he did not take any personal part in the defeat of the Government, except in the background.

After he had been asked by President Poincare to organize a ministry, M. Doumergue arranged to consult with Georges Clemenceau, an ex-Premier; J. Louis Barthou, the retiring Premier; Joseph Cailleux, Jean Dupuy, Alexandre Felix, Joseph Ribot Aristide Briand, Leon Bourgeois, all former Premiers, and other parliamentary leaders.

ALSACE LAWS TO BE UPHELD, KAISER DECIDES

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The Constitution of Alsace-Lorraine is not to be smashed into fragments, nor is the territory to be made into a Prussian province, as Emperor William was reported to have threatened in a moment of anger last year over the Alsatians' "conduct." Now comes the declaration from him that its Constitution shall be upheld. The official Strassburg correspondence, in an article announcing the transfer of the Zabern garrison, says.

"Furthermore, the Viceroy has firm assurance from the Emperor of his will that hereafter the constitutionally guaranteed rights of Alsace-Lorraine shall find stricter observance in all respects."

The return of Count Charles von Wedel, the Governor-General of Alsace-Lorraine, from Donaueschingen, recalls the return of Chancellor von Buelow from an interview with the Emperor during the excitement over the famous Emperor William interview, which appeared in the London Daily Telegraph, in October, 1908. Chancellor von Buelow was then able to announce that His Majesty had promised to impose greater restraint upon himself. Now comes the Governor-General of Alsace-Lorraine with the important declaration of the Emperor's will that the Government shall be a government of laws.

PROGRESSIVES IN CALIFORNIA BREAK WITH THE G. O. P.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—Progressives of the State, in party conference today repudiated their one-time affiliation with the national Republican party, cheered their leader, Gov. Hiram Johnson, and entered immediately on the business of a temporary organization.

The most important development of the day was the Governor's failure to make any declaration of his own intentions, notwithstanding an early report that an important announcement was to be expected at the close of the Governor's address. The presumption was that the expected announcement would concern the senatorial situation, as it affects the next candidate of the party.

Francis J. Heney and Chester Rowell of Fresno are avowed candidates to succeed Senator Perkins, whose term expires next year, and who will not be a candidate for re-election. The rivalry between these candidates for re-election created a feeling that the only way to compose the situation would be to name Gov. Johnson, whom many considered the strongest man to represent the party nationally.

GOVERNOR SELECTS BOARD FOR A FIRE INSURANCE INQUIRY

E. F. Goltra Chairman of Commission That Will Investigate Missouri Rates.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 6.—An Insurance Commission was appointed by Gov. Major today to investigate rates and conditions surrounding fire insurance in Missouri and to report to the next Legislature. The Governor appointed Edward F. Goltra of St. Louis, Insurance Superintendent Charles G. Revelle, C. D. Goodrun of Lamar, J. B. Reynolds of Kansas City, George Clayton of Hannibal, and M D. Aber of Warrensburg. Aber is a Republican. Goltra will be chairman.

The Governor addressed a letter to each of the members of the commission, setting out the scope of the inquiry and its purposes. He laid stress on the subject of fire waste and its relation to rates. He recommended the creation of the office of Fire Marshal with power to investigate all fire losses and to require buildings to be kept as free of fire hazards as possible.

He informed the commissioners that whatever their report he would feel free to differ with it.

While there is no money available for such an inquiry the Governor said he would recommend to the next Legislature that it make an appropriation to cover the cost of the inquiry and the expense incurred by the members of the commission.

He recommended that the commission hold open sessions so that the public could be fully advised on what was being investigated.

M. D. Aber was formerly Assistant Superintendent of Insurance and J. B. Reynolds, now the head of an insurance company, was formerly an actuary. C. D. Goodrun is a banker and business man and Clayton is an insurance agent.

PRESIDENT TO CONFER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Anti-trust plans will be discussed at a conference between President Wilson and Chairman Clayton of the House Judiciary Committee Monday.

Democrats of the committee conferred today over the variety of pending bills. While one or two members believed that they had some clear ideas of what the program in Congress should be, some of the ranking members declared that no two members of the committee were in accord.

How Government Proposes to Abolish Bridge Arbitrary; Terminal's Interpretation

THE important issue in the controversy between the Government and the Terminal Railroad Association with respect to the final decree to be entered by the United States District Court in the Terminal case is the bridge arbitrary. Counsel for both the Government and the Terminal have submitted to the court forms of decrees interpreting the decision of the Supreme Court on the arbitrary. Under the form of decree submitted by the Terminal's lawyers, the Terminal Association proposes to continue making an arbitrary charge of 20 cents a ton on coal, but under the form of decree submitted by the Government the arbitrary on both passenger and freight traffic would be abolished forever. Here are the forms of decrees submitted:

Terminal's Version.

"It is now ordered, adjudged and decreed that the defendants (Terminal Railroad Association and 14 proprietary lines) and the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained. * * *

"Fourth, From making any special or so-called arbitrary charge in respect of the traffic originating within the so-called 100-mile area about St. Louis that is not equally and in like manner applied in respect of all other traffic of a like character originating outside of that area."

Government's Version.

"Fourth. It is ordered and decred that the defendants herein and any existing or future railroad company acquiring a joint ownership in or a right to use the terminal properties now held or hereafter acquired by the defendants are hereby enjoined from and shall not make a special or so-called arbitrary charge (commonly known as 'the arbitrary upon traffic destined to St. Louis, Missouri, or points beyond, or originating in St. Louis, Missouri, or passing through St. Louis, Missouri, or the St. Louis Railway Gateway to points beyond for the use of and transportation over the terminal properties and facilities the defendants now own or may hereafter acquire, between the termini of the proprietary railroads of said Terminal Association in St. Louis, Missouri; East St. Louis, Granite City, Madison, Venice and Brooklyn, Illinois, nor between the termini of the proprietary railroads of said Terminal Association in the territory of the St. Louis Railway Gateway in the States of Missouri and Illinois.

"And it is ordered that in the transportation and handling of traffic by the defendants, the cities and towns of St. Louis, Missouri, East St. Louis, Illinois, Madison, Granite City, Venice and Brooklyn, Illinois, and the territory in the St. Louis Railway Gateway, shall be treated by the defendants, as to rates charged, service supplied and facilities furnished, as one common commercial and business center, and the cities and towns above named herein and the territory of the St. Louis Railway Gateway shall be, as to traffic, treated as the St. Louis business district, and one and the same rate for transportation of persons and property shall be charged to and from each of the above named cities and towns and to the territory designated as the St. Louis Railway Gateway.

"And it is ordered and adjudged that no different or greater rate be charged by defendants for traffic destined to St. Louis, Missouri, than is charged for similar traffic destined to East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Granite City or Brooklyn, Illinois, or any other point in the territory designated as the St. Louis Railway Gateway; and that no greater or different rate be charged for traffic destined to East St. Louis, Madison, Granite City, Venice or Brooklyn, Illinois, or any other point in the territory designated as the St. Louis Railway Gateway than is charged for similar traffic destined to St. Louis, Missouri; that no different rate be charged upon traffic originating in St. Louis, Missouri, than is charged for similar traffic originating in East St. Louis, Venice, Granite City, Madison or Brooklyn, Illinois, or any other point in the territory known as the St. Louis Railway Gateway; that no different or greater rate be charged upon traffic originating in East St. Louis, Madison, Granite City, Venice or Brooklyn, Illinois, than is charged upon traffic originating in St. Louis, Missouri; it being intended by this decree to prevent discrimination in the handling of interstate commerce by defendants either in favor or against St. Louis, Missouri, East St. Louis, Madison, Granite City, Venice and Brooklyn, Illinois, or any other point in the territory now or hereafter designated as the St. Louis Railway Gateway.

"Delivery shall be made at any point upon the said Terminal tracks in any of the above-named cities or towns to which traffic may be billed. And defendants are hereby forever enjoined from handling traffic above mentioned except as herein indicated."

Terminal Lawyers Plead for Retention of Bridge Arbitrary

facts were. Judges Hook and Smith also asked many questions, some of which were decidedly pointed and embarrassing to the Terminal's lawyers.

Crow Wants a Clear Decree.

Attorney Crow took the position that the decree of the court with reference to the arbitrary, and all other points at issue, should be so clear, so specific and so definite in detail, that there could be no posible ground for future misunderstandings, controversy or litigation. He asserted that the form of decree proposed by the Terminal would lead certainly to future litigation, which would have to go again to the Supreme Court for final adjudication. His decree, he asserted, eliminated all possibility of future controversies or litigation by defining clearly what the Terminal and the constituent railroads could do and could not do.

The attorneys for the Terminal, on the other hand, contended that the court should not make a fixed ruling with respect to the arbitrary, but should leave the question open as one of rate making, to be determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission. They called the court's attention to the fact that complaints involving the validity of the arbitrary already had been filed with the commission and were scheduled for hearing in St. Louis, Dec. 15.

An important fact, not heretofore generally known, which was developed by the argument, was that the Terminal Railroad Association makes a charge of 10 cents a ton for switching and delivery in East St. Louis which the carrying railroad loses out of the 32-cent rate, while on shipments to St. Louis no part of the Terminal charge is borne by the railroad.

It thus was disclosed that on all the coal handled in East St. Louis by the Terminal Railroad Association the net revenue to the carrying road is only 22 cents a ton, while on coal delivered to the Terminal under exactly the same conditions for delivery to St. Louis the net revenue to the carrier is 32 cents a ton.

When this fact was brought out, Judge Smith declared that it was a glaring discrimination against St. Louis, which the Interstate Commerce Commission should remedy promptly.

It also was shown that the railroads hauled coal 60 to 75 miles to East St Louis for the same rate charged for hauling it 6 to 15 miles. The Terminal's lawyers contended this uniform rate for the large coal area of Southern Illinois was necessary to enable all mines in the district to compete in the St. Louis market.

Crow called the attention of the court, to this argument of the Terminal's lawyers and declared that, While the railroads were willing to apply uniform rates to a very large mining district to enable the coal

Some Interesting Facts About Kidney Troubles

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot readily be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1912, in the State of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation, in most cases, is soon realized, according to sworn statements and verified testimony of those who have used the remedy.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper, enclose 10 cents and they will gladly forward it to you by Parcel Post.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c and $1.00.

WOMEN IDENTIFY KIMONO MISSING FROM KNABE FLAT

Faded Garment Recovered From Undertaker Was Slain Doctor's, Two Witnesses Say.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Dec. 6.—The State's side was not completed today when court adjourned to Monday in the trial of Dr. William B. Craig of Indianapolis, charged with the murder of Dr. Helene Knabe of Indianapolis.

Miss Augusta Knabe, cousin of Dr. Knabe, was being questioned on direct examination at the time of adjournment. Miss Knabe wept softly when handed a kimono which she identified as one she had given to Dr. Knabe as a Christmas present. The witness said the kimono was a beautiful navy blue with red poppy flowers, but that now it looked like a faded rag. This corroborated Miss Katherine McPherson's testimony.

She said she saw it hanging in a closet in Dr. Knabe's flat a short time before her death and the next time she saw it, it was in the possession of Alonzo M. Ragsdale, undertaker, who was indicted as an accessory after the fact.

The State contends the kimono was put through a chemical process to remove the blood stains. Miss Katherine McPherson, Dr. Knabe's office girl, testified Dr. Knabe was right-handed. The fatal wound in the throat started on the right side and the State contends Dr. Knabe could not have made it herself.

The defense has announced that as soon as the State finishes its case a motion will be made asking the Court to instruct the jury to bring in a verdict of acquittal on the ground that the State has failed to connect Dr. Craig with the death of Dr. Knabe. Failing of success in this, Dr. Craig and his daughter, Marion, will testify.

Miss McPherson described the finding of Dr. Knabe's body, the condition of the flat and her employer's habits. She said that she had seen Dr. Craig in Dr. Knabe's apartments twice

FINAL PLEA FOR TERMINAL BRIDGE ARBITRARY HEARD

Its Lawyers Attack the Supreme Court Decree Abolishing It.

Judges Reply to Priest's Argument as to Great Cost

JUDGE PRIEST, counsel for the Terminal, in the course of his argument, said that the great cost of the bridges and terminals should enter into consideration of the case.

Judge Hook remarked, in response to this statement, that the cost of the Grand Central Station in New York City was almost as much as the cost of building a railroad from New York to Chicago. The cost of this depot, and of the new Pennsylvania station, he said, were distributed over the New York Central and Pennsylvania system.

“And,” said Judge Smith, “it doesn't cost any more to go to New York now than it did before these new stations were built.”

companies to compete for St. Louis business, they were unwilling to apply equal rates to St. Louis and East St. Louis so that the man doing business in St. Louis could compete with the man doing business in East St. Louis.

While Attorney Priest was arguing that East St. Louis was entitled to a lower coal rate than St. Louis, on account of its natural advantages of location, he was interrupted by Judge Hook who asserted that the Terminal system would have to be considered as embracing the two cities, and that the same rates would necessarily have to apply to all points covered by the system.

When the Eads and Merchants' bridges and the Wiggins Ferry Co. were all merged, Judge Hook remarked, the Terminal Railroad Association either had to give up its right as a transportation company furnishing connecting facilities for railroads and confine tself to strictly a terminal and switching business or it necessarily would have to be dissolved, under the decision of the Supreme Court, for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, prohibiting illegal combinations in restraint of trade.

“Cost Should Be Distributed.”

In his plea for the maintenance of the arbitrary Priest declared the cost of the facilities—bridges and terminals—for hauling the coal across the Mississippi river into St. Louis must be taken into consideration. Judge Hook again interrupted with the observation that the cost of the terminal facilities and bridges properly should be distributed throughout the railroad systems owning them. He asserted that the cost of the Forty-second street station in New York City was probably as much as that of building a railroad from New York to Chicago, but that this cost was distributed over the entire railroad system of the company owning it, and that no special charge was made against any particular section of the country to aid in carrying the burden of its cost.

Judge Smith also remarked that since the New York Central and the Pennsylvania lines recently had spent many millions of dollars in the construction of tunnels and depots in New York City it did not cost any more to go from St. Louis to New York than it did before these additional facilities were provided.

Judge Hook and Attorney Priest argued the arbitrary pro and con at great length. During the colloquy, Judge Hook asserted unequivocally that it was his opinion that if the Terminal Railroad Association desired to maintain its existing organization it must stop the practice of charging an arbitrary. If it wished to maintain that arbitrary, then, he said, it was necessary that the corporation be dissolved.

Priest asked permission for Corporation Counsel Baxter of East St. Louis to be heard. Baxter asked the court's permission to file an intervening petition, protesting against the abolition of the arbitrary. The court ruled that the application was too late, but heard Baxter briefly on the form of decree to be entered. He told the court East St. Louis possessed the natural advantage of being on the east side of the river, within a few miles of the coal mines, and that for the court to issue an order requiring the same rate to be made to St. Louis and East St. Louis would destroy the advantages which nature had given to East St. Louis over St. Louis.

Pierce Pleads Reasonableness.

T. M. Pierce, general counsel for the Terminal, made an impassioned plea in support of the Terminal's right to charge an arbitrary, basing his argument on the ground of the reasonableness of the charge. Judge Smith asked him why, if the carrying railroads could afford to absorb the Terminal's switching charge in East St. Louis they could not do the same thing in St. Louis. Pierce declared the rate to East St. Louis was made by the coal-carrying roads which are not members of the Terminal. Judge Hook also pressed him for an explanation of why the railroads were satisfied with a net rate of [illegible] cents to East St. Louis on shipments destined to that city while they got [illegible] cents on St. Louis shipments for exactly the same service. Pierce's reply again was that competition controlled these conditions.

Attorney Crow contended the question of switching rates was wholly foreign to the issues in the case, and that the real issue for the court to determine was whether the same rates should apply to all parts of the Terminal system. The effect of the toll charges, he asserted, was to put a St. Louis business man at a disadvantage with an East Side competitor.

Since the rate question had been raised by the Terminal's attorney, he said he wished to call the Court's attention to the fact that coal was delivered in Madison, Venice and Granite City, eight miles from East St. Louis, by the Terminal and the carrying road at the East St. Louis rate of 32 cents a ton, but that if the train came across the bridge to St. Louis, a distance no greater than two miles, an extra charge of 20 cents a ton was made.

Average Haul Eight Miles.

It was brought out in the arguments that the average Terminal haul for coal delivered in St. Louis is about eight miles, and the average haul in East St. Louis about 3½ miles.

Crow called the Court's attention to a recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in a lumber case in which it held that St. Louis and East St. Louis constituted one industrial zone, and were entitled to the same rate. Since suit against the Terminal was filed, he said, the railroads had voluntarily abolished the arbitrary outside of the 100-mile zone, at a saving of about $2,000,000 annually to St. Louis shippers, but they were fighting for the right to maintain the arbitrary within the 100-mile zone on account of the heavy traffic originating there.

Crow's form of decree prescribed forms of contracts to be entered into between the Terminal and railroads applying for joint ownership or joint use of the terminal facilities. The Supreme Court decreed that all roads must be admitted to ownership or use of the terminal facilities on equal terms or the Terminal Association should be dissolved. The forms of contract submitted by Crow were copied from the original contracts between the railroads creating the Terminal, with the monopoly features condemned by the Supreme Court eliminated. He said it was impracticable to write a skeleton decree that would prevent controversies, and for that reason he had submitted a decree covering in detail all phases of the mandate of the Supreme Court, he said.

At the conclusion of the oral arguments, the Court ordered that Attorney Priest be given until Dec. 15 to file written objection to Crow's form of decree, and that Crow be given a week additional to reply to Priest's written statement.

Eager to Settle It Now.

Judge Sanborn said the Court was eager to have all the facts in the case submitted as early as possible, so that it could dispose of it finally. The Supreme Court's decision was handed down in May, 1912, and the attorneys for the Government and the Terminal have been fighting in the District Court ever since over the meaning of Supreme Judge Lurton's language with respect to the abolition of the arbitrary. Judges Sanborn and Smith filed an interlocutory decree in June, very similar in terms to the decree proposed by the Terminal, but Judge Hook filed a separate decree, holding that the arbitrary should be abolished in clear and specific language.

The interlocutory decree was a temporary order, made after an incomplete presentation of the case, but the final decree, to be entered after a full hearing, will be final so far as the District Court is concerned. Either side may appeal from the decree of the District Court to the Supreme Court, and this would carry the case back to the Supreme Judges for an interpretation of its first opinion.

APOLLO Player-Piano

St. Louis, Mo., October 30, 1913.

“Dear Friend—

“As you know, I dearly love music and play the piano, but I am far from being a finished musician.

“Human fingers are machinery, wretchedly stubborn, imperfect machinery. One must work with them for years before they will strike the keys accurately and with exact shade of force demanded by a difficult selection.

“I have longed, striven and exerted every possible force within me to play, so that I might enjoy the greatest of the world's music.

“One day I happened in at a music house carrying player-pianos. I saw, I heard, I was delighted. I determined then and there to be the possessor of a player-piano. But which player-piano? That was the question. I decided to see, hear and try them all. I did so, and the result of my investigation is

A SOLO-APOLLO IN MY HOME

“The joy, the satisfaction I find in the possession of my SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano is beyond words for me to express. Tender or dirge-like, dreamy or rollicking be my feeling, my SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano is my intercessor, mastering the technical difficulties of fingering which otherwise would be denied to me.

“In purchasing a Player-Piano insist that the instrument when played with the music rolls shall give the musical results as when played manually. This you will find only in the SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano. Insist that your player-piano have the DIRECT DOWN TOUCH ON THE PIANO KEYS, as in the SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano, instead of the upward push as in other players. Insist that your player-piano have the SOLO ACCENT, the DYNASTYLE, the TRANSPOSER and the METRONOME SELF-ACTING MOTOR, found only in the SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano. Insist that your player-piano have the AUTOMATIC AUTOGRAPH music roll.

“All these features are embodied in the SOLO-APOLLO Player-Piano, accurately controlled. This great instrument is revolutionizing the player-piano business today. Hear it play, and judge for yourself.”

KANSAS AND AMES ARE DROPPED FROM PIKEWAY SCHEDULE

Coach Edmunds Believes His Team Too Light to Meet Missouri Valley Huskies.

RETAINS M. U. AND DRAKE

Annual Battle With Tigers Will Be Fought at Columbia, Nov. 14, Next Season.

AMES, Io., Dec. 6.—The Missouri Valley Conference faculty officials this afternoon adjourned their annual meeting after discussing minor business. The coaches and managers after partially agreeing on schedules for basket ball and football adjourned this morning, all leaving excepting Director W. P. Edmunds of Washington University, who remained for a luncheon.

The Conference Tennis tournament was awarded to Washington to be held in the spring at St. Louis. Director Edmunds said his institution should be glad to accept the event, the date of which was left in the hands of the Minor Sports Committee.

Tigers Get Track Cup.

Director C. L. Brewer of the Missouri University was given possession of the conference track and field trophy, which the Tigers have won three times. Missouri won the cup in successive years.

The board then authorized the purchase of a new silver trophy to take the place of the one given to Missouri. The Conference cross-country run was give to Ames. It will be run here two weeks before the "Big Nine" run at Chicago in the spring.

Not during the whole two-day session was one word mentioned about the color question which grew out of the Kansas-Nebraska squabble in football. Kansas and Nebraska representatives denounced the affair.

While the faculty representatives were ignoring the subject, Director S. W. O. Hamilton of Kansas and Assistant Manager Guy Reed of Nebraska were closing negotiations for the annual Kansas-Nebraska game to be played in Lincoln, Nov. 13, and nothing [illegible] reported to have been said [illegible] "gentleman's agreement."

Pikes [illegible] Change.

It was upon the proposal of Dr. W. E. McCourt, the faculty representative of Washington University, that the rule was adopted to prohibit commencing of training for the football season before Sept. 15. He proposed to equalize the length of the football training season for all members of the Conference. Dr. McCourt also asked for a full and free discussion of the training table. The training table in the Conference was abolished several years ago and it was left in status quo.

Director Edmunds made an important change in his football schedule. He said he was dropping Ames and Kansas, retaining only Drake and Missouri because he felt that Ames and Kansas games have proved too heavy for his team. In football Washington will meet Drake at St. Louis, Oct. 31, and Missouri at Columbia, Nov. 14.

W. U. Five to Be Busy.

The coaches decided to reorganize officially an annual basket ball conference championship game between the champion fives of the North and South Ends of the Valley. Following are the Washington and Missouri basket ball schedules:

Washington University, Feb. 4 and 5, Missouri at Columbia; Feb. 6 and 7, Kansas at Lawrence; Feb. 13 and 14, Kansas at St. Louis; Feb. 20 and 21, Kansas A. C. at St. Louis; March 2 and 3, Missouri at St. Louis.

Missouri University—Jan. 12 and 13, Ames at Columbia; Jan. 16 and 17, Nebraska at Lincoln; Feb. 4 and 5, Washington at Columbia; Feb. 11 and 12, Kansas at Columbia; Feb. 13 and 14, Ames at Ames; Feb. 18 and 19, Kansas A. C. at Manhattan; Feb. 25 and 26, Kansas at Lawrence; Feb. 27 and 28, Kansas A. C. at Columbia; March 2 and 3, Washington at St. Louis.

Mike Mowrey May Go to Brooklyn for a Pitcher

Hug Plans Trade in N. Y.

Deal Pending With Superbas Will Involve Cardinal Third Sacker, While a Swap Also Is On With Giants—Local Delegation Off for Gotham.

By W. J. O'Connor.

MIKE MOWREY'S transfer to Brooklyn in exchange for a pitcher or probably an outfielder is the only transaction which threatens materialization for Manager Huggins at the National League meeting in New York Tuesday. Wilbert Robinson, new Superba leader, wants Mowrey.

Huggins will part with the flame-tipped third sacker to procure a seasoned pitcher. He might take either Allen or Reulbach.

Chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Britton Huggins will leave today at noon for New York. He's more than willing to trade any man on his team, but present indications are that rival club owners will not scramble over the baseball statuary which Huggins already has placed on the auction block.

Koney's Case Puzzling.

Ed Koney, who openly has railed against Huggins and his methods of conducting a tail-end team, may be forced to remain here because the other clubs are not knocking each other down in the fight to land the Behemoth Bohemian. However, all hope of selling Koney has not fled, as there's an outside chance of the Big Train being used as a pawn to purloin two promising men from the Giants.

Until this New York meeting is history, Huggins will have only a faint idea about the makeup of his team next season. Whether Koney will be back is a burning question. Mowrey, it seems, is through. Wingo's fate is in doubt, but here's a tip:

If Ivey remains with the Cardinals next season it will not be in the capacity of a catcher. He'll probably start off the season in the outer defense and remain there. He's too fast and too sure with the wood to remain harnessed in the mask and pad.

Hug Likes Snyder.

Anyhow Huggins thinks a deal of Snyder, the lumbering Teuton, who showed in the fag end of last season. Hug goes on record with the unqualified prediction that Snyder will be the greatest throwing catcher in either league in another season.

"I can sell him to any one of four major league teams right now," said Huggins last night, "but he's so good that I intend to keep him. He'll improve in hitting, although he never will be a great base-runner, but his throwing will astound the layman. I will start him in all the exhibition games next spring and use him as much as I can down South. Of course I rely a great deal on Glenn, the 6-footer, secured from Akron, while Pat O'Connor, drafted from Kansas City, has the experience that should do my team a heap of good."

Hug's failure to refer to Wingo leaves the inference that Ivey henceforth is a fly-chaser.

Should Mowrey go to Brooklyn, George Whitted will move into third base. Beck, seen late last fall, will be his understudy. Hauser's knee has mended and he will be relied upon to fill the gap at short, while Huggins considers himself good enough for another season at the keystone. Hug led the second sackers in fielding, with an average of .977, while he eked out a batting average of .285, despite his intense age.

The Cardinal outfield is a big gamble, but Huggins aims to so shift his outer defense that he will get rid of the left-handed hitters. Wingo may fortify right with Magee in left, while center is the one unsecured spot. Oakes, Evans, Miller, the youngster drafted from the Three Eye League, and a few kids yet to show may fight it out for the third berth.

Hug wants another pitcher, though, to help out Sallee, Doak, Perritt and Harmon. He already has snared a tiring veteran in George Suggs, while he may snare another from Brooklyn in exchange for Mowrey. Then there's the hope of developing a few from the batch of juveniles who will be taken South.

One thing is sure: Hug expects to do no worse in 1914 than he did during the '13 campaign. It can't be done!

Notre Dame and Nebraska Turned Down by "Big 9"

Conference Is Big Enough as Constituted Now, Delegates Declare at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—The Big Nine Conference faculty meeting today decided it was not expedient to enlarge the conference, thus disposing of Nebraska's and Notre Dame's ambition to get into it; declared against post-season intersectional basket-ball games and referred to the faculties of the "Big Nine" a resolution proposing to abolish professional coaches unless they are alumni of the institutions at which they work.

Fear that once the bars were let down, the "big nine" would become possibly a "big two dozen" was the basis for declining to annex Nebraska and Notre Dame. No attempt was made to prohibit conference teams from playing non-conference teams.

Radical differences were found to exist on the resolution proposing the abolition of professional coaches. Some of the members scoffed at the idea. Some of the more prominent coaches, such as A. A. Stagg of Chicago, Dr. Williams of Minnesota and others, would be debarred if the idea were made into conference law.

The conference outdoor track meet probably will be held every year henceforth on the field of the University of Chicago, it was said. The 1914 meet will be held there June 6. The indoor meet was awarded to Northwestern, on March 21.

The conference tennis tournament will be held at Madison the last Thursday, Friday and Saturday in May.

Tiger Professor Wants Football Team Abolished

Investigation Into Eligibliity May Follow Poor Work by Law Department Gridiron Stars.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 6.—At the close of the most successful football season enjoyed by the University of Missouri, faculty opposition to the gridiron game has cropped out in such a marked degree as to divide the entire school on the question of the merits of the game.

The controversy began in the law school, where several men who went out for football fell below the required grade in their studies. Prof. Manley O. Hudson, who is violently opposed to football, has asked Acting President Jones to appoint a committee to investigate the eligibility of past and future players from the law school.

Hudson declared he reported students who were doing poor work, but that these reports were ignored. Dean Lawson of the law school, who is a strong supporter of the game, said no discrimination was used in the classrooms because of a student's athletic activities.

A. A. Stagg Wins Golf Match.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 6.—Henry V. Seggerman of Englewood, N. J., today won the president's trophy in the annual autumnal gold tournament by defeating C. L. Becker of Woodland, Mass. They finished the 18 holes all even, Seggerman taking the nineteenth. A. A. Stagg, Chicago U. football coach, was an easy winner over F. D. Wilkerson (Youngstown) in the consolation flight, 4 up and 3.

Packey to Fire His Manager for St. Louis Blunder

Thiry Took $1000 for McFarland, While Trendall, Loser, Received $1500.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Upon his arrival in Chicago from St. Louis, Packey McFarland gave his manager Emil Thiry a tongue lashing that the veteran handler of fighters will never forget as long as he lives. The fact that his battle with Harry Trendall at the Coliseum in St. Louis drew over $6000 and he was only cut in for a thousand dollars got Packey's goat.

When Thiry approached Packey at Lewis' gymnasium today the stockyards wizard hardly recognized him. Then Thiry inquired what was the matter. Packey replied:

"You are a fine manager; you get a $1000 guarantee for me in St. Louis with a boxer like Trendall, who pulled down out of his percentage close to $1500. Where did you go to school? You must have gone to night school."

McFarland confided to his close friends that his battle on Monday night with Britton would be his last under the management of Thiry. He admitted he has been trying to shake his manager for the past six months.

Packey McFarland says he will demonstrate his punching power when he steps into the ring.

"Just because I have not knocked out every opponent in most of my battles," remarked Packey, "the boys say 'Packey's a good boy, but he can't hit.'

"Britton tried to steal a decision from me when we met at Memphis on the first occasion, but failed, and after I beat him in decisive style in New York, his manager sent out a story that I was beaten. It was a good, tough battle, but when every paper in New York except one gave it to me, it is hard to see where Britton accomplished a great deal."

KIVIAT WINS NATIONAL CROSS-COUNTRY RUN

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Abel R. Kiviat of the Irish-American A. C., holder of the world's one-mile indoor record, won the national senior cross-country championship of the Amateur Athletic Union over the six-mile course at Van Cortlandt Park this afternoon. Sidney L. Leslie of the Long Island A. C., winner of the junior national and junior metropolitan cross-country championships this year, was second, and Thomas Darden of the Irish-American A. C., third. The winner's time, 33m. 52s., is a fraction over 17s behind the record for this course recently established by Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finnish Olympic champion.

Yesterday afternoon's session of pin-toppling in the Mid-West bowling tournament, on the Washington alleys, was productive of good scores in the two-man event. L. Levine and F. Bliss, members of the Pilsen Brew five of Chicago, rocketed into first place in the doubles by collecting a total of 1232 pins. Ferguson and Havens of St. Louis formerly held the lead with 1185, but they tumbled into third place, sharing that berth with another duo, after yesterday's matinee.

Wilson and Christy of the Auditorium five of Excelsior Springs, took second place yesterday with a total of 1195, while Kinker and Rugh of the Budweiser five of this city, upset 1185 pins and tied with Havens and Ferguson for third place.

Bliss a Real Star.

The bowling Saturday was uniformly good. Bliss' exhibition in the doubles was almost sensational, he getting a total of 632 for his three games. He started with 201, then dished up a 225, while he closed with 206. Levine's games were 204, 204 and 192.

F. Stuernagle of the St. Clairs of East St. Louis, turned the best score in the individual division. He upset 625 pins and took third place. He had a chance to beat Bangert's record, 634, which is still high, but, after getting 227 and 222 in the opening games, he fell down to 176, missing several critical shots.

New Single Game Work.

In the last squad to bowl, the Metz five of Omaha rolled into seventh place in the team event by upsetting 2738 pins, as follows: Neale, 563; Sutherland, 490; Scipe, 555; Conrad, 581, Fenton, 549.

This team had the distinction of rolling the high single game of the tournament, turning 1044 in the final frame. This record was made as follows: Neale, 204; Sutherland, 490; Scipe, 223; Conrad, 247; Fenton, 190.

Considerable interest is being manifested in Sunday night's program when the Blatz team of Chicago will take its turn. Jimmy Blouin, Bob Rolft, C. O. Collier, Harry Steers and E. Thoma are members of this team, which is almost an all-star aggregation.

The scores of Saturday's rollings follow:

WRAY'S COLUMN

Too Much St. Louis.

JOHN T. POWERS, deposed president of the Federal League, to whose efforts for two years the third or "outlaw" league owes its existence, is debating whether to start something by way of retaliation for the treatment he received at the hands of his former associates.

Powers was in the city, yesterday, on other than baseball business, but he paused long enough in the duties of his regular job to sink a shaft or two into the well-satisfied sides of the third league. Perhaps Powers owes the organization a jab or two, for the serpent's tooth wasn't a marker for sting compared to that which his thankless child, the Federal League, eased into him.

What! Does He Mean Big Ed?

POWERS directs most of his attack at the "St. Louis bunch," which, he says tried to run the league.

"It was my opposition to them that eventually cost me the presidency," Powers told the writer. "When Covington failed and St. Louis developed so weakly I fought to drop both of them from the circuit.

Hide the Dough, Otto.

"I SUGGESTED Toledo to replace Covington, because of the long haul to Kansas City. A combination was effected by Steininger and company which was successful because the other clubs in the league felt that Stifel's money barrel was needed. By way of an 'aside,' I will say my advice to Stifel is to lock that money barrel several stories below ground.

This Sounds Reasonable, Too.

"I NEVER can understand how men ignorant of baseball could figure themselves better able to conduct the affairs of the league than the man whose patience and hard work alone brought it into being."

May Sue to Recover Stock.

POWERS is contemplating action for the recovery of one month's salary as president and 7½ per cent of the stock of each club, which he alleges are due him. The pledge of the stock had been signed by all but two clubs and was in the hands of the secretary of the league, who was to get the remaining signatures, when the document disappeared completely and has never been seen since, Powers elucidates. The stock was to have been by way of promotion payment.

The Big Three of Pugilism.

PERHAPS is the history of the boxing game no such trio of wonderful mitt artists in the same weight class ever contemporaneously existed as we find today in Packy McFarland, Freddie Welsh and Willie Ritchie. McFarland seems to be edging above the others in weight, but he still claims to be able to do 135 pounds at 3 o'clock, and until it is shown that he can't, why he must be considered.

Much speculation has been aroused as to the relative merits of these men, owing to the bickering that has for months attended attempts to match them.

Trendall Met All Three.

PERHAPS in all the country there is no one better able to offer an opinion on the three than Harry Trendall, who has fought all three men.

Against Welsh, Trendall suffered a knockout.

Against Ritchie, Trendall lost a rattling good fight.

Against McFarland he was utterly outclassed.

Packey Has Everything.

HERE'S what Trendall thinks of the men:

"Packey McFarland is undoubtedly the most wonderful boxer of the day. The McFarland I met last Thursday was wonderfully strong. He was at all times able to handle me with ease, which is more than I can remember of any other lightweight. Several times Packey lifted me up and practically placed me where he wanted me.

"Then, too, his boxing is simply bewildering. I could seldom tell from one moment to another what to expect. His style consists of an endless variety of attack. You almost never catch him off balance or in such a position that he can not lead, block, advance or break ground.

"As for his punch, it's solid and it hurts. I'm told that he 'pulled' most of his punches, in his bout against me. If he did, Packey has the force to stop anybody, if he chooses to try.

"RITCHIE is a one-style man. He has a wonderfully good left hand, but that about let's him out. He has a good head, is fast and game and has some sting to his blows. But when I fought him I felt that I had a chance.

"He puzzled me for four rounds and then I found him and almost made up, in the last two rounds, the ground I had lost in the first four. I would feel that I had a good chance with Ritchie today.

"WHEN I fought Welsh in 1908 I was green and had not had experience. He put me away cleanly enough and beat me decisively up to the knockout. Nevertheless, I am sure that I could give Welsh a good argument today and would, as with Ritchie, feel that I had a rattling chance to land on top.

"I don't think there's another man of my weight in the world who can do to me what McFarland did Thursday night in the seventh and eighth rounds—bewilder me completely. I'm free to say that I did not know from what direction the gloves were coming, at times."

Frank Benson Departs Tonight for First Swing Around Billiard Circuit

Benson will play the following towns in the order named: Milwaukee, Chicago, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland and Indianapolis.

Benson has won his only game so far, defeating Charles McCourt of Pittsburg, who made the first trip. McCourt won four out of seven games. The official standing of the league today is:

Benson	St. Louis	1	0

C. B. C. ACADEMICS LOSE FIRST GAME OF SEASON

The C. B. C. Academics, a kid football team that performs in the 110-pound division, lost their first game of the season yesterday afternoon to the Washington School of Euclid avenue and Fountain place, score 14—6. This was the first time this year that the Academics were scored upon.

Gray starred for Washington, making two touchdowns. Jack Toner, who was knocked out late in the game, scored the Academics' only touchdown, getting a long forward pass from Theobold and running 45 yards. Wells also did well for the college team.

New Men on Princeton Board.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 6.—Princeton's graduate coaching committee met here today and Roscoe P. McCleave, '03, who has been chairman of the Football Committee during the last two seasons, and Philip H. King, '92, automatically severed their connection from the committee. The other three men, Knowlston Ames, '90; Donald G. Herring, '07, and Barclay H. Fare, '12, were re-elected to the committee by the Board of Athletic Control and they appointed Ames as chairman.

YEATMAN DEFEATS SOLDAN FIVE IN A FAST GAME, 20-13

McKinley Triumphs Over Central in Second Game of Opening Double-Header, 28—19.

In a game marred by constant fouling and fumbling of both fives, Yeatman High defeated the Soldan quintet last night at Louisiana Hall by the score of 20 to 13. Both teams showed a fair amount of teamwork, but the basket throwing was abominable. Time after time easy shots were missed.

At the end of the first half the score was 8 to 6 in favor of the West Enders. Yeatman came back with a vengeance in the second half and scored 14 points to their opponents' 5. Smedley, of Soldan, was the star of the game, scoring 11 of his team's points. Krause starred for the North Enders.

The second game was a revelation, the contest being in doubt until the last three minutes of play, when McKinley, with a final rush, shot a volley of baskets. The greater part of the first half was in Central's favor by a bare margin. The period ended with the score 13 to 11 in favor of McKinley.

The next half was played on even terms until time was almost up. Fitzgerald, Bryant and French then got going and after that Central was unable to cope with their play. French and Martens were stars of their respective fives.

A large crowd was on hand, filling the hall to capacity. Yeatman and McKinley were best represented

SYNODICAL FIVE WINS FROM CHRISTIAN TEAM

FULTON, Mo., Dec. 6.—The basket ball team of Synodical College of Fulton tonight defeated Christian College of Columbia, 28 to 15, making the second successive victory for the Fulton team. The success of the Seminoles has caused the management to enter the field for the championship of Missouri and the next game will be with Howard Payne of Fayette.

Synodical won handily tonight and was never in danger. Isabelle Megede of the winners threw 11 goals. Capt. Katherine Megede, Rachael Newby and Ruth Barker of St. Louis also played well. Capt. Maud Lantz and Esther Marshall did the best work for the visitors. The officials were: Referee, George Taffe (Missouri). Umpire, Robert Andrae of St. Louis. Timekeeper, C. C. Bragg of Kansas City.

IRVING AND LOW LOSE IN SQUASH TOURNAMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Reversals furnished the enlivening element with Josiah O. Low and Louis Dupont Irving going by the board at the beginning of the third national squash tennis handicap tournament today on the courts of the Harvard club. Low of the Heights Casino and the winner of the great meeting last year, fell before the rapid fire shooting of M. L. Cornell of the Columbia University Club forces, at 15—8, 15—8. Low was on the minus 5 aces mark and Cornell at plus 5 aces and half a hand.

Irving, because of his splendid victory over Dr. Alfred Stillman II, in the Harvard championship was placed among the few who received the mark of minus 6 aces, 2 or no count. George Whitney, the holder of the national championship, and Dr. Stillman were the only others having this handicap. It proved more than Irving could stagger along with. He made a brave fight against William H. Hackett who was at minus 5 aces, to be beaten at 15—5, 15—9.

Opportunity Knocks at Almost Everybody's Door, but Very Few Rap to It

OLLIE KIRK WILL HAVE TO WORK TO WHIP BRESNAHAN

Omaha Fighter Should Show Well in Queensberry A. C. Feature.

HIS RECORD IS GOOD

St. Louis Star's Famous Left Will Be Busy Keeping Rival at Bay.

Local Bouts This Week.

FUTURE CITY, DEC. 9.

Johnny Solsberg of Brooklyn vs. Jimmy Foley of St. Louis, 8 rounds at 122 pounds.

Charley Cain vs. Lou Nauman, 8 rounds at 128 pounds.

Monte Dale vs. Young Ketchel, 8 rounds at 133 pounds.

Frank Lowry vs. Jommy Kelly, 8 rounds at 122 pounds.

QUEENSBERRY A. C., DEC. 11.

Oliver Kirk, St. Louis, vs. Tommy Bresnahan, Omaha, 8 rounds, 128 pounds.

Frankie Whitney, Cedar Rapids, vs. Red Robinson, Pittsburg, 8 rounds, 115 pounds.

Two St. Louis athletic clubs have boxing bouts scheduled for this week, the Future City staging its show next Tuesday, while the Queensberry A. C. will make another attempt to get into the game on Thursday. The cards of both are printed above.

The Future City has one event of real class on its program—that between Solsberg and Foley. The latter showed in his recent outs that he can fight cleanly and effectively, while Solsberg has pleased in his appearances here.

Solsberg may be conceding a bit of weight to Foley, but he is used to doing that, and it will not worry him. He is a heady, careful fighter and he will be hard to defeat.

The rest of the club's card is fair.

New Faces to Be Seen.

The three bouts announced by the Queensberry Club are all good ones, if not exactly "all-star," as the management hints. Two of the fighters are totally unknown here, as far as their boxing appearance in this city is concerned. They are Red Robinson, who opposes a good boy in Frankie Whitney, and Tommy Bresnahan of Omaha, Kirk's opponent in the windup.

Robinson is a Pittsburg lightweight of some pretension. He defeated so good a star as Milburn Saylor and tucked away Mickey Rodgers for the count. He has also won from Young Erne, the Philadelphia welterweight of some note. Red is recognized as the champion of Pennsylvania.

Whitney is an improving boy with a wallop. He will trade punches with anybody in the world, as Grover Hayes, Bat Nelson, Joe Thomas, Dick Hyland and others have reason to remember. He's a Class A boy and right close to the big leaguers now.

Bresnahan a Good Boy.

Bresnahan is just too light to avoid the limelight. Like Packey McFarland, nature handicapped him out of a chance by two or three pounds, only in Bresnahan's case the poundage fell short of the lightweight class, instead of over it. Bresnahan weighs 131 pounds at his very best. He has fought a draw with his rival 128-pounder, Charley White, who ranks with the very best, and with Champion Johnny Kilbane. He has won from Tommy Dixon, Willie Gibbs and One-Round Hogan. He knocked out Battling Hogan, Otto Yacknow and others. He is a classful little lad.

Kirk is too well known to need mention here. He is coming back after the severe jolt he gave his constitution cutting down to 122 pounds for Johnny Kilbane.

Mike Orrison, the Kansas City lad who meets Meiers in the preliminary, has shown here before. He's a rattling good little fellow and has lost but one battle out of 56. That was to Champion Johnny Coulon.

The Moose Club sidetracked its regular show due next Saturday in favor of the Granite City Moose lodge, which is staging an entertainment. Dec. 20 the local order will again get busy. No matches have been as yet booked.

10 Yankee Athletes to Be Sent to Greece to Compete in Big Events

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Irish-American Athletic Club has decided to send at least 10 men, headed by Melvin W. Sheppard, the hero of several Olympic series, to represent it in the Athenaeum Olympic games to be held in Athens next May. This team is expected to form the nucleus of a squad from all over the United States, who will wear the shield in competition against the picked men of other nations.

Sheppard, the present track and field captain of the Irish-Americans, was the first man chosen to make the trip and the Athletic Committee of the club is said to be a unit on the proposition that the best of the athletes of the club should abstain from any serious competition this winter, in order that they may be fit for the Athens invasion.

It is anticipated that men from Boston, Chicago and San Francisco will be included in the makeup of the American team, the expenses of the men to be met by the clubs they represent. In this manner the United States will be enabled to make a good showing, which will be necessary in view of the announced intention of England, Germany, Sweden and France to have competitors on the scene.

TINKER REFUSED TO RESPECT WISH OF OWNER, FIRED

Cincinnati Manager's Plight a Parallel to Bresnahan's Case in St. Louis.

Roger Bresnahan's meal ticket was punched by President J. C. Jones of the Cardinals, a year ago, because Roger, to Jones' way of thinking, emulated the antics of a bull in a china shop. That goes double for Joe Tinker, the Rhineland martyr.

Tinker was too big for the job he held, according to inside information from Cincinnati. His ability as a manager of ball players never was seriously or derogatorily questioned, but his inability to manage himself was manifested so often that Garry Herrmann, between steins, slipped him the tin.

Tinker's first outbreak dates back to the spring series training season last year when he refused to play an exhibition game booked by Owner Herrmann. Later he collided head-on with Herrmann over the purchase and sale of players. Joe, foolishly aired his troubles in the news columns.

Mr. Tinker Rears Back.

But the cap sheaf came at the minor league meeting in Columbus. This meeting, held on Nov. 12, was just after Tinker had reached an agreement to manage the Reds in 1914. However, coincident with Joe's renewal of his managerial contract, come a change in secretarys at Cincinnati.

The new secretary was empowered by Garry Herrmann to give out the news. He proceeded to discharge his duty at the Columbus meeting. He "beat Tinker to" one announcement, and Tinker promptly told the new secretary to pack his baggage and decamp. The secretary did, but Owner Herrman, incensed, fired Tinker, sans preliminaries.

Herrmann, just now, has no idea who will succeed Tinker. However, he needs a shortstop badly. The need of a shortstop may influence the next managerial move, and for that reason there's a royal good chance that Mike Doolan of Philadelphia may get the job. However, there's a bare possibility that Roger Bresnahan may be used should the Cubs turn over Roger and Red Corriden for Tinker. But the job is open, with no definite idea in Herrmann's head about how it will be filled. In that way he's not as well off as the Cardinal management was when Roger was routed. Hug was being groomed for Bresnahan's job before the ax fell.

Robison Field Soccer League Put Under Ban

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 6.

A DEATH blow was dealt tonight to the proposed trip of the Hibernians of Philadelphia, champions of the Pennsylvania League, and the Fall River Rovers of Fall River, Mass., to visit St. Louis, Mo., during the Christmas holidays and play exhibition games.

After a spirited debate the American Football Association went on record by a vote of 12 to 5 to give permission to the teams to go West, but only allowed them to play games with clubs affiliated with the United States Football Association. This bars the Robison Field teams of St. Louis. Twenty-one of the 41 clubs were represented.

Frank Kramer Defeats Star Cyclists for Sprint Championship of World

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Frank Kramer of Newark, the American champion, captured the title of the world's greatest sprinter tonight in the bicycle races at Madison Square Garden. He defeated a trio of the fastest riders in the world in straight heats.

Kramer was opposed by Jackie Clarke of Australia, Francisco Verri of Italy, and Andre Perchicot of France. In each heat, which were at a half mile and one mile, the American showed that he possessed the best finish. In each he won by the margin of inches only.

The first race was at half a mile. As the gun cracked, Verri, the Italian, sped away at a terrific clip. There was no jockeying. Each was eager to win in fast time, with the result that the quartet rode their mightiest all the way.

The Italian held command until within less than 20 yards from the finish. Then Kramer strained every muscle in his huge frame and with a dying effort shot his wheel up the embankment and across the line less than a foot in front. Verri finished second, a wheel's length in front of Clarke, who was a similar distance ahead of Perchicot. Kramer's time for the half mile was 1:03 1-5.

INNISFAILS HOPE TO BREAK TIE BY BEATING TERESAS

Victory for Foley's Men Probably Will Give Columbus Club the Lead.

A victory for the fast-improving Innisfails this afternoon at Robison Field, will tumble the Teresas, their adversaries this day, into second place. At present the Teresas are tied with the Columbus club for the upper berth while the Innisfails are trailing in third place, three points behind the pacemakers.

The Columbus club occupies a soft spot today, bucking the tail-end Athletics. King Finnegan's men are in prime shape and serenely confident of grabbing the bacon. The Innisfails, on the other hand, are weakened by the loss of two stars and the going against the Teresas may prove strenuous.

Newsies at Athletic Park.

The Post-Dispatch newsies, who were disappointed last Sunday because rain forced a postponement, will be entertained this afternoon at Athletic Park as the guests of the management. They will see Billy Klosterman's high-stepping St. Leos in conflict with the Millers, who are dangerously near the top rung in the championship ladder. A victory for the Millers today will put them on even terms with the St. Leos, who still hold the upper berth.

In the first frolic, the Rock Church eleven will buck the C. A. C. team, starting at 2 o'clock.

Energies Are More Keen and Respond Quickly to Help.

If you are down with rheumatism; if you sneeze, feel chilled, are choked with catarrh, have a cough, or your skin is pimpled and irritated with rash, eczema or any other blood disorder just remember that all the ills of life come from impure blood. And you can easily give your blood a good thorough cleansing, a bath, by using S. S. S. There is no need for anyone to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities. No matter how badly they attack the system, or how unsightly becomes the skin, just remember there is one ingredient in S. S. S. that so stimulates the cellular tissues throughout the body that each part selects its own essential nutriment from the blood.
This means that all decay, all breaking down of the tissues, is checked and repair work begins. S. S. S. has such a specific influence on all local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and afford a proper relative assistance to each other. More attention is being given to scientific medicine than ever before and S. S. S. is the highest achievement in this line. For many years people relied upon Mercury, Iodide of Potash, Arsenic, [illegible] Cathartics and "Dope" as remedies for blood sickness, but now the pure vegetable S. S. S. is their safeguard.

HASKELL INDIANS OWN TOP SCORING MARK FOR SEASON

Redmen Rolled Up 419 Points Against 31 for Opponents, in Football Games.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Dec. 6.—The Haskell Indians football team of Lawrence claims the world's 1913 record for the total number of points scored during the season just closed, the Braves having made a total of 419 points in the 11 games played. It is doubtful if any major or minor team can produce a record that will approach that of the fleet-footed red men.

In addition to this the Braves kept the scores against them down to a figure which approaches another record. In these same 11 games but 31 points were made against the Indians.

During the entire season but four touchdowns were made against the Indians.

Of these, three were of the "fluke" variety, while the fourth, the one made by the Nebraskans, should not have been counted. A high wind that prevailed on the day of the game at Lincoln caught a Haskell punt and carried the ball back into Haskell territory, giving the Cornhuskers a chance which football critics who observed the game declare they should not have had.

Richards Individual Star.

Individual scoring honors for the season go to "Tex" Richards, the speedy halfback of the team. Richards carried the ball over the line for a total of 25 touchdowns, scoring a total of 150 points for his team. Even the mighty Brickley, famous for his footwork, cannot compete with the Indian in the matter of scores.

Much of the success of the season is credited to the natural abilities of the fleet-footed redskins. Light and fast, the open game was their natural style of play.

Good Season in Prospect.

The outlook for another big season for the Indians of 1914 could hardly be better. Only two of the old men will be lost to the team, while there is an abundance of new material at the Haskell school. Haskell plans a heavier schedule for next year, and the Braves hope to secure games with some of the stronger teams of the Middle West and the Missouri Valley.

Following is the record of the season just closed:

Haskell 62, Kansas City Veterinary College 0.
Haskell 23, Kansas Normals 7.
Haskell 101, Midland College 0.
Haskell 26, Baker University 0.
Haskell 60, College of Emporia 0.
Haskell 7, Nebraska University 7.
Haskell 7, Creighton University 0.
Haskell [illegible], Morningside University 0.
Haskell [illegible], Texas A. and M. 0.
Haskell 40, Missouri Normals 7.
Haskell 20, Christian Brothers College 10.
Total Haskell scores, 419; total opponents' scores, 31.

Tommy Sullivan Narrowly Missed Featherweight Title

McGovern's Lucky Break

Failure of Brooklyn Idol to Get First Crack at Dixon Years Ago Cost Him Honor of Wearing Crown—Sharpe Explains Rules.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority

IT is probable that very few of the boxing fans in St. Louis know how narrowly "Brooklyn" Tommy Sullivan, president of the Future City Athletic Club, escaped the title of featherweight champion, and had it not been for the good fortune that gave Terry McGovern first chance at George Dixon, then king of the featherweight division, it might have been Sullivan's honor to wear the crown so long and ably defended by "Little Chocolate," as Dixon was known.

Sullivan and McGovern were rivals for fistic honors in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., and each had a large following. This resulted in their being matched by the Greenwood A. C. of Brooklyn, in June, 1897, and their meeting was the occasion of a hard fight and ended in a 10-round draw. At the time they were regarded as the two best featherweights in Brooklyn, a city that was turning out scores of good fighting men, and the 10-round draw intensified the feeling of rivalry between the two little Irishmen. Efforts were made to rematch them, but they were unable to come to terms.

On April 28, 1899, McGovern was sent into the ring of the Broadway A. C., New York City, to fight Joe Bernstein, at that time considered one of the hardest nuts in the ring to crack, being a fast, clever boxer, a hard hitter and game to the core. The contest lasted 25 rounds and resulted in McGovern being declared the winner.

Dixon Shades Bernstein.

Then, on the second day of June, 1899, George Dixon took Bernstein before the same club, and after a hard fight of 25 rounds Dixon was given the decision.

Dixon was a popular favorite, as he remained throughout his career as a boxer, and the Broadway A. C. decided on a match for Jan. 9, 1900, with Dixon as one of the principals and Terry McGovern or Tommy Sullivan as the other. It happened that McGovern was given the preference because of his fine showing against Bernstein and because he was an older and more experienced fighter than Sullivan, who was then 18 years of age and was considered too young to cope with an experienced veteran of the ring like Dixon. McGovern got the match and created a sensation by stopping Dixon in eight rounds of what had been scheduled as a 25-round fight.

Sullivan and his friends were clamoring for a chance at Dixon, and the two were finally matched for a fight of 20 rounds before the Coney Island A. C. on July 31, 1900. It resulted in a hard and fast fight and for the first four rounds neither held any advantage, but in the sixth round Tom O'Rourke, manager and chief second for Dixon, threw a sponge in the ring and gave up the fight for Dixon, to save his man from a knockout.

Sullivan Puts Dixon Out.

Sullivan had succeeded in defeating Dixon in two rounds less than it had taken McGovern to accomplish it, and this boomed Sullivan's stock to such an extent that immediate efforts were made to match Sullivan with McGovern, but without success. Instead, McGovern took on Bernstein for the second time and the match took place on Nov. 2, 1900, at Louisville, Ky. This time McGovern knocked Bernstein out in the seventh round.

Upon Bernstein's return to New York City he was matched with Sullivan for a 20-round fight, to take place shortly afterwards at New Britain, Conn. Bernstein was outclassed and the fight was stopped in the fifth round, to prevent his being knocked out.

Considering that Sullivan disposed of both Dixon and Bernstein in shorter time than was required by McGovern, it has always remained "Brooklyn" Tommy's belief that had he been given first chance at Dixon, he, instead of McGovern, would have been crowned featherweight champion.

Crouse Didn't Foul.

During the bout which took place between Albert "Buck" Crouse and Billy Grupp on last Tuesday night at the Future City Athletic Club some of the spectators frequently called "Foul!" when Crouse used a backhand blow by drawing his arm quickly back after having missed with a hook or swing. They were in error. This is not a foul blow, so long as it is administered with the back or side of the glove, and this Crouse was doing. McFarland did this often in his recent bout with Harry Trendall and no exception was taken.

It was a favorite method resorted to by Tommy Ryan and Bob Fitzsimmons for punishing effect, except that those two great fighters aimed to land the blow with their wrist bone, instead of with the glove. This, of course, was a violation of the rules and both were often criticised for using it, but never, to my knowledge, disqualified. It is a breach of the rules very hard to detect unless it be repeated a number of times and with evident intent and purpose.

In the same way, many people are led to suppose that the "pivot" blow is foul. If it is delivered with the glove it is fair. Some agitation was aroused against its use some years ago upon the occasion of Jack Dempsey's defeat by Le Blanch, "The Marine," in a fight that took place in San Francisco.

Cal. Dempsey had given a hard beating to Le Blanch and the latter was staggering about the ring, almost ready to drop, when suddenly he whirled with a "pivot" blow that landed squarely upon the neck of Dempsey and knocked him out. It was an unexpected turn in the tide of the battle, and it came so quickly that the spectators were divided in their opinion as to whether it was the glove or the bone of the arm which had struck Dempsey, and even the referee was unable to say. As a result, for several years afterwards it was customary among fighters to bar the "pivot" blow by agreement, but otherwise there is nothing to prevent its use by a boxer who cares to take the risk.

BROWNS FORCED BY COMMISSION TO TAKE LEARY

Utica Player, Drafted by Birmingham, Awarded to Hedges in Expensive Deal.

By a peculiar, but still characteristic ruling, the National Commission has forced the Browns to accept a player Manager Rickey didn't want. The man in question in Catcher Leary of the Utica (New York State League) club.

When the drafting session was on in September the Browns filed on Leary, but in the drawing the Cincinnati club won first claim and the Browns second. Cincinnati then waived claim, but the commission inadvertently failed to notify the Browns.

So Leary was at large and the Birmingham (Southern League) team got him via the draft for $600. Had Hedges won Leary in draft he would have paid Utica $1200.

Now Birmingham and the Browns are very friendly. The National Commission sniffed around and scented collusion so as to avoid an expenditure of $600. Whereupon the supreme body met and awarded Leary to the Browns.

He will be taken South and if not of major league caliber may be sold to Birmingham next April. But the National Commission will have carried its point, to-wit:

"A player must be given every opportunity to advance in his profession." If that's really what the comish was hitting at.

HAGEN TO PLAY WITH ROCK CHURCH ELEVEN

Emil Hagen, the speedy young forward of the McCarthy's in the Hynes Soccer League, will line up with the Rock Church team at Athletic Park this afternoon in the second game with the Columbian Athletic Club. Hagen played with the Visitation eleven in the Amateur Soccer League at C. B. C. last season.

CLOSE GAMES PLAYED IN PAROCHIAL LEAGUE

Five keenly contested games were played in the Parochial Soccer League yesterday at C. B. C. campus, with the following results: Division A—St. Leos 2, Rock Church 0; St. Marks 3, Visitation 2.

Division B—St. Edwards 2, St. Michaels 0; St. Mathews Jr. 2, Holy Rosary 1; Blessed Sacrament 2, Rock Church Jr. 0.

Yanks Awarded $250.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 6.—The National Baseball Commission today allowed the claim of the New York Club of the American League for $250, which is the remainder of $500 due it from the Albany club of the New York State League for the release to the latter of the services of Player F. Gaiser under an agreement entered into on April 9 last.

Figures Show Carey of Pirates Best National League Outfielder

STAR outfielders are scarce in the National League—at least when one sets Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Joe Jackson up as a basis of computation. Of course Cobb is almost peerless while Speaker and Jackson are not far from it, but the National League has a few stars, e'en though none shine so bright as the American League's great trinity.

To single out the best fly-chaser in the parent body isn't easy. Most experts regard Dode Paskert as the greatest fielder, but Dode isn't such a much with the stick. He hit .262 this year. Zach Wheat is always a .300 hitter, but he has his shortcomings. Murray of the Giants is a wicked hitter, fast, and a great thrower, but his dome runs to ivory at times.

Tommy Leach is a grand old man who should be retired on pension even though he still can hit .287. There are others who are near-greats, but after digesting both the batting and fielding figures one is almost forced to hand Max Carey of the Pirates the palm for allround efficiency.

Carey Best Baserunner.

Carey, who is wintering in St. Louis, had a big year in 1913. He led the National League in baserunning, with 61 thefts and also in run-getting. He scored 99 times. These are very essential facts. He batted only .277, which is below his average, but he played in every game and made 23 doubles.

As a fielder his record is promising. He ranks away down, but possibly many of his errors—he has 16—are the result of his willingness to try for everything. Some fly-chasers who are leading the League in the official rating would be last if errors of omission were recorded. Carey is a hard worker, as proved by the fact that he had more chances than any other man in the league last season. He accepted 407 chances, having 28 assists, which tends to prove that he's active. He had more assists than any other outfielder.

Considering, therefore, that Max led the League in assists, putouts, scoring runs and stealing bases, it doesn't seem unjust to slip him the palm for all-around superiority.

Hans Lobert led the third sackers in fielding and was second to Heine Zim in swatting. He swiped 48 hassocks and scored 98 runs, one less than Carey, giving him a good reason for being ranked high. Withal, Manager Dooin hooked onto Bobby Byrne and gossips have it that Bobby will be the Phils' regular third sacker. Figures tend to prove that the gossips are wrong—all wrong.

BUYING TRUCKS.

F. C. Meyer, secretary of the Palmer-Meyer Motor Car Co., St. Louis, announced this week the sale of the fourth Palmer truck this year to the Shapleigh Hardware Co. The latest truck is the 3000-pound model, which was added to the Palmer line for the 1914 season. The three previous trucks sold to Shapleigh were of the 2000-pound type. All of the cars have express bodies with tops.

Meyer also announced the sale of a 3000-pound car to Tuxhorn Bros.' Hardware and Furniture Co. of Edwardsville, Ill., and to the J. H. Tiemeyer Carpet Co. of 514 Franklin avenue. Another sale of the week was to the Lafayette Smith Grocer Co. of Springfield, Ill.

"38" PACKARD "48"

Packard cars receive their highest endorsement from experienced users of other cars, who when driving a Packard have realized for the first time the nearest approach to complete motoring satisfaction. A prominent motorist—owner and driver of nearly every so-called high grade car produced in America or Europe—reported in a personal letter, after a summer of high speed and strenuous touring in a Packard "48":

"I did not believe it possible that such a perfect vehicle could be made."

HEAVY SALES REPORTED

Orders for Moon cars took a spurt at the end of November, according to a statement issued by Stewart McDonald, vice-president of the Moon Motor Car Co., this week. The last three working days of the month brought in orders for 18 cars. The popularity of the light weight six is shown by the fact that 15 of the orders were for the new model. The orders came from four different cities.

Minneapolis took the lead with seven orders for sixes from the Tri-State Auto Co. The Chicago branch ordered three; two came from the Aleda Machine Co. at Aleda, Ill., and two from Decatur, Ill. The latter orders were from Roy Wilson and Theodore Fisher of that city.

Four agency contracts are reported for the week. The new concerns that will handle Moon cars for 1914 are the Oneida Garage and Machine Co., of Rhinelander, Wis.; John H. Lawrence & Sons of Nashville, Tenn.; C. C. Braddon & Co., of Mathis, Tex., and J. C. Lockhart of Rosedale, Tex.

SPEND $50,000 ONE DAY FOR A MOTOR CAR AD

The "double truck' ad of the Maxwell Motor Co. is said by reliable authorities to be the biggest individual advertising campaign ever put out by any concern either in the automobile business or any other.

To spend $50,000 at one slam requires some nerve—and especially at this time when bankers are trying to convince us that we are in the doldrums of the between seasons.

That, approximately, was what the Maxwell company spent on that two-page ad in the Sunday newspapers.

Figures are uninteresting, but these few will prove instructive to the average advertiser. Sixty-five Sunday newspapers were used from Maine to California, and from Minneapolis to Jacksonville. The combined circulation was 10,000,000—five times as many as was covered by a certain big spread in a weekly of large circulation recently, and which ad was then said to have broken all records.

Every large city was covered—and the circulation also embraces such prosperous farmers, dealers and others as may be counted on to buy automobiles.

"I'm a firm believer in the dailies," says E. LeRoy Pelletier, advertising counsel of the Maxwell Motor Co., "and I'll stake my reputation on that ad making good. I believe that we've supplicated every reader that can be reached through all other media—and added 5,000,000 more to them. No single medium could possibly reach more than 2,000,000, and I know of no other class of publications that, for the same expenditure, could reach half of the 10,000,000 we've reached with this ad."

GOODRICH-DIAMOND BRANCHES COMBINED

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. will combine the Goodrich and Diamond stores in the new building now nearing completion at the northwest corner of Locust street and Garrison avenue.

The two organizations will be brought together under the direction of L. K. Rittenhouse, assisted by J. A. Peterson and E. W. Staley, the present managers of the Goodrich and Diamond divisions.

Mr. Rittenhouse is well known to the trade in Pittsburg, Boston and Detroit. In the early days of the automobile industry he opened the Pittsburg branch of the Diamond company. In 1910 he became New England manager, with headquarters in Boston, and later was transferred to Detroit. He has been with the Diamond and Goodrich companies upwards of 10 years and brings to his new field a broad knowledge of all lines of the rubber business.

The new building will be ready about Dec. 15, and has been designed especially for the needs of the big rubber company. In addition to complete stocks of both Goodrich and Diamond products, it will contain a service station fully equipped to take care of the large automobile and motor truck tire business of the Goodrich company.

All-Weather Treads

Treads Double-Thick Extra-Tough Immensely Enduring Grips Flat-Top Wide-Base Sharp-Cut Very Deep

Like a Smooth Tread on Dry Roads—A Resistless Grip on Wet Roads

Buy Nothing Else This Winter

You men who investigate will this winter buy nothing but All-Weather treads.

Here is all the advantage, all the economy of the plain-tread tire. And here is the last word in efficient anti-skids. It is the greatest of Goodyear inventions.

The tread is double-thick. The rubber is extra tough—toughened by a secret process. The blocks are deep and enduring. They last for thousands of miles.

The tread is flat. The projections are broad and regular. Thus we avoid vibration and give you the smooth-tread effect.

The blocks have sharp edges, facing the skidding direction. And those edges stay sharp. Their grip on wet roads is tenacious.

The blocks widen out so they meet at the base. Thus the strains are distributed just as with plain-tread tires. It was separate projections, centering the strain at one point in the fabric, which made anti-skids short-lived.

Come, see and compare them. No man who does this will ever buy the old-type anti-skids.

There is no comparison, in efficiency, in economy, in all-around, long-time service. You can see this at a glance. Yet most anti-skids cost more than these because of smaller output.

ALL-WEATHER

The Most Popular Tires Ever Made

All-Weather treads now come, if wanted, on Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires. They outsell our smooth treads with users. And these great tires are now, by long odds, the largest-selling tires in the world.

No-Rim-Cut tires first won top place because they cannot rim-cut. They have saved motor car owners many millions of dollars by this one great economy.

They are also the only tires which are final-cured on air bags, under actual road conditions. This is done at an extra cost of $1,500 daily. It is done to save the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

They are the only tires in which hundreds of large rubber rivets are created to prevent tread separation.

Rim-cutting is made impossible. Blow-outs and loose treads are minimized in ways that no rival employs. Because of this fact, no other tire compares in sales with Goodyears.

Now comes this All-Weather tread. A tread which safety demands on all wheels at all seasons. An anti-skid tread which has no competition with men who know the facts.

So there are now four economies—four enormous advantages—to win you to No-Rim-Cut tires. You will join the legions who buy these tires when you once find them out.

AUTO MEN WEAR APRONS AND CAPS AT TRADE DINNER

Secretary of State Roach and Mayor Kiel, So Garbed, Addressed Auto Dealers at Annual Feast.

Wholesome hilarity was the keynote of the annual dinner of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association at the Planters Hotel Saturday night. About 250 motor car and accessory dealers and their sales forces sat down to one of the most unique dinners and entertainments ever given in St. Louis.

The menu called it a "Parisienne Soiree et Divertissement" and it was all of that and more. Incidentally the card said that "if there is time the following may be permitted to speak during the evening." Then followed a list of distinguished speakers, including Mayor Kiel, Secretary of State Cornelius Roach, Claude Long, State automobile deputy; Roy F. Britton, Harry W. Blodgett and Vital Garesche, who was called on the card "city persecutor." Other speakers were A. R. Pardington, who told of the proposed Lincoln Highway across the continent, and Harry S. Quine of Akron, who told of another phase of the same great $10,000,000 undertaking.

Before each guest entered the big dining room he was arbitrarily garbed a big gingham apron with a bib and a red paper fez cap was put on his head. These were worn throughout the evening. Mayor Kiel and Secertary of State Roach delivered their addresses in this garb.

The tables were without cloths, the tableware was of the kitchen variety and the decorations were grass and vegetables. There were 18 performers in the cabaret part of the program and a number of novel stunts were pulled off.

During the dinner and after, the guests were called upon a number of times to sing automobile songs which had been set to the tunes "Apple Blossom Time in Normandy," "You Made Me Love You," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" and other well-sung airs.

Samuel Breadon opened the affair at the end of the dinner with a brief address and turned the speakers over to the toastmaster, Robert E. Lee.

The Dinner Committee was W. C. Anderson, Joseph A. Schlecht, Ralph C. Doak, Samuel Breadon and Robert E. Lee.

STUDEBAKER DEALERS MEET SALES DIRECTOR

Ernest R. Benson, vice-president and director of distribution of the Studebaker Corporation, spent the early part of the week with C. J. Simons, local manager of this company for this territory. His visit was for the purpose of meeting the dealers of this section for a heart-to-heart talk over the plans and distribution of the enormous output of the Studebaker Corporation for 1914. Twice each year Manager Benson makes a transcontinental swing visiting all of the distributing centers of the United States.

"Way back, years ago when I was sales manager of the old Hartford Rubber Co.," said Mr. Benson, "I realized the strategic importance of St. Louis as a distributing center, and recommended to this company that they place a factory here and make St. Louis the distributing point for the Middle West. Since coming to Studebaker, I have consolidated the distributing points of seven States, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and Missouri, here in St. Louis, and this branch is one of our big distributing points. St. Louis is logically situated for this purpose and her freight rates coupled with her many other advantages place her in a class unapproached.

"My trip this time is to get in closer touch with the dealers, from the smallest sub-dealer, who never gets to the factory, to our largest branches. We will build about 45,000 cars this year and in order to keep our plants working, which must be done in order that we may sell cars at the prices we do, we must keep our dealers gingered up. From here I go to Memphis, Little Rock, Dallas, Atlanta, New Orleans and several other points.

The dealers and others who attended the meeting and the dinner at the American, were Carl J. Simons, manager St. Louis branch; F. C. Kenney, assistant manager; J. F. Ladd, A. C. Wilson of the sales department; Stanley J. Brand, mechanical instructor; W. A. Layman, vice-president and general manager Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co.; Walter Robbins, assistant general manager of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co.; O. W. Chandler, Hannibal, Mo.; A. A. Sims, Moberly, Mo.; E. D. Grahma, Mexico, Mo.; W. H. Owen Jr., Lebanon, Mo.; Chas. Nieburg, Wright City, Mo.; A. C. Norwine, Bonne Terre, Mo.; Messrs. Keller and Baird, Edwardsville, Ill.

After the luncheon the dealers and Mr. Benson made an inspection trip through the plant of the Wagner Manufacturing Co.

I. H. C. IN NEW HOME

The International Harvester Co.'s atuomobile department will be in its new home at 3115 Locust street in about 10 days. The new sales department is handsomely fitted and well equipped for caring for the I. H. C. delivery car. H. H. MacDonald is manager of the delivery car business. During the past six months 44 of these light delivery jobs have been sold in this territory, about half of them to St. Louis merchants.

ROAD WEAR LESS WITH SIX-CYLINDER CAR

It is a fact not generally known, according to J. H. Phillips of the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., distributors of the Hudson motor cars, that roads will last longer and hold their surface better than six-cylinder cars are used.

It isn't weight of car, or suction due to tire pressure, or speed alone, that wears roads. It is the very definite, though sometimes imperceptible slipping and sliding of the wheels on the road surface. Were it possible to get rid, entirely, of the slipping and friction of wheels on the roads there would be comparatively little wear due to this cause. The six-cylinder motor car, according to engineers, less slippage of wheels on the road than has any other. The application of the power of the motor to the rear wheels, and through them to the surface of the tire resting upon the road, is so steady and free from jerks and jars that there is practically no slipping or rubbing against the road. This is proved by the much longer time that tires wear on a Hudson Six.

A NEW GASOLINE SAVER

One of the newest automatic devices for saving money for automobile owners and reducing gasoline consumption is the Empire gasoline economizer, headquarters for which have been established at 3104 Locust street by Newell & Eccles.

This new device is attached to the intake mainfold and is controlled by the gasoline throttle, without any spring tension or separate control, its purpose being to give at all times a perfect mixture of air with the gasoline, the inventors claiming that there is no carburetor made that will give at all times the proper mixture of air. The distributors claim that it decreases carbon 75 per cent and that it will work equally well on either a two or four cycle motor.

NO-WARSHIPS-FOR-YEAR-PLAN, FAVORED IN HOUSE

Debate, on Resolution Suggested by Churchill, Ends and Congress Will Vote Monday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—With only one or two voices raised against the Hensley naval holiday resolution, which would authorize the President to accept the suggestion of Winston Churchill, Lord of the British Admiralty, for an abandonment of naval construction for one year, the debate on the resolution was brought to a close today in the House. A vote will be taken Monday.

Most of the speakers favored the adoption of the resolution because warships belong to "a past era." Representative Hulings of Pennsylvania favored it merely as an expression of changing sentiment. "Resolutions will not bring peace," said Representative Hulings. "Peace societies will not stop wars. Until the day arrives when the nations perceive that war no longer pays, we should be ready in case of assault to curl up like a porcupine bristling at every point impregnable to attack."

Representative Mann of Illinois supported the resolution. Representatives Heflin of Alabama and Slayden of Texas also indorsed it.

PAINTERS' UNION GIVES LOVING CUP TO F. D. GARDNER

500 Union Members Present Gift for Signing Barry and Morrin Bonds.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Gardner of 4508 West Pine boulevard, were the guests of honor last night at a reception and ball given by the local branch of the Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America at the Tower Grove Turner Hall, Grand avenue and Juniata street. A silver loving cup, more than two feet high, was presented to Gardner "as the only employer in history who voluntarily pledged his home, his business and his fortune" that two workingmen might have liberty on bond pending their appeal to a higher court.

The workingmen were P. J. Morrin and John Barry of St. Louis, who were convicted in the McNamara dynamite conspiracy at Indianapolis and sent to Leavenworth last spring. Gardner supplied $30,000 bail for Morrin and $40,000 for Barry, enabling them to be set at liberty.

About 500 labor men and their wives were present. Mrs. Gardner, who sat on the stage with her husband during the speeches, was presented with a bouquet of chrysanthemums and roses. She promenaded in the grand march with Charles Hertenstein, president of St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8.

Loving Cup Is Presented.

The dancers paused when the guests appeared on the platform, and, gathering near, stood during the ceremonies. Gardner was introduced by Hertenstein, who related that after Morrin and Barry were sentenced, Charles J. Lammert, president of the Building Trades Council, published an interview calling on volunteers to furnish bail. Gardner was the only one who came forward, "from his sense of justic and fair play," said the speaker.

The loving cup, on a pedestal, was borne on the stage and Hertenstein formally presented it. The cup was appropriately inscribed in prose and verse.

In a flowery speech, Gardner, who is the wealthy president of the St. Louis Coffin Co., told of his youth as a poor farmer boy, and of his starting in an office without a penny at the age of 17 years. He said his friends were miners, firemen and other toilers, and told how they taught him to use tools, to run an engine and to shovel coal under a boiler. In the audience, he said, he saw the faces of some of the men who were kindly towards him then.

"I feel that this meeting has a deep significance," he said. "When an employer and the representatives of labor and their wives can meet and shake hands, and exchange friendly greetings it is a sign that the sanguinary differences which have brought about disastrous results in so many instances are melting away, and that employer and employe are beginning to realize that their interests are identical.

Predicts End of Strikes.

"There will come a time when the boycott and strike on the one hand, and the lockout and blacklist on the other, will be abolished, and capital and labor will join hands for their own and the nation's welfare."

A number of men prominent in business, politics and education were present, among them being M. J. Mulvihill, Charles W. Rutledge, John Sheahan, William Desmond, R. W. Murphy, Eugene Sarber, Edward A. Raithel, Charles B. Starck, Councilman Daniel Meehan and State Senators C. O. A. Brunk, Michael Kinney and Morris Cassidy.

It is generally understood in political circles that Gardner is being groomed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1916. His friends in the State already have begun the work of organization. He is a member of Gov. Major's staff.

MEN WHO STORE EGGS SAY THE WOMEN ARE TO BLAME

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 6.—Women who boycott eggs in the effort to cause a drop in prices and thereby take a whack at the cold storage men are really making a horrible mistake, for it is their own sex who are really to blame for the high prices of hen fruit, say delegates, representing millions of invested capital, attending the annual convention of the American Warehouse Men's Association here.

It is the ignorance of the farmers' wives—their failure to realize the necessity of gathering and shipping eggs promptly and the fact that the roosters are permitted to hobnob with the egg-laying hen that has caused the shortage in eggs. According to reports made by representatives of 45 of the largest warehouses in the country, a shortage of 240,000,000 eggs was recorded on the first of December because this care was not exercised.

MY, LOOK AT THE PRICE OF EGGS!

But also look over the Post-Dispatch Poultry Page today and pick up a dozen chickens for that back-yard pen—or an incubator to start a good brood of fine spring broilers.

Pythians to Entertain.

A grand euchre and dance will be given under the auspices of the St. Louis Pythian Association on three successive nights next week. The dates of the three entertainments and the places where they will be given are as follows: Dec. 8, New Club Hall, Thirteenth and Chouteau avenue; Dec. 9, Westminster Hall, 3806 Olive street; Dec. 10, Social Turner Hall, Thirteenth and Monroe streets. Tickets may be used at any one of these places.

Don't try to take that dog back home on the street car after he has strayed away—but a Post-Dispatch Lost or Found ad will tell you where to find him—and a 14-block walk home is good exercise.

FREAK IN CLIMATE BRINGS FLOWERS IN MIDDLE WEST

The Central West is experiencing a climatic phenomenon, according to information gathered in Indiana, Iowa, Illinois and other States. These reports indicate that conditions of spring are widely prevalent and show an unusually and unseasoable activity in plant life. Buds are sprouting, flowers are manifesting on intention to bloom, shrubs and vegetables are showing first signs of green.

At Alton, Ill., pansies, violets and strawberry plants are in full bloom. In St. Clair County, Ill., peach trees are in bloom, a rose garden is a mass of buds and blossoms and one farmer has cut a second crop of asparagus. Fruit growers in that district predict next year's fruit crop will be reduced, if not destroyed by the rising of the sap at this time of year.

Alfalfa Fields Green.

Near Cairo, Ill., the alfalfa fields are green and growing and elm, cottonwood and maple trees are budding. Early vegetables are found in some gardens near Carmi, Ill., and similar conditions are reported at Danville and Decatur.

Mount Pleasant, Io., has the most springlike weather ever known there at this time of year. On the State University campus at Iowa City, lilac buds are bursting, violets are in bloom and dandelions and soft maples are ready to flower. Fall wheat is from three to six inches high near Clarinda, Io.

Cold Weather Predicted.

Truck gardeners are still gathering their harvest near Columbus, Ind., and a few farmers have watermelons which they hope will be ripe by Christmas. Lawn mowers have been put in use again at Greensburg, Ind. Livestock is still grazing around Elkhart and unusually mild weather has created a condition of early spring at Tipton and Logansport.

Colder weather is predicted in the Middle West for Monday and will probably bring to an end what is considered the warmest fall in the history of the Weather Bureau.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

FACTORY REMOVAL PIANO SALE

GET YOUR CHRISTMAS PIANO AT ONCE

OPEN EVERY EVENING TILL 9 O'CLOCK

Down go the prices on every piano and player-piano in the immense $100,000.00 wholesale stock of this old established, well-known piano factory, because of its removal to its new and wonderfully perfect home at 39th St. and Ashland Av., Chicago, Ill.

Our determination to move came like a flash—a wonderfully liberal offer was made us to locate our factories at 39th St. and Ashland Av.—quick action was necessary and an immediate decision—and the offer was so tempting that in spite of the immense number of pianos on hand and the great number under work, some of them just started, some half finished and others almost finished, we decided to sacrifice the entire stock at once and take possession of our new home, because the concessions in our favor in that deal will more than cover the great loss we are sustaining in having to sell all our present stock at less than cost.

Everyone who visits Chicago is familiar with our old factories, but some will be surprised to know that the wonderful appreciation of the Pianos and Player-Pianos made there necessitates removal to larger quarters. Piano manufacturers, our friends and customers, however, will not be surprised because they have seen this business grow by leaps and bounds, and they know the intrinsic value of every instrument turned out bearing the name "STARCK" and backed by the Starck Factory guarantee and reputation for honest dealing.

When such a tremendous stock as we have on hand must be disposed of quickly, prices and terms must be forgotten. The buyer must be given free rein to choose the best pianos at the very lowest manufacturing cost, and the terms must be made so everyone, no matter how small their means, can take advantage of the sale.

Remember—the pianos in this sale were not made for Cut Price Bargain Sales such as you have frequently seen advertised. They were built by one of the oldest, most reliable manufacturers of the highest standing in anticipation of a large Christmas trade, and they all bear the Starck Guarantee and are all instruments built and made to maintain a great piano reputation.

This is no small dealer's stock, but the entire wholesale stock of a great manufacturer, and embraces all new, slightly used, shopworn, rented, damaged and secondhand pianos and player-pianos.

STARCK'S SPECIAL TERMS DURING THIS SALE. 30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL. NO MONEY DOWN. 50c TO $1.00 PER WEEK. NO EXTRAS. FREE STOOL, SCARF AND DELIVERY. FREE MUSIC LESSONS, 5 YEARS' EXCHANGE PRIVILEGE. 10 TO 25 YEARS' GUARANTEE.

Committee of 55 to Investigate Disorderly District Before Visiting Executive on Monday.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The suffragists, including the committee of 55 that will call on President Wilson Monday if he is then able to see them, are still busy despite the fact that their national convention adjourned today.

The one thing they are determined to do is to see the President. While waiting they will investigate the disorderly district of Washington. The time set for the visit is Monday morning.

A party of suffragists, led by Miss Helen Todd of California, had a little fun today with Secretary of State Bryan, who spoke at Memorial Continental Hall at the opening of the convention of the National Popular Government League.

Secretary Bryan Interrupted.

Bryan was speaking on "The People's Rule; How to Make it Fact." He had declared for more human justice, less conservatism and a more flexible constitutional amendment system when Miss Todd demanded from the audience:

"How about justice for women? You have talked about justice but you have not mention women at all. How about it, Mr. Bryan?"

The Secretary of State hesitated, then moved to the front of the stage and said:

"Madam, in all you have done I have no doubt that you have followed your judgment as I know I have followed mine."

Miss Todd made no reply, but other suffragists about cried out: "You have not even mentioned women, Mr. Bryan."

Bryan appeared not to hear the cries, but spoke on until through, and then retreated to the rear of the platform.

Senator Owen, calling to another speaker, raised his voice a little to drown calls of the suffragists who still demanded more from Bryan.

Appointment Made With President.

Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the Congressional Committee of the National Woman Suffrage Association, said the committee of 55 had been assured that they could see President Wilson between 12 and 1 o'clock Monday. The committee will meet at suffrage headquarters on F street and march in a body to the White House. Among those in the procession will be Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. Madill McCormick, Miss Laura Clay, Mrs. Donald R. Hooker and Miss Margaret Foley.

Miss Paul said she was positive that the House Committee on Rules would give the suffragists a committee.

The delegation that will inspect the disorderly district will be headed by Mrs. Hooker, president of the Just Government League of Maryland, and Mrs. Thomas E. Hepburn, president of the Connecticut Woman Suffrage Association. The purpose of the visit is to clean up the capital so that visitors, in going to Mount Vernon and other places of historic interest, will not have to pass through the district.

Action on Kenyon Bill Urged.

"I understand," said Mrs. Hepburn, "that a hundred steps will take a person from the White House grounds to where men and women have reached the lowest depths of degradation, and we are going to find out if this is true, and, if it is, I promise you the House of Representatives will have little rest till it acts on the Kenyon bill. As the people of Washington have no voice in their own government, and no Representatives in Congress to whom they can appeal, action must be taken by someone on the outside."

The Kenyon bill is patterned after an Iowa law which is said to have helped eradicate the social evil.

MAN FREED WHEN DOG REMEMBERS OLD TRICKS

Ownership Is Proven When Animal Obeys Master After 3 Years' Absence.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 6.—Roxie, a bird dog, remembered three years and freed its master from a charge of grand larceny in the courtroom of Charles Clarke, a Justice of the Peace, here today. Wiley A. Card was charged with the theft of the dog "Roxie" from the home of W. J. Glover. Card said the dog disappeared from his home three years ago and that on passing Glover's house last week and seeing her there he had whistled and she followed him home.

"Roxie's mine; I'll make her do some tricks to prove it," said Card.

"No you can't. She knows no tricks," said Glover.

"Rox," commanded Card, "stand up."

Roxie rose to her hind legs and cocked her head sideways at the Judge.

"Now roll over and go and shut the door."

The dog rolled over and then pushed the courtroom door to with her nose.

"That's enough," said the Judge, and dismissed the case.

SCHOONER IN DISTRESS

Vessel Carrying Eleven Men Almost Goes on Rocks.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 6.—The four-masted schooner Aloha, with 11 men on board, is in distress off Destruction Island between Gray's Harbor and Cape Flattery. Her anchors are barely holding her from going on to the rocky coast.

The Aloha is bound from the Fijis to Gray's Harbor.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dec. 6.—The Clyde Line steamship Seminole, which has been beached at Puerto Plata, on the north coast, is not believed to be in a serious condition. The Seminole, which sailed from New York last Saturday with four passengers, struck an obstruction when entering the harbor of Puerta Plata and began to take water rapidly.

HOT CAMPAIGN FOR LOCAL OPTION CLOSES AT MACON

Prominent State Speakers Engaged; Bible Quoted by an Anti.

MACON, Mo., Dec. 6.—The hottest local option campaign ever waged in North Missouri closed here tonight amid great enthusiasm. Both sides are claiming victory at the polls Monday. Prominent State speakers on both sides have appeared on platforms and on the streets, pleading for votes.

One of the sensational addresses of the campaign was made by C. A. Windle, editor of the Chicago Iconoclast. He argued against prohibition, using the Bible as his text. He said that the Bible was for temperance, but was vehemently opposed to prohibition. It was conceded by some of the "drys" that Windle made a strong speech, and that he made many converts.

Among the prominent State speakers who spoke for the "drys" were: The Hon. E. M. Richmond of Moberly, Col. J. J. Heffner of Macon, and President J. W. Millian of Hardin College, Mexico,

While here, President Millian denied to the Post-Dispatch correspondent that he was candidate for any office. Over 700 women signed a petition asking the voters to vote for a dry town Monday.

91 DROWNED IN FLOODS IN TEXAS, LOSS $4,000,000

Twenty-Five Negroes Reported to Have Lost Lives on One Plantation.

By Associated Press.

BRYAN, Tex., Dec. 6.—Ninety-one persons are believed to be dead and scores of others are reported to have lost their lives in the floods which have been sweeping the valleys of the Brazos and Trinity rivers in Central and South Central Texas since early in the week.

The flood in the Brazos River now is concentrating at Navasota, at the junction of that stream and its tributary, the Little Brazos. On the Allen plantation near Navasota 12 negroes and one Mexican are said to have been drowned today. Twenty-five negroes are reported to have lost their lives on the John Parker plantation on the main stream, near Welborn.

Several prominent planters are missing in this vicinity.

50 Marooned on Island.

The Parker Plantation housed 100 families. Their homes for a stretch of a mile have been swept away. How many persons were rescued is in doubt, but it is believed at least 25 were drowned. Parker himself was last seen yesterday with John Gordon, another well-known planter, on the roof of a barn floating down the stream. They frantically signaled for aid, but no boats were at hand to rescue them.

Tonight 50 persons, whites and negroes, were marooned in a gin house on an island at Horse Shoe Bend, the most dangerous part of the river. At Kobe bridge, a hamlet, 300 refugees, mostly negroes, were sheltered in a gin house. High winds and waves prevented rescuers approaching their refuge.

No other reports have been received at a late hour tonight from the Allen farm, where it was said the flood had claimed 12 lives.

Three thousand persons have been driven to the upper floors of their homes by the rising waters or have been compelled to seek refuge in trees, where they remained for hours in some cases, for two days, before being rescued. Estimates of the damage generally center around $4,000,000.

Waters Reach Gulf.

One of the deepest overflows was in the Brazos bottoms of this section, where boatmen reported no houses visible when they made their final trips before dark this evening. The floods in both rivers tonight were beginning to pass out into the gulf through the last hundred miles of their courses. In the remaining territory there are few important towns, but additional drownings in remote settlements are feared.

A number of towns which had been isolated for two days reported today, each telling of property loss over wide areas, but of few drownings. The Colorado River also is adding to the trouble of the Texas flood situation. At Alleyton, a small town on the lower Colorado, the water tonight was three feet deep over the highest elevation. Bay City, 25 miles from the mouth of Colorado reported the water within 18 inches of the top of the protection levee. A break, it was said, would overflow a large part of the town.

Brazos Levee Breaks.

The most serious situation was caused by the breaking of the levee 30 miles in length on the Brazos, opposite Bryan. More than 1000 persons had refused to believe it would give way, and remained in their homes, which were submerged. Describing his experiences yesterday and last night in a rescue boat in the overflow from this levee break, W. W. Griggs of Houston said:

"God knows how many persons were left in the bottoms. When we left last night we could hear cries and shouts in the darkness. They are all huddled together in cotton gins and high places. There were 180 persons in a gin house on one plantation.

Couple in Tree 24 Hours.

"The levee is broken in three places. On top of the safe portion of the levee horses, mules and cows are crowded in great numbers."

Griggs said the rescuers in his boat found one man and a woman in a tree top where they had been for 24 hours. The Brazos bottoms, one of the richest farm land sections of the State, were thickly populated. The overflow scattered many families, who will not know how many of their members were drowned until the floods subside.

Read What a Few of Them Say—

"Am Now Trying to Help Others Get Rid of Stomach Troubles."

George H. Mayr: Enclosed find $1 for one bottle of your Stomach Remedy, which has done me so much good. I have been benefited to such an extent that I am now trying to help others get rid of the dreaded so-called stomach trouble, and am going to give some of my friends a chance to get on the right path to get well. I gave you a few names of some of my friends who are sufferers, and I am sure that if they had a sample and could feel the great relief of the first bottle they would gladly forward the amount for the entire course. I remain a friend of yours always,

A. LEACH,

"Feels Like a New Woman."

George H. Mayr: Have been a patron of yours for your Wonderful Stomach Remedy and found it to be all you claim. I suffered with stomach trouble nearly 12 years. Tried many doctors, but received no help until while in Cleveland, O., I read your ad in the paper and concluded to try it, and it removed somewhere near 100 gall stones, and since then I feel like a new woman. I took only four bottles, but that was all that was needed to make me well. It has been almost two years and have had no return of my trouble. Since then, I have recommended it to many that suffered with stomach trouble. Am now staying with a friend of mine who has stomach trouble. Doctors all the time and seems to get no relief, so told her would write and ask you to send her a trial of your remedy as you did me, as she will show her if she has gall stones and then she can send for the full treatment.

"Doctor Did Not Know What Ailed Her. Been Sick Over a Year."

George H. Mayr: No doctor knew what ailed me, but have found the right medicine now. I cannot praise Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy enough. Been sick in bed for months. Can surely be cured with full treatment.

MRS. ANNA SMITH,

"Been a Stomach Sufferer 15 Years—Can't Praise It Enough."

George H. Mayr: I received your sample bottle of Stomach Remedy and tried it and it did me wonders of good. I have now taken six bottles of your stomach medicine and four bottles of your Tonic and feel like a new woman. I have been a sufferer of Stomach trouble for almost 15 years. Couldn't keep one meal till the next on my stomach, but since taking your medicine I can eat just as hearty as anyone and can keep everything that I eat on my stomach. It has done me hundreds of dollars' worth of good. I can't praise it enough and will tell of its good wherever I go and will always be found praising your medicine, as long as I live. My sister is taking it now and she says it is helping her. She says that she passed 1000 gallstones. Am ready at any time to tell anyone what it has done for me. Yours very truly,

MRS. EDW. BENNETT,
2606B Olive st., St. Louis, Mo.

"Sorry She Did Not Take It Sooner."

George H. Mayr: Received your letter yesterday. I wrote you about two weeks ago and told you I had taken the free $1.00 bottle of your remedy. The dose looked so large I kept putting off taking it, but finally decided I would try it and it helped me wonderfully. I am sorry I did not take it sooner. I will be glad to recommend it to anybody suffering from stomach trouble.

MRS. MINNIE WHITELY,

"Has Done Him More Good Than All Medicines He Ever Took."

George H. Mayr: You will find enclosed a $1.00 bill for another treatment of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy, the same as you sent me a few days ago. Will say it has done me more good than all the medicine I have taken in four months. Will send for treatment each week until I have taken the complete treatment. I will surely recommend your medicine to all my folks and friends. I remain as ever, D. D. GALBRAITH,

"Enjoyed Best Christmas After Taking Trial Bottle."

George H. Mayr: Well, to begin with, I can assure you I certainly did enjoy this Christmas. I have taken your trial bottles and have taken two bottles and a bottle of your System Regulator, and I already have another dose of your stomach remedy in the house which I am going to take this coming week and then am going to get me another bottle of the Regulator. The first dose I took made me so sick I called my husband at 3 o'clock in the morning. I just thought I was going to die, and was sorry I had taken the medicine, but now I have to laugh at myself. My mother has the same trouble, and I am going to get her to take it, too, for I know it will do her good.

MRS. H. OEHLER,

"Your Remedy Would Save Many a Doctor Bill."

George H. Mayr: Enclosed find $2.00, for which please send me two bottles of your Tonic and Regulator. I will take the last treatment of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy today; that is the fifth bottle, and must say it has helped me a great deal. The two bottles of Tonic and Regulator that I am sending for I think will finish the good work. After taking the first treatment I passed about 500 green lumps, the second treatment about the same, the third treatment about 200 and the fourth about 100, so I think the fifth will make a clean sweep, and I will just need the tonic, which I am sending for, but I always intend to take several bottles of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy every spring and fall to keep my system in order. I think if everyone would do the same thing they would save many a doctor bill. Please send the two bottles of Tonic as soon as possible, as I will be out of the Tonic by Tuesday. I remain, as ever, yours for success,

ROBERT L. VOITLEIN,

PARCEL POST RATE REDUCED; WEIGHT LIMIT INCREASED

Interstate Commerce Commission Upholds Burleson in Plan for Better Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Postmaster-General Burleson's proposals to increase the weight limits of parcel post packages from 20 to 50 pounds, to admit books to the parcel post and to reduce rates in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth zones, were approved today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The maximum weight of parcels to all zones beyond the second was increased from 11 to 20 pounds.

The commission's approval of the proposed changes was transmitted in three letters from Chairman Clark to Postmaster-General Burleson.

New Rates Effective Jan. 1.

The approved changes in rates and weights to be in effect Jan. 1, 1914, follows:

To reduce the rates for the third zone from 7 cents for the first pound and 5 cents for each additional pound to 6 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound; to reduce the rate for the fourth zone from 8 cents for the first pound and 6 cents for each additional pound to 7 cents for the first pound and 4 cents for each additional pound; to reduce for the fifth zone from 9 cents for the first pound and 7 cents for each additional pound to 8 cents for the first pound and 6 cents for each additional pound; to reduce the rates for the sixth zone from 10 cents for the first pound and 9 cents for each additional pound to 9 cents for the first pound and 8 cents for each additional pound.

Rates Based on Cost of Service.

"It seems obvious," says the commission "that the service to the public will be promoted by these changes, provided the revenue from the service is not less than the cost thereof. Your experiences and statistics seem to show clearly that the revenue will not be less than the cost of the service.

"We can conceive of no opposition to the increased weights and reduced rates proposed except from the carriers that transport the mails. We have had some objections from them on the ground that the increased weight should not be permitted unless provision for additional compensation to the carriers has been made."

It is provided "that the rate of postage on parcels containing books weighing eight ounces or less shall be one cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof, and on those weighing in excess of eight ounces, the parcel post rates shall apply." This is to be effective March 16, 1914.

Changes to Benefit Public.

Serious objections to the proposed change in the rates on books and catalogues were made chiefly by mailers of heavy catalogues, but the commission says it feels that the changes are in the interest of the public.

Consent was given to the admission of shipments of gold, gold bullion and gold dust in Alaska and to and from Alaska in packages weighing not more than 11 pounds. The rate of postage fixed is two cents an ounce or fraction thereof for all distances.

TRAVEL OF TUBERCULOUS PERSONS INVESTIGATED

Effect of Migration Upon Diseased Ones Is Sought by Public Health Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The whole question of treatment of migratory tuberculosis patients is involved in an investigation just started by the Public Health Service.

With a view to legislation or interstate quarantine regulations, Surgeon Paul Carrington has been assigned to investigate in California; Past Assistant Surgeon A. D. Foster in North Carolina, and Past Assistant Surgeon E. A. Sweet in Texas, to ascertain how travel of tuberculosis victims affects them, the health of railroad employes and passengers on trains in which such person travel, the health of the communities in which they settle and to clear up other economic problems.

Health officials say there is a natural drift of people affected with tuberculosis toward the high tablelands of the Southwest, the pine woods of North Carolina and the marine climate of California.

ANGRY FARMERS ARM AND PUT BACK HITCH POSTS

Dispute Between Land and City Dwellers Nears Strife in Neosho.

NEOSHO, Mo., Dec. 6.—The removal of the hitch racks around the Newton County court house here several days ago by order of the city, resulted today in a near riot when 15 wagons filled with farmers, each armed with a shotgun and a spade, drove into Neosho.

The farmers gathered up the discarded racks from the city dump and while half of the party stood guard, the other half set the posts back in place. City officials made no effort to interfere with the determined work of the farmers.

The hitchrack question has for weeks caused disagreement between the Neosho city authorities and farmers. The ownership of the ground on which the racks stood was contested by city and county authorities. Furthermore the farmers contended that "the automobile owners of the town had no right to condemn the serviceable old hitchrack to the nuisance class."

HALF OF MINE SEARCHED; NO TRACE OF LOPEZ FOUND

Theory That Slayer of Six Escaped Is Generally Accepted, but Officers Continue Hunt.

BINGHAM, Utah, Dec. 6.—Search of over half the labyrinth of the Utah-Apex mine for Ralph Lopez, the Mexican gunman, was completed tonight without result. The theory that the slayer of six had escaped was generally accepted as deputies appeared at the various tunnel mouths with the announcement that no sign of the desperado had been found.

The poisonous gases forced into the mine for the purpose of asphyxiating Lopez following his killing two deputies in a battle underground a week ago were cleared from all the passageways and tonight the search was continued in parts not yet explored. The removal of a cave-in in the upper workings showed that Lopez had not taken refuge in the slope behind it as had been thought.

M'KELVEY FINDS CHEAP HOTEL FIRE PROTECTION POOR

Commissioner Inspects Dozen Lodging Houses in Business District.

Building Commissioner McKelvey yesterday made an inspection of a dozen lodging and rooming houses in the business district and found that in many cases the fire protection was inadequate. Most of the houses were amply provided with fire escapes, but according to McKelvey they would be of little account in case of fire. He cited the recent Boston disaster, where a score of lodgers were killed, as an example of such danger. While the places are equipped with the fire protection required by the ordinances, they are, McKelvey found.
could find their way out in case of a fire, McKelveyfound.

Rooms Poorly Arranged.

The fire escapes are in place but the rooms, according to the Commissioner, are not so arranged that the guests could easily find their way to the escapes. Commissioner McKelvey, after spending all day visiting these cheaper lodging houses, said that within the next few days he would draft a bill which would make it compulsory for all lodging houses to have a main corridor on which all the rooms opened and at the end of which there should be a fire escape.

He said that a catastrophe could hardly be averted, in case of a night fire, with the present building plans. In many places which he visited, McKelvey said, if guests came out of their rooms with the halls filled with smoke, they would find great difficulty in locating exits.

Civic League Offers Legislation.

The Civic League, as a result of the Boston lodging house fire, has taken up the agitation for the safeguarding and cleaning up of cheap lodging houses, and tomorrow will distribute pamphlets revealing conditions existing in St. Louis and offering a form of legislation to correct them.

Enactment of the proposed legislation, the Civic League contends, will complete for the present time all the housing legislation necessary to give St. Louis decently sanitary and safe housing conditions.

The report has been published as a basis of an ordinance drafted by Holt Roudebush, attorney for the Civic League, and will be submitted to the Board of Health Thursday. Speakers will be sent out by the Civic League to address organizations on the cheap lodging house.

The investigation was started in 1909 by the Lodging House Committee of the Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis. An investigator visited more than 150 lodging and rooming houses.

Overcrowding Big Evil.

The most serious evil in the lodging house is the unhealthful and unsanitary conditions which make for the spread of disease, the report states. The chief factor in these conditions is overcrowding. In 100 lodging houses studied, which ranged in capacity from 10 to 300, there were accommodations for 6478 persons. The worst conditions were found in the larger houses. Overcrowding was worst on the upper floors, where danger from fire is greatest.

Of 85 buildings these stories and more in height, only 53 in 1910 had fire escapes as required by law. Many of the houses had taken the precaution to equip the third and upper floors with rope fire escapes at one or more windows. In some, every front window was supplied with ropes, and in at least 17 houses no other provision whatever was made. Fifteen of the 85 were without even rope fire escapes. This condition, in 1913, is reported as somewhat better, but the Civic League says the fire escape law is by no means well enforced, as it applies to lodging houses.

$6000 SUIT FOR BRAINS REMOVED AT AUTOPSY

Parents of Child Charge Doctor With Error Which Caused Them Suffering.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 6.—Dr. H. E. Robertson of the medical faculty of the University of Minnesota, was made defendant in a $6000 damage suit filed in District Court late today by Anthony and Pearl Sorenson, as the result of an autopsy held on the body of their child last March.

The Sorensons charge that after performing the autopsy Dr. Robertson failed to return the brain of the child, which he had removed. They ask $1000 as a reasonable value of the brain and $5000 for the suffering and humiliation caused to the parents because of the mutilation of the body and the fact that they were forced to bury it without the brain.

CHAUFFEUR ADMITS PART IN INDIANAPOLIS KILLING

Driver of Auto From Which Strike Breakers Were Shot Confesses to Police.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 6.—Louis Bauer, arrested yesterday on a charge of being the chauffeur of the gray automobile from which four men armed with riot guns fired upon the nonunion teamsters, tonight confessed to the police that he was the driver for the shotgun squad. Edward J. O'Leary, a structural iron worker, was arrested upon charges of assault and battery with intent to kill, as a result of the confession. The police say that O'Leary was one of the men who shot the strikebreakers. O'Leary denies he was in the car from which the shots were fired.

43 I. W. W. MEN ARRESTED IN DAY IN KANSAS CITY

Speakers Hustled Into Patrol Wagons as Fast as They Appear on Street.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 6.—Forty-three Industrial Workers of the World were arrested today, and tonight, when they defied the police by making speeches on the streets. A crowd was attracted and two riot calls were sent in before the crowd was dispersed at one meeting near the city hall.

When 15 policemen appeared, cries of "Lynch them!" and "Beat them up!" greeted the officers. After arresting the speakers and their leading supporters, the police went to the I. W. W. headquarters near by, seized a quantity of literature and put a padlock on the front door of the hall. An officer was left on guard and the police said there would be no more meetings at that place.

The police would not let I. W. W. adherents hold meetings tonight on the street. Several efforts were made, but the police kept scores of officers at work, and broke up every gathering. At 10 p. m. the day's arrests numbered 43, all but 14 of whom were released.

The most serious disturbance tonight was at Missouri avenue and Main street, within a block of the city hall. There, before the police were aware of it, several hundred persons had assembled to listen to a speaker mounted on a packing box. The speaker was pulled from his improvised platform and hurried into a patrol wagon amid jeers of the crowd.

No sooner had the arrest been made than a second speaker sprang upon the box. He was cheered by the crowd, but before he could speak, he, too, was arrested. Then a third man took the box, but he, too, was arrested. Twenty men were hauled to police headquarters in this way. At headquarters all were released but the leaders.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET DRIFTS HIGHER DESPITE AN UNCERTAIN OUTLOOK

Favorite Shares Gain Two to Three Points on the Week's Trading.

LONDON MORE CHEERFUL

Foreigners Show an Inclination to Buy American Shares and Bonds.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"It may be said of the stock market of this present week that it was pushed ahead in one direction by its own instincts, and pulled back in the other by lack of the requisite credit facilities.

"This is no novel case. Pretty much the same condition of things has arisen, at some time in the autumn, even in our years of highest prosperity and most plethoric bank accounts.

"It is, indeed, our notable boom years which have traditionally introduced the season of trade activity, in October and November, by a money squeeze on Wall street, which tripped up an enthusiastic stock market and sent prices tumbling in the face of every one's declaration that conditions warranted their going higher.

Some Past History.

"The present situation does not exactly resemble that, but in some respects the parallel is worth studying. For instance, when money rates rose, and the Stock Exchange was throttled in such seasons as 1879 and 1898 and 1902 and 1906, we promptly drew on London, which was bound to meet our needs for increased credits and for new gold reserves, both because of our merchandise export balance and because of our robust bid for money. When London answered, money rates relaxed and the Stock Exchange revived.

"This year our country has the export balance—all things considered, it is exceptionally great—and our market has made the bid for money.

"But the London reservoir of gold and credit is pretty nearly shut to us—not as in such years as 1905 and 1906, because we have already exceeded our rightful line of borrowings, but because Lombard street cannot spare the cash.

"Instead of Europe carrying Wall street on its back, as happened on those earlier occasions, New York has this year most unmistakably been carrying Europe.

"Not only did our market, in the earlier weeks of 1913, buy back from the hard-pressed European stock exchanges a prodigious quantity of its own securities, but we helped financial Paris over the money hoarding strain, by sending it $42,000,000 gold.

"We fitted out Canada with $14,000,000 gold, which it asked from London, and which London did not wish to send and to make the thing complete, we agreed to let the Bank of England keep the weekly deliveries of gold from the Transvaal at a time when by Lombard street's own admission the market for international exchange entitled New York to it.

"All this was evidence of our own financial strength; and it was clearly wise for us to follow such policy, rather than have the European money markets at one another's throats.

"But the process did not help towards providing ways and means for recovery on our Stock Exchange.

"In view of these conditions, it is only fair to say that the stock market's advance this week may have meant more than a rise in an ordinary season would have done.

Political Outlook Clearer.

"When markets made a showing of this kind, Wall street must have some definite explanation, and this week it found one which contented it.

"At Washington, the financial interests long ago found themselves to have fallen on evil days. The working man might insist on a place in the Cabinet for a Secretary of Labor; the most simple-minded employer knew that proposal for a Secretary of Capital would be received with shouts of laughter.

"Other organizations might pound on the White House door and demand that the Chief Executive discuss their case in his official address to Congress; incorporated wealth would not venture even to ask its own case be left out.

"As a natural result, the financial community—ranging from the small investor to the malefactor of great wealth—faced the opening proceedings, at each successive session of Congress, with a sinking heart.

"Metaphorically speaking, the corporations have perused the Washington dispatches, in the first week of a good many past Decembers, with convulsive tremors, while inquiring what fresh discipline they were now to undergo.

"The President who happened the pulpit was accepted as the prosecutor; the President who laid down the law was accepted as the Judge, and the corporation always felt itself to be in the prisoner's dock.

"At last the time arrived when the wretched and possibly repentant corporations looked for a President who should be the headsman; when, to its undisguised surprise, it had nothing handed to it in the annual message of last Tuesday, but an intimation that the anti-trust law should be clarified and made fairer to all concerned; that business men should be relieved from all uncertainties, and that it is quite as important that they should be set free to prosper, as that private monopoly should be destroyed.

Sentiment More Cheerful.

"Such assurances may of themselves mean much or little; that, no doubt, depends on the plan to be proposed, and on the manner in which Congress will receive it.

"This very week, there have been rumblings at the Capitol, from the statesmen who hold that all the world is wrong, and that it should be reformed over night; but a somewhat striking tendency on their part to rumble by themselves, and without the enthusiastic echo which used to follow their most violent proposals, is not easy to ignore.

"Nothing at all is heard from the high authorities in politics of hanging financial magnates as high as Haman, because there has been reaction in the markets.

"Instead, the word appears to have been cautiously given out that a time of trade reaction is not a time to unsettle the business mind by new and startling moves in regulation.

"When the protagonist of the Money Trust inquiry declares himself in favor of a general amnesty in the matter of past corporation offenses, there would seem to be something in the atmosphere at Washington and elsewhere to suggest, at least, a temporary suspension of the national sport of corporation baiting.

"That is a matter for the future which will, as usual, contain disappointments as well as reassurances. But the Wall street which watches tendencies may have expressed its sentiments this week, even in the stock market's more or less ineffective pull at the cords which bind it.

"Next Wednesday the New Haven directors will meet to declare the quarterly dividend. This week the stock sold at 80½c, or 15½ points above the low record established Nov. 15 last.

"Chairman Elliott has as much as said that the dividend would be reduced from 6 per cent to 4; at yesterday's meeting of the executive committee the question of cutting the rate was discussed, but without a view to public announcement of the committee's conclusions.

"November earnings of the New Haven have not proved encouraging, for they showed the road's gross income still to be below 1912.

"Prices closed the week 2 to 3 points above the final figures of last Saturday. Yesterday's market was steady."

HIGH MONEY FAILS TO DISTURB LONDON TRADE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Your market's return to high call money rates is regarded here as probably temporary.

It is doubtful whether it will result in any movement of gold from here to New York, because the short-term American loans, not maturing in this market, are extremely large.

But so far as your stock market is concerned, I have to report an interesting change of sentiment. Among well-informed people here, the opinion is now expressed, that your prices are intrinsically low and that recovery is due.

This opinion is being backed, moreover, by moderate purchasers of American securities. This, I may state as an undoubted fact, substantiated in excellent quarters of finance.

Nevertheless, it is a little difficult to follow the reasoning very far, and unless external influences, such as Mexico and your own domestic politics, were to develop in such manner as to assist the better feeling, I should doubt the performance of such a rise.

Prices Not Very Low.

Prices on your stock market, after all, are not extraordinarily low, your railways have much financing to do in order to place themselves in the right condition, and facilities for conducting any important movement on the Stock Exchange are still inadequate.

In Europe's markets, the postponement of the French public loan is the feature of the moment.

The Paris Bourse is remarkably steady in the face of this disappointment, apparently because the banks have given immediate and energetic support to the market for French securities.

One interesting effect of the postponement is the temporary investment of a French balance in London, pending the probable flotation of the loan in January. Although the Bourse is calm, the delay in issuing the loan has this unfavorable effect, that it is bound to increase the simultaneous rush of the capital applications during January, this adding to the congestion of the markets in that month.

Otherwise, the outlook here is reasonably good. Considerable money is awaiting investment, and the public is buying moderately. This is offset by the natural fear that a revival may be swamped by new loan issues.

However, the year will probably end comfortably in the money market, though present indications favor continuance of comparatively dear money well into the new year.

It is still believed that efforts to draw gold to the various markets will be a feature of the early part of 1914, and there are many small weak spots here, with unpleasant losses involved, in connection with the liquidation of the Indian specie bank.

A strong financial syndicate has been formed to take over a large speculative position, in that matter, and trouble is now averted.

New capital applications immediately impending are numerous and important.

COTTON IS STEADY DESPITE TALES OF TRADE DULLNESS

Figures on Yield and Consumption Look to Be Bullish, but Shippers Are Bearish.

The cotton market continues steady, but there is a feeling of uncertainly as to the future. Sentiment is very much mixed and conditions justify varying opinions. Statistically there is nothing bearish in the situation. The visible supply of American cotton is about 600,000 bales less than at the same time last year, and the crop, taking the average of the estimates of the large Cotton Exchanges of the country, is not overwhelmingly big even at 14,250,000 bales, which about expresses the general idea. The estimate of consumption for the current season is about 14,750,000 bales of American.

Much interest is shown in the forthcoming ginners' report by the Census Bureau and the estimate of the total crop by the Department of Agriculture. Attempts to forecast these reports are many and private estimates of the ginners' reports vary from 13,700,000 to 12,100,000 bales. Generally, the expectation is for an estimate of about 13,800,000 bales of actual growth for the crop, exclusive of linters and repacks. This would be the second largest crop of record, but not too large for the estimated consumption.

When Business "Sees Things."

On figures, then, the situation is bullish. Against these figures are many conditions that will affect seriously the amount of cotton to be consumed, if appearances are not deceitful. Chief among these is that intangible something called "bad trade," an unknown quantity and ofttimes largely imaginary at first but, if dwelt upon too long, at last a very concrete and uncomfortable condition of affairs.

Just now, Europe is depressed, and people are pessimistic over future conditions of the textile trade, and are comparing conditions with those existing two years ago, forgetting that there never before was such a volume of business done by European manufacturers of cotton goods as at that time. That there should come after that a slackening was not to be wondered at, but that such a falling off in business should last, is hardly to be expected when we know that stocks of finished goods are not large, except, possibly, in the Red Sea countries, and spinners' stocks of raw cotton are not large.

It should not be overlooked that the Balkan countries, which are supplied largely by the European countries which are now suffering the greatest depression, should quickly recover from the effects of the wars, and should soon become steady purchasers, as is usually the case after devastating wars, such as they have had; a war which literally destroyed everything.

England, the greatest user of American cotton, complains of bad trade, but it should not be overlooked that England's consumption (not yearly takings because they carry large stocks), does not vary in proportion to the size of the idea called "bad trade," as it is fixed in the minds of those who fear it. In this country, while the situation is slightly confused as to prices, spinners' stocks of yarns are small, and their asking prices somewhat above what weavers and other users are willing to pay. But with small stocks of both yarns and cotton, spinners are inclined to go slow about meeting the ideas of buyers when it comes to a reduction.

Orders Few, Say Shippers.

Shippers of cotton complain of an unusual dullness. They say that for weeks they have not received an order and sales are rather forced. Cotton is accumulating in shippers' hands and is forced into the larger markets for want of funds in the interior. This condition is largely the result of fear of the low and damaged cotton. Buyers have been fearful of getting too much of this low cotton along with the good and have to a great extent withdrawn from the smaller interior markets and have forced holders of cotton in those markets to seek an outlet elsewhere.

The unusual flood of cotton towards the larger markets and the consequent heavy stocks there have made buyers bearish and inclined to stand-off for a decline. Holders of cotton say the decline will not come as the cotton is readily financed when the borrower's demands are reasonable and the accumulations are receptive, because gins are shutting down all over the cotton country.

The question just now is—has the weak holder been eliminated?

The strong feature of the market is that there has been no concerted holding of cotton. From all accounts cotton has been rapidly marketed and has passed out of the producers' hands with a little more than usual expedition. In the "big crop year" the lowest price of the season came in the middle of December. Then spinners, seeing a tremendous supply of cotton ahead of them, sold their yarns to all who would buy and the result was a steady demand and climbing prices to the very end of the season.

CATTLE SLIGHTLY HIGHER; RECEIPTS ONLY MODERATE

All Grades Advance Uniformly Because of a Consistent Demand for Beef.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year ago.
Cattle	12,500	11,158	34,973
Hogs	60,000	45,427	74,831
Sheep	10,000	11,480	19,807
Horses and mules	3,500	3,447	2,344

Under the aiding influence of moderate supplies, the cattle market continued to show improvement the past week. Receipts were just enough to meet the demand each day, and while the call showed slightly more strength than it possessed the previous period, it was none too heavy, and the chances were that had the run been any larger all of the preceding week's advances would have been lost. As it was, however, sellers were able to hold the advance, and also to liquidate on even higher levels. The steer trade for the week was conducted on a big 15c higher basis, with extremes of 25c. Very few choice steers were received, a load of 1000-pound beeves at $8.85, was the top for the week. Bulk of desirable grades went in a range of $8@8.55, and medium kinds downward of $7.90.

Local butchers played a very prominent part in the week's trade in cows and heifers. There was a strong demand from this element at all stages of the period. Packers also took a very active interest in the market. The supply was very moderate, and there were one or two occasions when the demand was considerably stronger than the supply could meet. As a result, the market had strength all week, and prices on practically all grades of heifers were 15@25c better than the preceding week. A load of prime yearling steers and heifers brought the week's top which was $9. There was a fair sprinkling of heifers that sold in a range of $8@8.75, and bulk of the medium to good grades went upwards of $6.75.

Minor Grades Advance, Too.

The showing of cows was moderate, and with a strong demand, medium to best grades advanced 15@25c. A few good beef cows sold at $6.50@7.25, and bulk went at $5.50@6.25.

Canners and cutters were 10@15c higher for the week.

Bulls were in moderate showing, and prices were generally 10@15c higher.

Vealers opened steady, but as the week aged, prices advanced 25@50c. Prime kinds topped at $11.50.

The trade in stockers and feeders was good, as the demand was strong, and the supply only moderate. Practically all grades of stockers and feeders enjoyed a 15@25c higher price level than the week previous. Best feeders sold at $6.50@7.25, and stockers went generally at $6@6.50.

Receipts in the quarantine division were exceptionally moderate, and, as usual, the bulk of the showing emanated from canner territory. While there were a few Oklahoma steers available, the showing from this State was far below normal for this period of the year. There was a strong demand for what steers were offered, and action was characteristic of the week's trade. Best steers sold at $6.75@7.15, and light kinds brought $5.50.

The trade in canners was conducted on a 10@15c higher basis than the previous week, much of the advance being due to the fact that the supply was not of sufficient volume to meet the demand. Yearlings and heretics also scored a general 15c gain for the week.

Hogs at Year's Low Mark.

The supply of hogs was much better last week than other weeks this fall, but at that a whole lot less than the number received a year ago. The good number of hogs on sale here and at other Western markets enabled the buyers to take matters well in hand and they proceeded to take off the price until the market was on the lowest basis it has been since last January.

All buyers were hammering the market, but the packers were worse than the shippers and city butchers. Best hogs, 200 lbs. and over, $7.65@7.90, while the mixed and plain grades sold largely at $7.30@7.60. Packers purchased the mixed and plain hogs as a rule and they also purchased the rough heavy hogs at $7.25@7.50, and there was a good many rough on sale.

Lights and pigs found a dull trade most of the week and sold on a lower basis. The best grades sold pretty good. Best lights under 165 lbs. sold at $7.40@7.75, fair grades $7@7.35, best pigs under 125 lbs. $6.60@7, fair pigs $6@6.50, and common kinds under $6. The trade for roasters is over for the present, so they are selling along with other pigs.

Sheep and Lambs Active.

A right good supply of sheep and lambs was received and there was some pretty good fat lambs in the lot, but there was also a good demand and the market was active each day and prices advanced until they were on the highest basis they have been for two or three weeks. The advance was about evenly distributed between the sheep and lambs.

A good many fed lambs were received from Missouri and Iowa and they sold at $7.65@8, the latter price being the top for the week, while other lambs sold at $7.40@7.75, fair grades $7@7.25, and poor kinds and culls at $5@6.50. Buyers were unable to sort the lambs very closely on account of the strong competition. Some fed Western yearlings sold at $6@6.25.

With a pretty good number of sheep on the market, trading was active and prices higher, the best selling at $4.65@4.90, and others at $4.50@4.60, with some plain grades at $4.25@4.40. Choppers and stockers went at $3.50@4, plain stockers $2.65@3.35, old cull sheep and canners $2.25@2.60, and bucks $3.75@4.

Wheat prices were irregular and quiet the past week. Outside trade was small and professionals made the market. Actual price-making news was at a premium.

Reports from the winter wheat belt were conflicting. The mild weather has caused talk of forced growth and chances of bug damage in the spring, as conditions have been favorable for the development of insect life.

The trade also is watching the weather map closely, as a sudden freeez over the growing belt without snow covering, as at present, might cause severe damage over a wide area.

Of course damage reports at this season of the year are to be belittled by traders, as the position of wheat in December is seldom a good barometer of conditions in the spring or at harvest.

There has seldom been a year, however, when warm weather has prevailed in the fall as at present, that the wheat crop has not depreciated severely from its early promise. It has been noticeable that under similar conditions insects have materially lowered the crop. There has been much good buying of the July futures on this account.

Market Is Stronger.

Aside from the crop outlook, the market seems to be working into a stronger position, as far as the domestic outlook is concerned.

Receipts in the Northwest have fallen off to a point that has surprised even the bulls, and have proved conclusively that the tariff bill caused farmers to sell their supplies freely for fear of competition with Canadian grain, and that this cleaned up Northwestern stocks as they have not been cleaned up in years.

The movemetn in the winter wheat belt also is showing signs of a considerable shortage in the late season, and during the week there were reports that farmers in Western Missouri were buying wheat for feeding purposes.

There were also reports from the same section that insects were developing in that territory, especially Hessian fly, and that unless cold weather came soon the wheat plant would be stooling at this early season, and if caught by a sudden freeze would be irreparably damaged.

The domestic visible supply of wheat continues in excess of last year, but indications are that in the near future stocks will be below those of a year ago.

If the receipts continue as light as at present, this situation may develop in a very few weeks, which would be a big card in the bulls' favor.

Foreign supplies are large, but not excessive, and once the Argentina early movement has been cleared up there will be an opportunity for an advance in wheat.

Best posted traders say that the point to buy wheat for a long pull will be in January, when the flush movement from Argentina helps the bear side of the market.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 83,256,000 bu, against 86,112,000 bu last week, showing a decrease of 2,856,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 1,952,000 bu, and last year a decrease of 400,000 bu, when the total amounted to 88,400,000 bu.

Bradstreet's detailed showed: Wheat, United States and east of Rockies, decrease 618,000 bu; United States and west of Rockies, decrease 266,000 bu; Canada, decrease 190,000 bu; United States and Canada, decrease 1,074,000 bu; afloat and in Europe, decrease 2,900,000 bu. Total decrease 3,974,000 bu. Corn, decrease 106,000 bu; oats, decrease 432,000 bu.

Grain in store in Chicago: Wheat, 8,691,000 bu; increase 37,000 bu; last year, 9,332,000 bu. Corn, 536,000 bu; decrease 359,000 bu; last year, 576,000 bu. Oats, 13,690,000 bu; decrease 510,000 bu; last year, 3,418,000 bu. Contract stocks: Wheat, 4,706,000 bu; increase, 222,000 bu; last year, 4,823,000 bu. Corn, 164,000 bu; decrease, 94,000 bu; last year, 53,000 bu. Oats 6,746,000 bu; increase, 71,000 bu; last year, 280,000 bu.

Supplies Not Excessive.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 862,000 bu for the week; corn, 308,000 bu; oats, 575,000 bu.

The total visible supply shows:

	Today.	Last Year.
Wheat	58,868,000	55,100,000
Corn	2,036,000	1,525,000
Oats	29,664,000	10,774,000

Changes:

	Last Week.	Last Year.
Wheat, inc.	217,000	Inc. 30,000
Corn, dec.	1,190,000	Dec. 10,000
Oats, dec.	897,000	Dec. 1,227,000

The Canadian visible shows:

	This Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Last Year.
Wheat	18,441,000	20,369,000	15,211,000
Oats	10,683,000	9,410,000	5,782,000

Deliveries of wheat on December contracts in St. Louis Monday amounted to 255,000 bu. There were 165,000 bu oats also delivered. No corn was delivered.

Kansas City reported 157,000 bu. wheat and 10,000 bu corn delivered, while Minneapolis reported 25,000 bu wheat. There were no deliveries at Winnipeg up to noon.

At Chicago 620,000 bu wheat and 5,375,000 bu oats were reported delivered.

In corn, the market's position is complicated by the unusually mild weather. Ordinarily at this time corn, on a short crop like the last one, would be advancing on feeding demands, but the plans of the bulls have been interfered with by Mother Nature.

Best opinion is, however, that later when the supplies have been cleaned up, that higher prices will prevail.

This opinion is based on continued good cash demands, light receipts and the failure of recent shipments of Argentina corn to the United States, to have more than a passing influence on values.

Broomhall's cabled German official report said: "According to an official report the crops are as follows: Wheat this year, 171,096,000 bu; last year, 160,240,000 bu. Rye this year, 449,128,000 bu; last year, 420,800,000 bu. Oats this year, 704,930,000 bu; last year, 617,000,000 bu. Potatoes this year, 53,000,000 tons; last year, 49,400,000 tons."

Bradstreet's exports showed:

the Glass bill (new currency) becomes a national law it will enable banks to obtain an issue of bank notes on the security of discounts, acceptances and all forms of commodity credit. In this event, $1 of lawful money will equal $3 of credit. This method is proposed as a plan to release a vast amount of money now hoarded in vaults and, therefore, will bring to brokers a large investment clientele heretofore unknown. While this currency bill is pending passage at Washington there is no better time for St. Louis brokers to advertise stock and bond bargains, and there is no better medium than the Post-Dispatch, the one newspaper in every home—the only newspaper in many homes.

Rupture Cured At Home

Old Sea Captain Cured Himself by Simple Means Within Reach of All Sufferers.

His Remedy and Big, Interesting Book Sent Free to All Sufferers.

If Captain Collings could cure himself of a double rupture that kept him bedridden for years, by a simple means of his own invention, why cannot you achieve the same blessed result by doing as he did? You can't be much, if any, worse off than this old seafarer was, for no truss could hold his rupture. Docters told him he must be operated upon or die. Yet he cured himself absolutely, and his big, free book tells how.

"Blast my toplights! I can dance the hornpipe as well as if I'd never been ruptured!"

Why should you continue to go through life with the awful handicap of a rupture? Why be annoyed and embarrassed by awkward, uncomfortable and ineffective trusses that are only makeshifts at the best? Why be denied so many of the pleasures and joys of life because the slightest violent exertion may cause the truss to slip and the rupture to displace?

MAN AND WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN A CAB, THROATS CUT

Driver Discovers Bodies of Passengers, Both Married, After Midnight Drive.

HE HEARD NO STRUGGLE

Gettysburg (Pa.) Merchant Believed to Have Slain Companion and Ended Own Life.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 6.—At the end of a drive of less than two miles, just after midnight, Charles Harbold opened the door of his cab to awaken his two "fares," whom he supposed to be asleep, and found both dead, with their throats cut. The man was M. F. Rebert, an aged wealthy produce merchant of Gettysburg. The woman was Mrs. Edgar Warren, 32 years old, who it developed has been living a double life since her marriage two years ago. Rebert apparently had killed the woman and then committed suicide.

Harbold drove at top speed to the Harrisburg Hospital when he made his discovery. The case was so clear that Coroner Jacob F. Eckinger did not even hold a formal inquest today.

Refuses to Bury Wife.

Edgar Warren, the woman's husband, never suspected his wife's unfaithfulness to him until notified of the tragedy, although it is said she had been meeting Rebert frequently since her marriage to Warren in 1911. The Warrens lived together in Paxtang, a suburb of this city, the husband being a flagman on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad.

Warren told a Post-Dispatch correspondent that he is glad everything is over. Discovery through the tragedy of his wife's unfaithfulness turned him completely against her. He burned all pictures of her this morning; declined to take charge of the body and announced that he would not attend the funeral.

Rebert summoned Harbold, the cabby, near midnight last night, to a house on the edge of Harrisburg's disorderly district. He and Mrs. Warren got into the cab and Harbold drove toward Paxtang. When the cab arrived at the corner where he had been told to stop Harbold got off his seat, opened the door and discovered both "fares" to be dead.

Rebert seemingly had premeditated the crime. It was committed with a small pocketknife, the blade, not 2 inches long, having been ground to a razor edge. With this small weapon Rebert had almost severed the woman's head from her body and had gashed his own throat so badly that he could have lived only a few moments.

Heard No Struggle.

Harbold had heard no struggle in his cab, but he said the couple were quarreling when they entered the cab. Rebert must have committed the deed soon after the trip started, for the clothing of the two and the upholstery of the cab were blood-soaked.

The police believe that the woman had threatened to expose Rebert to his friends in Gettysburg, who held him in high esteem, unless he complied with certain demands she made. This theory is based on fragments of the conversation which the cab driver overheard.

Rebert was married and it is said that Gettysburg people had never suspected his actions when he visited Harrisburg. Coroner Eckinger said a formal inquest would be a useless expense. "It's a clear case of murder and suicide, so why empanel a jury?" was his remark.

Friends of Mrs. Warren may take charge of her body to save it from burial by the county. Rebert's body will be sent to Gettysburg.

MRS. PANKHURST NEAR COLLAPSE FROM HUNGER

Release From Jail on License Is Expected; Too Weak for Transportation.

EXETER, England, Dec. 6.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, hunger and thirst-striking suffragette leader, was said to be in an extremely weakened and enfeebled condition in jail here today, and her release on license is anticipated before long. It is believed she now is too weak to be transferred to Holloway Jail.

Exhibition Hall and Scenic Railway Burned.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The campaign of revenge for the rearrest of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was continued by the militant suffragettes today. Exhibition Hall, in the southeastern suburban district of Rusholme, near Manchester, was burned to the ground today, causing a loss of $60,000. At Liverpool the scenic railway was found to be in flames and the firemen had difficulty in preventing the spread of the fire to other buildings.

TRAIN KILLS AND STRIPS MAN; TAKES BODY 4 MILES

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 6.—Efforts of the county authorities to discover the identity of the man struck and killed by a Frisco passenger train near here last night were without success late today. His nude body was found today at Springfield on the pilot of the engine. His hat and vest were found for four miles along the railroad track, and bits of his torn trousers and underwear were picked up by the Coroner this afternoon at intervals between the railroad station and the place where the accident occurred. It is believed that the man was partially undressed at the time the train struck his buggy, and that other parts of his apparel were torn from his body by the violence of the impact. His shoes and socks were still on his feet.

SAN DOMINGO PROTESTS AGAINST U. S. 'OBSERVERS'

Fears Rebels Would Think Such Action Meant Government Weakness.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Refusal of the State Department to confirm officialy or to make any comment on the report that this Government plans to send observers to San Domingo to watch the elections there Dec. 15, is believed here to be due to a protest made by the Dominican Government.

The Dominican Government has told the State Department, it was learned, that it will see to it that a fair election is held. The sending of Americans to Santo Domingo, even if they went only as observers, and not as official representatives of this Government, the Dominicans claim, would practicaly amount to an open declaration to the rebel elements of the islands that the Government was not capable of conducting her elections as previously agreed upon.

Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Only Hope of 10,000 Children

Letters are pouring into the office of the Post-Dispatch from children who are looking to the Post-Dispatch Christmas festival as their only hope for a merry Christmas. There are more than 10,000 children in St. Louis who have no other hope. If the Christmas festival were not to be given or if it were found necessary to set a limit to its bestowal these children would wake on Christmas morn to disappointment and heartbreak.

It is for these that the Christmas festival has been given for 13 years and is to be given this, the 14th year. Its mission is to make all poor children in St. Louis happy on the day on which it is childhood's birthright to be happy, a birthright out of which, however, thousands would be cheated if it were not for the festival.

All Stockings to Be Filled.

"No empty Christmas stocking" is the slogan of the festival. It is for the filling of all the stockings that the managers of the festival work for weeks before the great day. It is to enable them to fill all the stockings that contributions are asked from those who, better cherished by the Fates, are able to contribute, and by contributing add to their own Christmas joy.

The heartening thing about the letters from the little people is that so many of them ask not so much for themselves as for their smaller brothers and sisters. Not content with asking for these, many of the letters ask that other children, having no claim of relationship, will not be forgotten.

Maud Wenner writes that kind of a letter. "I am a little girl 7 years old," she writes, "and I hope you will not forget to come and see my little brother and sisters and all the other little boys and girls and myself on Christmas eve. I would like to have a nice teddy bear and a nice doll and a nice set of furs, and that is all I want."

Dinners Will Be Provided.

For this child and her brother and sisters and all the other little children in whose behalf she speaks the Christmas Festival is to be given. Christmas dinners are to be sent to poor homes all over the city. After dinner the children are to be taken free to the Coliseum on the cars of the United Railways Co., and there they will be greeted by Santa Claus, who will show them the finest Christmas tree that can be found in the Ozarks, aglow with lights and weighted down with gifts. For two hours they will have such a Christmas entertainment as has never before been given in St. Louis, and they will be sent back to their homes with their arms filled with Christmas present.

More than 10,000 children will participate in the dinners and in the festival as beneficiaries. Ten times 10,000 children have the opportunity of participating as benefactors, by sending their dimes and dollars to the Christmas Festival Fund.

No one can really enjoy Christmas without helping someone else to enjoy it. The Christmas Festival provides the opportunity ready made to hand for all the fortunate children to make their own Christmas joy certain by helping to bring Christmas joy to others.

Contributions are beginning to come in. The N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co. and employes yesterday sent in $21.36. The Maintenance of Way Department of the Terminal Railway Association sent $7.30. Albert Williamson, vice-president and manager of the Dinks Parrish Laundry, sent $5 with a promise that the contributions of employes will be sent later. Frank Galennie, in sending $1, wrote that "Your Christmas Festival is the only one that characterizes the spirit of Christmas tide. A number of other contributions were received.

Executives Approve Plan.

Members of the Executive Committee are enthusiastic in their approval of the plans for this year's festival. Secretary Oscar Leonard, who is Superintendent of the Jewish Educational and Charitable Association, said yesterday:

"It is certainly a fine idea to have a sort of semi-municipal festival for all the children of St. Louis who care to come and enjoy or take part in the entertainment. Our trouble in America is that we do not play together. We work together, but that is all. I believe the Post-Dispatch Festival is pointing the way for big communal festivals. It has been the pioneer in this and the results are beginning to be visible in the proposal of a municipal Christmas celebration.

"This year's arrangement of sending the food to the homes of those who need so that they may gather around the family table is excellent. After a fine dinner the family will come to a fine holiday entertainment in the Coliseum. The spirit of the thing is fine. I am glad to know that the homeless men are not forgotten and will have their own meal, as usual in a fine downtown restaurant.

"I expect a fine entertainment and lots of fun at the Coliseum. I do not hesitate to take part in it because it is really a communal affair. As I understand it the Post-Dispatch is simply helping the community show its good will to all."

Roger Baldwin, Prof. Mangold and Executive Committee of the Festival Commend This Year's Plans for Having Dinners in Homes of Needy.

Notice to Contributors to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund

LISTS on which contributions to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund may be subscribed in offices, factories, shops and other public places, will be distributed to reliable persons by a staff of Post-Dispatch employes.

The Post-Dispatch will send contribution lists to reliable persons on request. No one is authorized to solicit money for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund. Give contributions only to persons you know to be reliable. Contributions and list collections should be sent to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Fund or by messenger to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch.

Upon request, an authorized employe will be sent for collection. All contributions will be acknowledged in the columns of the Post Dispatch.

Dr. George B. Mangold, director of the School of Social Economy of Washington University, said:

"I believe that it is best for people to have their Christmas dinner in their own home, where every family circle can enjoy itself most and partake of the elements of good cheer. It is there that the real spirit of the Yuletide can express itself. The Christmas Festival, however, gives a fine opportunity, especially for the children, to carry out this spirit and to be inspired by it. In the country districts, the Christmas Festival in the churches, with its Christmas trees and song and rejoicing, marks the culmination of this spirit. In the large cities the festival idea should take root, and opportunities be given for rejoicing and thanksgiving; and for the celebration of the day in a manner that befits it. It is a great gain to supplement the dinner in the home with a festival in the afternoon or evening, when children can be delighted with song and story and pleasant sights."

Preserves Family Unit.

Roger Baldwin, secretary of the Civic League, said: "The chief purpose of modern social service is to build up the home, when poverty, disease and misfortune have broken it down. It is for the preservation of the family unit as opposed to institutionalism in all its forms, that such agencies as the juvenile court, mothers' pensions and visiting nurses have been established. This is the new spirit behind the decision of the Post-Dispatch committee to bend its chief effort to giving folks a merry Christmas at home this year, to bring more cheer to the privacy of the family circle. For the public eye is fittingly preserved the drama of Christmas—the tree, the tableaux, the spectacle which embodies the rites of the old pagan festival and the spirit of Christianity."

HARRIMAN IN TWO WEEKS IS RAILROAD GRADUATE

Late Magnate's Son Learns How to Run Big System at First Hand in Omaha.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 6.—W. Averill Harriman, New York millionaire and son of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate, was graduated from railroading last night and left for his home in New York City. For two weeks Harriman has been in Omaha learning how to run a big railroad system at first hand, that he might know something of the business in which he has so many millions of dollars invested.

Harriman is a director of the U. P. and chose that property as a school. While here he spent a short time in every department, both in the headquarters and the shops. The young man went through each department, but devoted most time to the locomotive shops.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 6.—The President of the Republic, Dr. Saenz Pena, who, on Oct. 6, was granted a two-months' leave of absence from his official duties, today made a request for an extension of his leave for another two months. GIRL, 13, GETS 10 YEARS FOR KILLING PLAYMATE, 8

She Became Angry When Hit With Dead Bird and Murdered Child With Spade.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Dec. 6.—Thirteen-year-old Kathleen Simmons was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Brown here today for the murder of Julia Jennings, 8 years old, at Wakaw, Sask., on June 21 last.

The girl did not premeditate the crime, she said, as the details were drawn from her by counsel. Her anger was aroused by her companion, who annoyed her by striking her with the body of a dead prairie chicken. Kathleen slapped the younger child, who fell to the ground but arose defiant, refusing to cease her teasing.

Finally the older girl, exasperated beyond control of herself, seized a spade they were using in their work of gathering medicinal plants and struck her playmate on the head, felling her. Afterwards, crazed with rage, Kathleen struck the senseless form again and again until no sign of life appeared. Waking then to a realization of her deed, but with only a child's grasp of its horror, she fled to her home.

The popularity of the Post-Dispatch "people's popular lost wants" is due to their activity in bringing back lost articles.

GIRL, 19, ARRESTED FOR DESERTING BABY FREED

Cora White of East St. Louis Decides She Wants Child Back.

Cora White, 19 years old, of East St Louis, who was arrested after she had abandoned her 3-weeks-old baby in the Arcade Building, across the street from the police station, was released yesterday and the child was given back to her. She told Chief Payne she abandoned the little one in a period of melancholy, but later desired to regain it and care for it.

Two hours after the woman left the baby she telephoned to the police station and asked that the child be returned to her. She said she had changed her mind and wanted to get it back. Sergt. Ely arranged by telephone to meet the woman at Broadway and Sixteenth street. He used a rag baby for a decoy, and when he met the woman he arrested her.

Man Who Came to St Louis to Attend Church Also Taken to Station.

One-half hour after he had been arrested yesterday with 19 other waiters on a charge of disturbing the peace in front of Nagel's cafe at Sixth and St. Charles streets, Harry Taylor, a striking waiter, was rearrested for committing the same offense at the same place, on charges preferred by Frank W. Heffernan, a retired traveling salesman of Steelville, Mo. Taylor insisted that Heffernan had called him names, and both were taken to the Central District Station, where they were released.

The 20 waiters were arrested for picketing in front of the cafe. Taylor returned after his release. Heffernan was entering the place when Taylor blocked his way. A patrolman, seeing an impending fight, took both away to the station. Heffernan had come from Steelville to attend church Sunday.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear mother, Mary Kahre, who departed this life one year ago, Dec. 6, 1912.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather round my door,
Silently they bring before me
That dear sweet face I see no more.
Rest in peace, your cares are ended,
Rest in peace, your work is done;
You are gone and those who loved you
Now are coming, one by one.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband, Michael Whelan, who departed this life one year ago, Dec. 1, 1912.

Just one year ago you left me,
Broken-hearted and all alone,
All is dark within my home,
Lonely is my heart today,
For my husband I loved so dearly
Has forever passed away.

Michael has gone, but not forgotten. Sadly missed by a loving wife.
IDA WHELAN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear idolized son and brother, Sandy Edward West, who entered into rest Dec. 4, 1912.

Col. Harvey, First 'Wilson Man,' Assails U. S. Policy On Mexico

Says "Our Way Failed"

Editor in North American Review Declares Administration Must Back-Track and Now Try Huerta's Way.

Col. George B. M. Harvey, editor of the North American Review, arraigns President Wilson's Mexican policy in the December number of that magazine. Double significance attends this attack on the administration because Col. Harvey was the original Wilson-for-President man, and was booming him for years before the country began to think seriously of the Princeton prexy and the Jersey Governor for that high office.

Col. Harvey's boom articles were a conspicuous feature of Harper's Weekly, of which he was then editor, but several months before the national convention, Gov. Wilson frankly told Col. Harvey that he would be greatly obliged to him if he would keep his (Wilson's) name out of his paper. This request was made because a rumor was in circulation that Harper's Weekly was voicing the wishes of Wall street in advocating Wilson's nomination, and Wilson determined upon a course that would forever eradicate this impression from the mind of anybody who might credit it.

After this incident, Col. Harvey retired to the background, where he remained until the publication of this article. Heretofore, he has been neutral in discussion of the administration, and this is the first hostile criticism he has made. By special permission of the North American Review, the Sunday Post-Dispatch herewith presents the salient features of Col. Harvey's article.

By COL. G. B. M. HARVEY.
(Copyrighted, 1913, by the North American Review.)

WHAT legal or moral right has a President of the United States to say who shall or shall not be President of Mexico? and did not President Wilson imbed himself in a practically inextricable position when he demanded the retirement of Huerta?

To the first question there can be but one answer from a technical standpoint. Mr. Asquith gave it when he said that His Majesty's Government was "bound to deal with him (Huerta) as with any other Central or South American state, whatsoever was at the time the de facto Government." Germany, France, Spain, Austria and Russia gave it when they accredited Ministers to the new administration.

Pierce Established Precedent.

President Franklin Pierce gave it when he declared in his message to Congress on May 15, 1856:

> It is the established policy of the United States to recognize governments without question of their source of organization or of the means by which the governing persons attain their power, provided there be a government de facto accepted by the people of the country. * * * It is the more imperatively necessary to apply this rule to the Spanish-American peoples in consideration of the frequent and not seldom anomalous changes of organization or administration which they undergo and the revolutionary character of most of the changes.

Whether or not President Huerta would have been able to restore order throughout Mexico if he had possessed the means of which he was deprived by President Wilson's refusal to accord with the action of other nations and with what President Pierce pronounced "the established policy of the United States" is a matter of conjecture. That it would have been the part of wisdom to give him a chance to try is, we believe, in the light of subsequent events, the consensus of opinion in our own country at the present time.

Extrication Is Difficult.

To the second question we suspect the correct answer would be that the President's predicament is one from which satisfactory extrication is at the least difficult. What amazes us is that he should ever have gotten into it.

Surely there could have been no doubt of the consequence of his demand that Huerta relinquish authority upon the ground, clearly implied, that he was directly concerned in the assassination of Madero. If innocent he would not, and if guilty he could not, comply with such a request. Acquiescence would have spelt confession in either case.

Nothing could be plainer than that President Wilson's method frustrated his own intent and could not possibly have operated otherwise. Instead of eliminating Huerta from power, he riveted him in his place, there to remain, in all probability, until he shall be expelled by force of arms.

It is proverbially easy to criticise, especially after the event. Probably President Wilson himself now realizes that it would have been better to accord recognition to the de facto Government in compliance with the unanimous recommendation of the diplomatic corps in Mexico, upon the grounds set forth by Mr. Asquith.

Calls It Dictating to Dictator.

But, having once assumed a wider responsibility by attempting to dictate to the dictator, in pursuance of a policy which was ethical rather than practical, he was forbidden by regard for the nation's dignity, no less than by his own obduracy, to recede from the position which he had taken. It followed inevitably that his original and wholly admirable purposes, which comprehended real assistance to a distracted neighbor and avoidance of war on our own part, should narrow to a single definite aim, namely, the disposition of Huerta.

To this end the President has directed all his energies; chiefly, after the failure of moral suasion, by way of menace. But all semi-official threatenings, first of lifting the embargo upon the delivery of arms to the insurgents, then of inaugurating a "peaceful blockade" of the Mexican ports, then of seeking to starve the Government through the co-operation of foreign powers, and, finally, of severing diplomatic relations entirely, have so far been in vain. Huerta, at this writing, seems to be more stubborn and determined than at any previous time; has crushed out all opposition in his Cabinet and Congress; holds the army apparently under perfect control; is not destitute of funds, and, oddly enough, has been strengthened immeasurably with the Mexican people by report of the peremptory refusal of Caranza to accept mediatory proposals of any kind from Washington.

Conditions Are Intolerable.

Meanwhile, the wretched country is being devastated, from the Rio Grande to the Southern Gulf; prisoners taken in battle are being slaughtered ruthlessly; helpless noncombatants are becoming the prey of savage bandits; railways are being torn up; mining and other properties to the value of unreckoned millions have already been destroyed, and American and European residents are fleeing for their lives. The gravity of the situation from the standpoint of Mexico, of our own country, or of humanity cannot be exaggerated. We are confronted by a condition of anarchy, not by a theory of government, and the condition has become intolerable.

Nobody here or abroad and nobody in Mexico who need be considered, questions the high purpose which has actuated President Wilson. Nobody suspects his good faith, the purity of his motives or the pacificatory nature of his methods. Nobody doubts that he has done his best and nobody can demonstrate that another could have done better.

Says Policy Has Failed.

But the policy which the President sincerely believed to be the wisest has failed. Why could and why should he not now address the de facto Government of Mexico substantially as follows:

> We have exerted our best endeavors, according to our best judgment, to aid in restoring peace and prosperity to you, our neighbors and our friends. We have been disinterested, as you know, but our suggestions, having failed to meet with the approval of either the provisional Government or of the commander of the insurrectionary forces, have necessarily proved unavailing.
> Deeply as we regret this circumstance, we frankly admit it to be a fact. But it is the accomplishment, not the method, that we still regard as vital.
> We have tried our way in vain. Now we stand ready to try yours.
> Your Ambassador will be received in Washington. We will accredit a new Ambassador to you "without previous conditions."
> We shall hold your Government responsible for the lives and properties of all foreign residents, and shall notify other nations to that effect. All of our dealings with your administration will be in the open, in good faith, and in sincere hope that a truly representative and stable Government may soon be established, to the end that, within a reasonable time, peace and prosperity may be regained in all parts of your distracted land.

Says It Would Avert War.

We hear the objections to this new policy. It would be unfair to the Constitutionalists and rebels. But, since their leader has repulsed our attempts at mediation, what further claim have they upon our consideration?

It would strengthen Huerta, or Blanquet, or Moheno, or whoever may be in control when these words reach the public ear and mind. That cannot be helped. We must strengthen somebody, and apparently there is little room for choice.

It would be inconsistent with our declared attitude, would be a recession on the part of the President, would humiliate us as a nation in the eyes of the world. Perhaps, yes; and for that very reason it would live forever as a performance and an example, as the noblest act ever done by a great and powerful nation in the interest of a weak and suffering people.

And it would avert war—at least for time sufficient to allow for adjustment and mutual understanding. That is the overpowering consideration which should, and, we hope, may influence a President who surely must realize that he is not merely the tribune of a people, but is also the head of a nation which should set the pace for all the world in works of self-abnegation tending to universal peace.

SAYRES ARRIVE IN ENGLAND; MET BY AMERICAN CONSUL

President's Daughter and Husband Refuse to Be Interviewed; Reach London at 8 A. M.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PLYMOUTH, Dec. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre landed here shortly after midnight this (Sunday) morning from the steamer George Washington. They declined to be interviewed or photographed. United States Consul Stephen and the North German Lloyd publicity manager were the only persons whom President Wilson's daughter and her husband received. The publicity man said he had instructions from United States Ambassador Page to allow no interviews or the taking of photographs.

On the tender the couple occupied the pilot's cabin and proceeded straight on landing to a special salon attached to the boat train, which is expected to reach Paddington Station at 6 a. m.

The Sayres will remain in the salon until 8 a. m., when it is expected Ambassador Page will personally meet them. The couple will visit Lynton, where President Wilson and his family have stayed several times.

It is probable that the Sayres will reach Ambassador Page's residence in Grosvenor Square in time for early breakfast.

Mrs. Sayre in Letter to Clarke Thanks Senate for Wedding Gift.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—A letter from Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of the President, thanking the Senate for its wedding gift, a silver service, was presented to the Senate today by Senator Clarke of Arkansas, President pro tem. of the Senate. The letter written from the White House before the marriage was as follows:

"My Dear Senator Clarke: May I not express to you and through you to the members of the Senate my most grateful appreciation of the Senate's gift. It is as beautiful as it is useful.

"Again and again, as I use it, will the pleasure be renewed of being so generously and so thoughtfully remembered. It will seem as if you had presented to me a store of delightful recollections, recollections of friendship ideally manifested.

"With deepest thanks from both Mr. Sayre and myself, I am

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"JESSIE WOODROW WILSON."

TROLL LOSES FEES ON ALTON WOMAN'S ESTATE

Supreme Court Holds Former Administrator Had No Right to File on $10,000 Bank Stock.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 6.—Harry Troll, former Public Administrator of St. Louis, lost his suit against the Third National Bank of that city through an opinion filed in the Supreme Court today by Commissioner Brown, and with it the administration fees on $10,000 worth of bank stock belonging to the estate of Lucia M. Laird of Alton, Ill.

The woman, during her life, was a resident of Illinois, and the Court holds that if there was any occasion for administering on the bank stock in Missouri, such action should be taken only through a hearing and upon an order from the Probate Court of St. Louis.

POULTRYMEN MOVE FOR SINGLE BIG SHOW NEXT YEAR

Rivalry Is Costing Local Breeders Prestige, Say Those Who Seek Concentration.

AWARDS OF LITTLE VALUE

Both Enterprises Lost Money and Exhibitors Were Forced to Double Expense.

A movement is being organized to bring about a consolidation of the Mississippi Valley Poultry Show Association and the St. Louis Pet Stock, Pigeon and Poultry Association. The object of those interested in the movement is to prevent the holding of two poultry shows in St. Louis during the same week, but to combine the two shows into one big event that will be a credit to the poultry producers of the Mississippi Valley.

The result of holding two shows in St. Louis last month was that the promoters of both lost money, and neither show was up to the standard of the years when all the poultrymen centered their interest in one show.

Exhibitors felt that they were compelled to go to the trouble and expense of exhibiting in both shows. They therefore had to split their exhibits and enter in each show. The fact that two shows were to be held did not appeal to exhibitors in the East and in foreign countries, and very few other than local or purely Western breeders exhibited.

Confusion Makes Awards Useless.

There will be endless confusion later when the winners of prizes in the rival shows advertise their stock and eggs for sale. The winner of a prize in a particular class in one show will find that the public will not be able to understand why it was that some one else won the prize for the same class at St. Louis. One white leghorn exhibitor in the Mississippi Valley Show, for example, when he advertises his winning will find the winner of a similar prize in the other show making the same appeal for business, which will confuse the buyer who does not understand the situation. He is likely to conclude both are fakes.

A few exhibitors who won practically all prizes in their class in both shows—like Dr. L. D. LeGear of Kirkwood, with his exhibits of white plymouth rocks, will not suffer from this confusion in the public mind, but other exhibitors will.

Neither Show as Good.

While both poultry shows were creditable under the circumstances, they fell far short of what they would have been if but one show had been held. There was a split in the old Poultry Show Association, resulting from jealousy on the part of stockholders and officers, and the result was the organization of a new association. In the interest of poultry production and exhibitions the rival factions of poultrymen are asked to lay aside jealousies and get together in one common effort to demonstrate that St. Louis leads in the exhibition of fine poultry.

Missouri is the greatest poultry State in the Union. The State, through the State Poultry Experiment Station at Mountain Grove, is doing much to encourage the breeding of high average laying fowls. As a business the poultry possibilities of Missouri have scarcely been touched, and there is a great future for the industry.

Local poultrymen can do much to keep up the interest in pure bred poultry by uniting their efforts and working for the common good.

Poultry Suggestions.

Keep your ducks laying. Duck eggs are worth five cents more a dozen than hen eggs in some local markets.

The experienced poultry man breeds only from his best winter layers. It is then when prices are at their best and profits are to be counted upon in the poultry business.

The hens that are putting on new plumage need plenty of variety of food to maintain their strength, grow feathers and produce eggs.

BOOTH'S HYOMEI

Has Benefited Thousands of Catarrh Sufferers—Will Do the Same for You or Money Back.

The Hyomei inhaler, the little doctor that has effectively benefited many thousands of sufferers from catarrh, bronchitis, coughs and colds in the head makes it easy and pleasant to treat yourself with Hyomei. Just pour a few drops in the inhaler and breathe it in—no stomach dosing to upset the stomach. The healing, soothing and antiseptic air will reach every nook and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat; will surely stop the irritation almost immediately; will allay the inflammation, drive out the foul odor; kill the germs and banish the disease.

Hyomei as sold by druggists everywhere will quickly and surely relieve catarrh and diseases of the breathing organs or money refunded.

If you suffer from offensive breath, raising of mucus, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, spasmodic coughing, crusts in the nose, watery eyes and general weakness and debility, or any other symptoms of catarrh, you should use Hyomei at once.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including inhaler and bottle of liquid, costs only $1.00, and an extra bottle of liquid, if afterwards needed, is but 50 cents.—ADV.

MOVING PICTURE IN AN EGG DURING THE INCUBATION

Parts of the Future Bird Are Assembled According to a Well Defined Timecard.

The daily observation of the embryo chick in its gradual development should begin 12 hours after the eggs are placed under a hen or in the incubator. When the hen has incubated her egg 12 hours faint lineaments of the head and body of the chicken can be perceived. On the second day, the heart appearing like a horseshoe may be seen.

At the termination of two days, two vesicles of blood can be observed and the pulsations are visible. One vesicle is the left ventricle, the other the root of the great artery. When 50 hours have elapsed, one auricle has made its appearance. At 70 hours, wings are distinguishable and two bubbles, the embryonic brain are seen, also the bill and the rear portions of the head.

The two auricles already discernible, draw nearer to the heart and on the beginning of the fifth day the liver puts in its appearance. The first voluntary action of the chicken can be observed at the end of 132 hours. Seven more hours pass away and the lungs and stomach are visible, and four hours later the intestines, the loins and upper jaw.

At 144 hours two ventricles can be seen and two drops of blood instead of the single one.

The seventh day the brain assumes a more consistent appearance. After 189 hours of incubation the bill can be observed to open and shut and flesh appears on the breast. Four more hours and the breast bone can be discerned. Six hours after this, the ribs appear forming from the back. At this time the bill is quite visible, as well as the gall-bladder. The bill takes on a green hue at the end of 236 hours. At this period the chick will move slightly, and the feathers begin to grow.

When 264 hours have passed, the eyes appear. At 288 hours the ribs are perfect. The spleen draws near the stomach and the lungs to the chest when 331 hours have passed, and at 355 hours the bill frequently opens and shuts. The first faint "peep" of the chick is heard at the end of 18 days. From then to 21 days the chick gradually gains in strength and size. Then it picks its way through the shell, if not a weakling, and makes its exit.

The process is impressive in that every part appears at the proper time. How mysterious are nature's creative powers when the metamorphosis of the egg into the baby chick is considered. In the egg substance lie all the latent, vital principles of a living being. Here is concealed all the component parts of a fowl's body; parts that require only the proper heat to change them into an animate fowl.

The chicken when hatched is heavier than was the egg. A good deal may be learned about hatching and kindred subjects of the poultry industry but many things in the study of the embryo will remain a mystery to skilled poultrymen and novice.

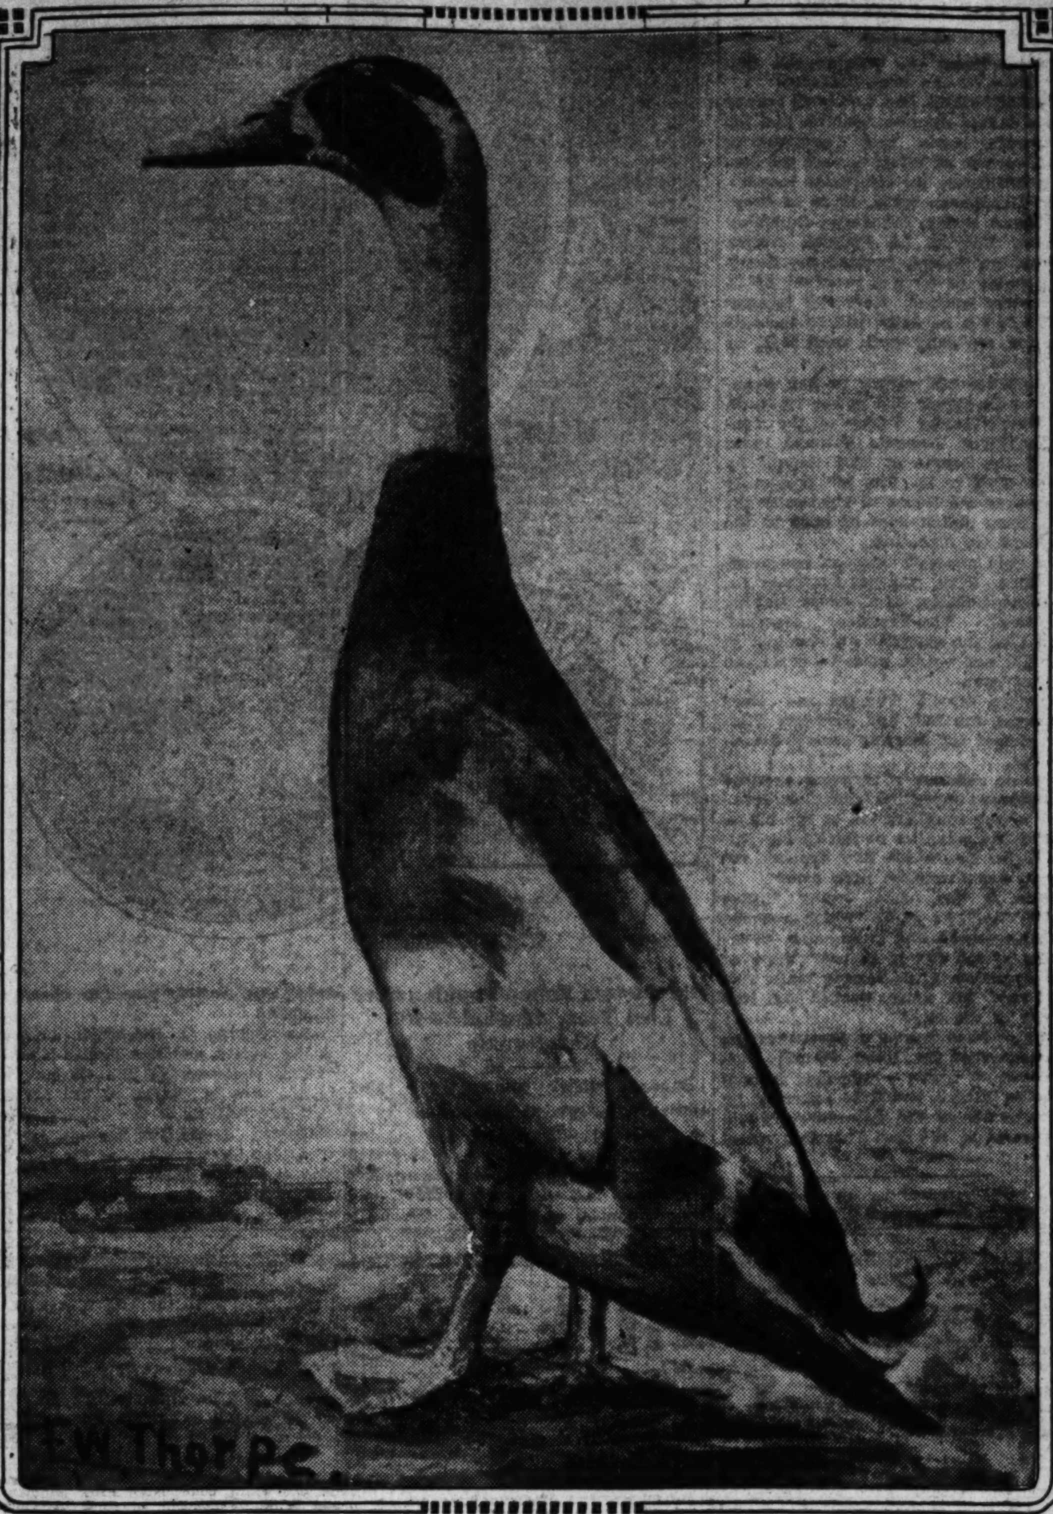
Fawn and White Indian Runner Drake



THESE ducks are the most attractive and productive variety of the duck family. The females lay in excess of 200 eggs a year. The eggs are of good size, have thin, white shells, and very palatable. Indian Runners require no water except what they drink. They are not susceptible to the diseases of poultry and are always free from lice and mites. The ease with which they can be kept and their productiveness makes them one of the best of fowls for the farm or for the city back yard.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED.

Clogged Throat.

I have a large Plymouth Rock rooster which at times raises his head high and opens his mouth three or four times like he is choking. Can you tell me what is the matter and what I should do? I. R., St. Louis.

Chickens very often act in the manner you describe after they have been fed dry mash and some times when a grain becomes lodged in the throat. Oats cause cause this very often. Well soaked stale bread is very good to cleanse the throat.

Undeveloped Eggs.

I would like to know the reason why my hens do not lay? I have 15 hens and do not get an egg. I have had these hens for four months and when I killed one for the table I found yolks of eggs that resembled lumps with a skin on them. I feed wheat bran, meal, corn, oats and the table scraps. D. P., St. Louis.

It has taken your hens a long time to moult and they will start to lay very soon from the description you give of yolks you found in the hen you killed. These lumps are undeveloped eggs and the feed you are using with plenty of green food added, will make your hens lay well.

Roup.

We have 30 hens and they are all getting sore eyes. First one hen got a large boil between the eys and the bill. We opened it but only a drop of blood came out. She has a bad odor. We locked this hen up by herself and now we find that six others are affected the same way. We feed mixed hen feed, bran and oats, and grit and charcoal are in front of them all the time. Can you tell what the trouble is? W. S. N., Prospect Hill, Mo.

Your birds have the roup, which is caused by drafts and damp, dirty quarters. Remove the affected birds from the others, clean and disinfect your poultry house and arrange the roosts so the birds will not have to roost in the draft. Treat the affected birds with any of the advertised roup remedies until they are cured before you return them to the balance of your flock. The ration you feed has nothing to do with this condition. Do not open any of the swollen places on your birds' heads. Apply the roup remedy as directed.

Milk Fed Capons.

How is the food for milk-fed capons prepared? Do milk-fed capons bring a higher price? Where in St. Louis can I obtain capons, also milk-fed capons? J. C., Marissa, Ill.

The food is usually prepared by using milk with the ground grain, the same as water is used in the ordinary wet mash. Milk-fed capons bring the highest price when they are fed liberally because of their superior condition as compared with the others. Capons can be obtained at any of the large poultry houses and now being sold by a great many retail meat markets in St. Louis.

Laying Ducks.

Will you kindly advise how old a duck must be before it lays? D., St. Louis.

Ducks begin to lay at from 9 to 11 months of age.

Black Combs.

I have several cockerels hatched this year and I notice that some of the points on their combs are turning black. Can you tell me what causes this and how it can be avoided? D. E. R., Milan, Mo.

Bad condition of the digestive organs causes the comb to turn dark. Give the affected birds a small dose of castor oil then do not feed them for a day or two. Then feed a moist mash lightly with plenty of green food for a few days, then feed hard grain in a deep litter for the evening meal. Keep your cockerels in a clean, open front house and you will not have this condition.

Laying Condition.

I have about twenty-five hens that I keep confined on account of having a very small yard. I keep them for eggs for my table. They are laying now and I would like to keep them in good laying condition during the winter. What would you recommend? Mrs. F. H., St. Louis.

Feed plenty of green food in addition to the regular ration. Put a small amount of salt in the mash and feed the evening meal of grain in a clean litter. This should be fed about 3 p. m. while the days are short in order that they can see to scratch out enough before it gets dark. Give them plenty of clean water and grit and keep the quarters clean and your birds will keep in good condition.

Culling.

When and how should I cull my chickens to select stock for breeding purposes? I want to raise pullets for laying. P. R. M., St. Charles, Mo.

Culling should be practiced all the time. Start when the chicks are a week old and cull for the purpose of retaining chickens that make the best development. Cull to get uniformity in the flock. Cull to obtain the maximum of vigor. Cull to get the best type and beauty. Cull to keep only the best producers. Discard all unfit. Discard those with any tendency to disease. Culling in this manner is a continuous process. If you cull close and often you will find fewer culls to discard as the season advances and less need of culling. Make constitutional vigor (or health, vigor and vitality), the chief requisite for a place in the breeding pens and you will find that productivity will follow.

CIRCULATION MORE THAN 300,000 EVERY SUNDAY

96 ACRES OF LAND IN TRACT WEST OF WELLSTON IS SOLD

Holdings Valued at $200,000 Will Be Subdivided and Put on Market.

REACHED BY 2 CAR LINES

Protective Realty Company Will Offer $50 for Name for Subdivision.

The Morris O'Connor Real Estate Co. has completed negotiations involving the control of holdings in St. Louis and in St. Louis County, the aggregate appraised value of which is $200,000.

The Protective Realty Co., in this deal, has acquired 96 acres of land in the county lying along the Kirkwood and Ferguson car line and only five minutes by trolley from Wellston. This land is adjacent to the country homes of Mrs. Julius S. Walsh and Judge Siddon, the location being one of the most attractive in the county.

Plans are being made for subdividing and improving. The land will be offered for sale at popular prices, according to John J. Dowling, agent for the Protective Realty Co. The subdivision, it is understood, will be disposed of by auction next spring, in parcels to suit. The tract was owned by Henry Hoffmann of Rahway, N. J., who received it as part payment for holdings in the district west of Grand avenue and other parts of the city. The trade, which has been pending a month, was made by Morris O'Connor, a new man in the local realty field.

Secretary Dowling of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange said either $50 in gold or a lot would be awarded for a name for the subdivision.

Planning 12-Story Garage.

The prospectus of the 12-story garage, projected by the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., for the northeast corner of Twelfth and Olive streets, was circulated during the last week. It is proposed to carry out ideas in use in Cleveland, Buffalo, Chicago and in other cities where downtown motor storage warehouses are being successfully operated.

Each floor will accommodate 40 cars. Ten floors will be given over to this purpose. The spaces will be numbered, and the location (once allotted) will become permanent. Allotments will be made in the order in which subscriptions are received, with the owner having the next remaining choice of space.

The leasing of a motor space will secure the owner the following service: Upon delivery of his car to the elevators, he may shut off his motor and lock the ignition switch. The car then will be taken by the building attendants to the stall reserved for it—all moving done by hand power. Here the car stands until called for by the owner, when it will be delivered to him on the elevator at the building exit. Gasoline or lubricants are not to be sold, and no shops are to be maintained, the purpose of the building being for storage. Wash racks will be placed on each floor, however, where lessees may have their cars washed and polished at the usual charge for such work. It will also be possible for owners to have their cars called for and delivered at their office address. This service is to be rendered at a nominal charge.

Feature to Accommodate Ladies.

A feature of the service of the company will be that given to ladies who operate their own cars. Whether shopping, at the matinee, or at the theater, the woman driver may have her car taken care of by the employes of the company. She may leave it at the store or theater entrance, and have it returned to her at whatever time she may specify.

There are in St. Louis about 9000 motor cars. The proposed building will house about 400 of these. It is believed that the owners of the better grades of automobiles will be glad to protect their investment in their cars when that protection may be guaranteed thus thoroughly and at so little expense.

Subscriptions are to be made payable at the St. Louis Union Trust Co. upon demand; the demand being made after 75 per cent of the storage space has been leased and the accompanying subscriptions obtained.

Leases will be made at $150 per annum, payable quarterly in advance after the first year. The first year's rent is to be paid for with subscription of stock. It will be possible to subscribe to $200 of the 7 per cent preferred stock, at the same time signing a space lease for one year. The rental under this arrangement will be paid quarterly. A stock subscription of $300 gains a benefit of $50 in the price, however, with the additional profit of the income from the stock, amounting in the first year to a sum equal to almost two months' rent. The profits from the operation of the building will easily pay 7 per cent on the entire subscription investment, the promoters declare.

BENTZEN COMMISSION CO. LEASES NEW QUARTERS

Takes Four-Story Building at Fourth and Lucas for Five Years.

The Bentzen Commission Co., of which William Bentzen is president, has acquired a five-year lease of the four-story building at the southwest corner of Fourth street and Lucas avenue. The building, which is owned by the Eclipse Realty Co., of which J. V. S. Barrett is president, is especially well adapted to the requirements of the lessee, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the city.

The concern has a large retail as well as wholesale trade, for the convenience of which the new quarters have been taken. The concern was located for many years at 923 North Third street.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

DENVER BOUND BY SNOW THREATENED WITH FOOD FAMINE

Police Direct Distribution of Supplies Sent to Residences by 100 Merchants.

By Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 6.—Hundreds of men tonight made desperate efforts to prevent a serious coal and provision famine in Denver threatened as one of the results of the snow blockade that tied up all sorts of traffic for more than three days.

Deliverymen carrying their loads of meat, milk and staple groceries walked for miles through the snow to the residence section of the city and gave succor to families whose larders had become depleted during the last three days. Coal deliveries were made to the downtown office and hotel buildings and business resumed a more normal aspect.

Street cars were manned for a short distance on one line, and men and some women returned to their homes for the first time since the storm began. The police took charge of traffic early this morning and throughout the day marshaled the provision wagons through the lanes which had been cut through the snow.

Reports from the State tonight indicate that Cripple Creek, high in the mountains, is in a critical condition due to the blizzard. The power plant has been destroyed by fire and the town is in darkness except for light from candles and coal oil lamps. Fifteen feet of snow covers the district. Six business houses were practically destroyed by the wind and scores of dwellings and other business houses were damaged.

A train on the Colorado Springs, Cripple Creek and Florence Railroad, the "Short Line," which left Cripple Creek Thursday, is still snowbound at Summit, one of the highest points in the traversable section of the Rocky Mountains. A relief party left Colorado Springs today on snow shoes and skis, carrying provisions and it is hoped that they will be able to reach the train and get enough food to the crew and passengers to maintain life until they can be rescued.

Reports of missing men were received in Colorado Springs from mountain points, and rescue parties, led by United States forest rangers, immediately set out in search of the missing.

Railroad traffic in the State was much better, and by tomorrow it is believed schedules will become much nearer normal for trains in all directions.

GERMAN FUR COMPANY TO OPEN BRANCH HOUSE HERE

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports having recently closed a lease on the warehouse building at 103 North Main street, for a term of years, to Alfred Kielert & Co., deales in raw furs.

The fur company headquarters are located in Leipsic, Germany, and their reason for opening this branch in St. Louis is the fact that St. Louis is rapidly becoming recognized as the leading raw fur market of the world.

The lease was made for E. R. O'Donnell, owner of the property. The Mercantile Trust Co. represented both the lessor and the lessee in the transaction.

STOPPED HIS DRINKING

This Wife and Mother Saved Her Husband Over Ten Years Ago.

SHE WILL GLADLY TELL YOU HOW

FREE

Write to Her Today. Send No Money. She Has Nothing To Sell.

For over 20 years James Anderson of Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks.

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished with a simple home remedy which anyone can get and use. And she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired and every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly, in hopes that others will be benefitted as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Her address is 49 Hill Ave., Hillburn, N. Y.

NOTE: This offer should be accepted at once by all who have dear ones who drink. In fact, every one who has to contend in any way with drunkenness should know about it. Therefore, if you do not write Mrs Anderson yourself CUT THIS NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use her advice. And even though you do answer it, MAIL IT TO SOMEONE ELSE who you think would like to know what Mrs. Anderson used. In other words, let this notice reach as many as possible for Mrs. Anderson will reply to every letter, no matter how many she receives.

SENATE WORKS AT NIGHT UNDER 13-HOUR PROGRAM

Leaders Propose to Extend Working Hours Until Big Task Is Completed.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Lights burned in the Senate chamber tonight, and the Democrats began their program of night work in an effort to pass the currency bill before the Christmas recess.

Ten Republican votes, those of Senators Borah, Brady, Brandegee, Cummins, Gronna, Kenyon, La Follette, Norris, Perkins and Smoot, enabled the Democrats today to force a program of 13-hour-a-day sessions. Hereafter recesses from 6 to 8 p. m. daily, will be the only break in the daily work from 10 a. m to 11 p. m.

The Raker bill, giving to San Francisco water supply and power rights in the Hetch Hetchy Valley of the Toulumnen River, Yosemite Natinoal Park, passed the Senate at 11:57 tonight by a vote of 43 to 25. The bill previously had passed the House in identically the same form and it goes at once to the President for signature.

The vote generally was on non-partisan lines. Time was not sufficient for the accommodation of all those desiring to speak. Vice-President Marshall ruled that the calendar day expired at midnight and voting must be concluded by that hour.

Senators Lippitt, Thomas and Reed supported the bill, and Senators Sterling, Smoot and Martine criticised their position.

Senator Ashurst of Arizona ascribed the vigorous opposition which has developed in the consideration of the bill in part to the activities of the Spring Valley Water Co., which now supplies the city of San Francisco with water.

"This is the same Spring Valley Water Co.," he said, "which reached out its tentacles and gathered in Councilmen of the city in the dark days of San Francisco graft regime when Abe Ruef and his gang worked out the affairs of the city."

Senator Reed argued to show that the appearance of the Hetch Hetchy Valley from a scenic standpoint, instead of being injured, would be improved by the presence of the lake which would be formed by the San Francisco reservoir.

Women Who Train Children for Carol Singing on Streets

MRS JAMES FRANCISCUS
MRS GEORGE C HITCHCOCK

Old Custom Found Popular Here Last Year, Adopted to Aid Unfortunate.

Sunday school children will sing Christmas carols at the thresholds of St. Louis residences on the coming Christmas eve. This custom, imported from England, and introduced here last Christmas, met with such approval and such financial success that the Children's Aid Society plans to observe it annually.

Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, president of the society, and Mrs. James N. Franciscus, chairman of the Carols Committee, are in charge of the preparation and drilling of the children. Hugh Fullerton, Louis Le Beaume and H. Chouteau Dyer are among the men who will escort the singers.

A request has been made that churches, Sunday schools, missions and schools furnish groups of singers, to whom badges will be furnished and districts assigned by the society. The songs to be learned include the familiar "Come All Ye Faithful," "Holy Night," and "God Rest Ye, Merry Gentlemen."

Persons who wish the singers to stop at their doors on Christmas eve will be asked to place lighted candles in their windows. The singers, after a ballad, will call for a silver offering for the society.

The work of the Children's Aid Society is to provide for neglected, deformed or convalescent children, for whom no suitable place has been found in any charitable institution.

Eight groups of boys and girls, under the leadership of "captains," went through West End districts last Christmas eve, and obtained a large contribution. This year much more territory will be covered.

LOCUST STREET BUILDING WILL BE ENLARGED

Twelfth Street Property to Be Remodeled for Auto Business.

A notable addition to "Automobile Row" will be the alteration of the building at the northwest corner of Twentieth and Locust streets, which recently was sold to Frederick W. Drosten, a jeweler, by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. The existing building, occupying a lot 30x110, was formerly tenanted by Battle K Co. and is three stories in height.

The contract for the improvement of this property has been let by Drosten and will represent an investment when completed of about $40,000. Albert B. Groves has designed an artistic building, which will be especially adapted for automobile show rooms and sales room. The Locust street front is to be altered by way of an addition, 30x30 feet, three stories in height, the first story forming a large sales room with special show windows.

The building will be equipped with modern heating apparatus, elevators and other features. The building will be ready for occupancy about Feb. 1. The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., who are agents for Drosten, will have the management of the property.

GENERAL FILM COMPANY LEASES NEW QUARTERS

The General Film Co. of New York has moved into its new quarters at Grand and Olive streets. A special building was erected to accommodate the requirements of its rapidly-increasing business. It will become headquarters of all its business in this locality and of the West, ranking second only in importance to New York.

The company has taken a 10-year lease of the premises, which comprise the storeroom at 3610 Olive, in addition to the building.

The lease figure is said to be $50,000 for the 10 years. The property is owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Dwyer, who recently returned from Paris to complete the details of the lease.

Both parties to the lease were represented by Oliver J. Grace and Bernard E. Grace of Grace & Sons Realty Co.

Stopped Night Sweats and Banished Cough

If you are suffering with a continued cough, cold or Lung Trouble which does not yield to any treatment, it might be of the greatest value to you to investigate what Eckman's Alterative, a medicine for the Throat and Lungs, has accomplished for many similar sufferers. Many who have investigated and used it have voluntarily declared that it was the means of saving their lives. Read this case:

"Gentlemen: For four years I was troubled with a cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Lung Trouble. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now, and have been for twelve years."

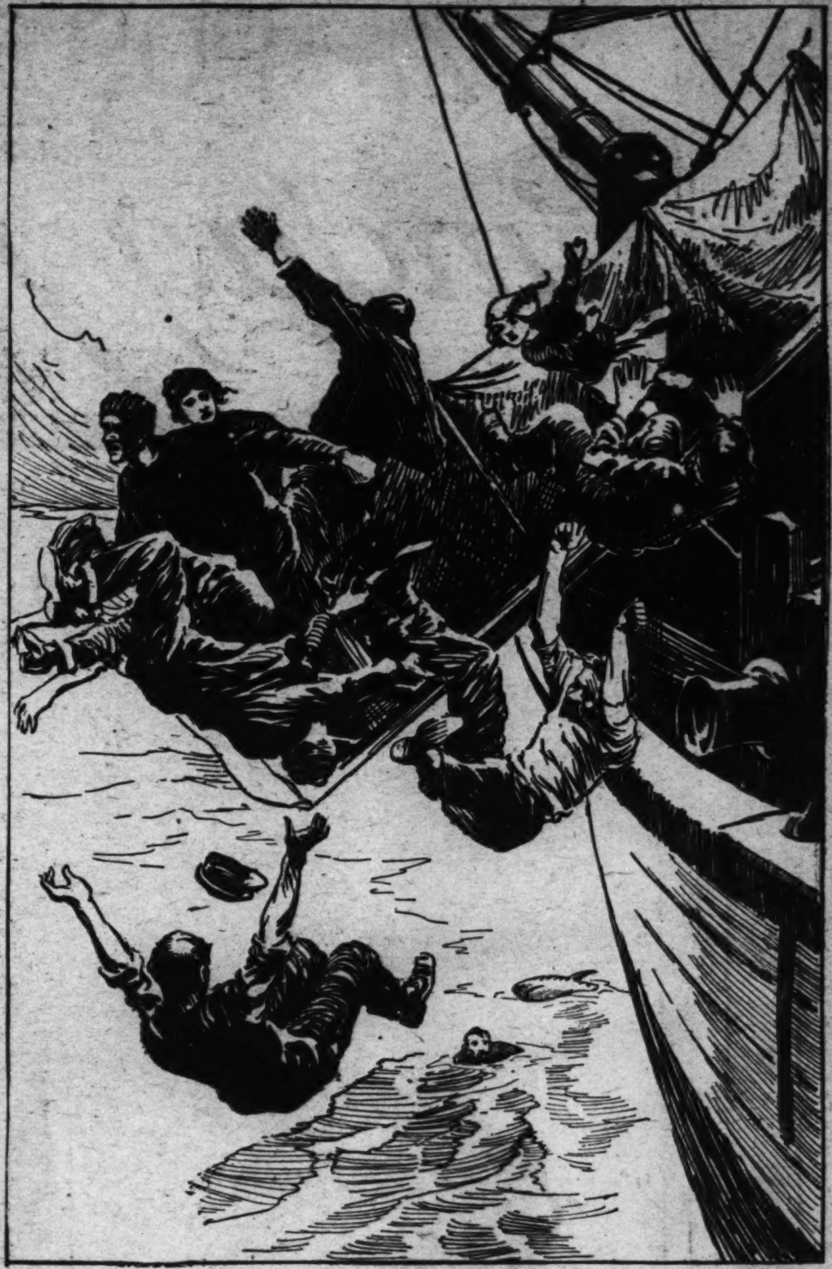
orld's Greatest Sea Mystery Solved at Last

The Brig, "Marie Celeste," Was Found Adrift 41 Years Ago in Southern Atlantic, With Not a Human Being, Alive or Dead, on Board—Not a Boat Was Missing, There Was No Sign of a Struggle, the Money Box and Cargo Had Not Been Disturbed, and a Meal, Half Eaten, Remained on the Captain's Table—The Ocean's Classic Enigma Now Cleared Up by Posthumous Papers of Sole Survivor of the Tragedy, in a Thrilling Tale of a Daring Little Girl, a Sick Woman, a Mad Skipper and a Crazy Wager



"Suddenly, without a shadow of warning, they found themselves in the water. 'Baby's quarterdeck' had collapsed beneath their weight."

FOR 40 years the classic mystery of the sea has been the story of the "Marie Celeste."

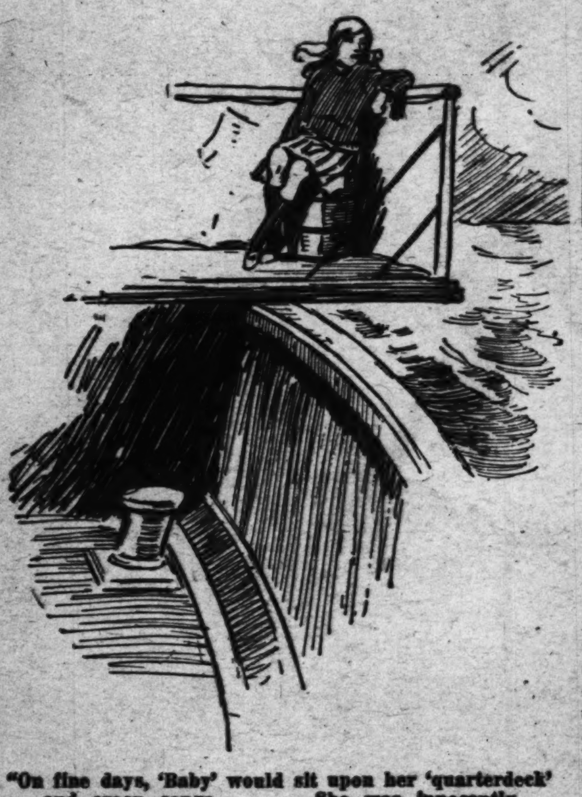
In the early autumn of 1872 the "Marie Celeste," a brig of 600 tons, sailed from New York for Genoa with a valuable cargo of spirits. On Dec. 5 she was picked up in the Southern Atlantic and towed to Gibraltar by the British barque, "Dei Gratia." The circumstances under which the brig was found were so amazing and inexplicable that they gave rise to the most celebrated enigma of the ocean.

When first caught sight of by the "Dei Gratia," the brig was drifting before the wind with most of her sails set. Capt. Boyce of the barque drew nearer and ran up the urgent hoist, a flag demanding immediate reply. There was no response. The Captain, the mate and two sailors went aboard in a boat, and there found conditions which staggered their belief.

There was not a human being, living or dead, upon the derelict. Every one of the ship's boats was in its place. The craft itself was spick and span from stem to stern, except that, near the bow, two notches had been freshly chopped in the gunwales.

In the Captain's cabin a table had been set for four persons, and upon it were the remains of a half-eaten meal. One chair was that of a child, and before it was a bowl of porridge, not all eaten. By the Captain's place lay two halves of a hard-boiled egg in the shell. In the forecastle, pans on the stove contained a breakfast ready cooked, showing that the sailors were about to gather for their morning meal.

On a sewing machine lay a child's pinafore. The sewer had stopped in the middle of stitching a sleeve. Beside the garment lay a thimble. On the table was a bottle of cough medicine, opened, and the cork lay nearby. The ship's log had been entered up to Nov. 24. The men's underwear, freshly washed, hung on a line over the forecastle, where their pipes and tobacco were found. On the mate's table were two watches, and the ship's binnacle and compass were in their places.



"On fine days, 'Baby' would sit upon her 'quarterdeck' and croon songs. . . . She was innocently the indirect cause of the disaster which cost every life on board except one."

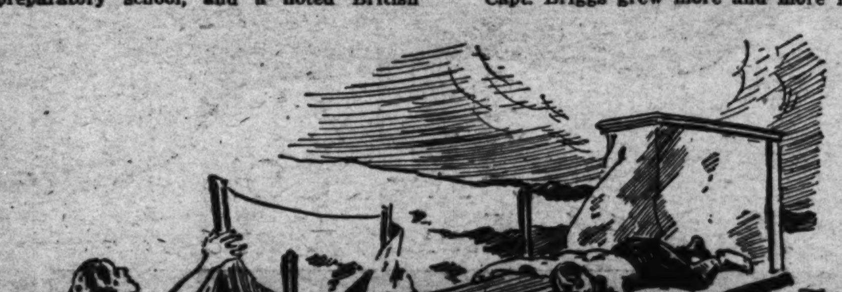
What was the tragedy in mid-ocean which rushed every soul on board into oblivion so suddenly that they were taken even in the midst of a meal? It was not piracy, for the money-box was not disturbed and the cargo was intact. It was not desertion, for not one boat was missing. It was not mutiny, for there was no sign of a struggle. No storm had swept all hands overboard, for the thimble and cork had not fallen to the floor and the bottle of medicine was not overturned.

Hundreds of ingenious theories have since been proposed to explain the mystery of the "Marie Celeste," but all of them had weak links in the chain of supposition. Now at last, after 41 years, comes a first-person account of the disaster by one who declares he was an eye-witness and the only survivor. The narrative is so vivid and alive, so simple and probable and yet so unlikely to be thought of, that many have accepted it as the final solution of the strange mystery of the "Marie Celeste."

The story of the weird brig was recounted in an English magazine about four months ago and came to the notice of A. Howard Linford, headmaster of Peterborough Lodge, Hampstead's largest preparatory school, and a noted British educator.

The name, "Marie Celeste," struck a chord in his memory, but it was several days before he could remember under what circumstances he had heard it. At last he recalled that an old servant, Abel Fosdyk, on his deathbed several years ago, committed to him a quantity of papers contained in three boxes. Among them he said would be found "the account of Mary Celeste." Linford thought that "Mary Celeste" was a woman and paid little heed. He sent the papers away for safe-keeping without reading them.

On disinterring the documents, Linford found in Fosdyk's handwriting a long and detailed account of the tragedy of the "Marie Celeste." It afforded striking internal testimony to its truth. For instance, the magazine had given the name of the brig's Captain as Griggs. Fosdyk referred to him as Briggs, and the official report proved that the magazine was wrong and Fosdyk right.



"Fosdyk struggled, rather than swam, to the frail raft."

The narrator referred to tremendous storms at sea, and a reference to the files of the London Times disclosed an article in which the autumn of 1872 was compared to the period of storms which prevailed at Cromwell's death. Most impressive of all, Fosdyk described a terrific display of shooting stars which was seen a few days before the final disaster. The Times and other newspapers of that date contained accounts of a prodigious meteoric spectacle.

The writer speaks of "private reasons for secreting myself," which he does not explain, but which are believed to account for his life-long silence. "No word on the subject was ever mentioned by Fosdyk to me," says Linford. "But the fact that for 30 years he kept not only a diary, but also a set of shrewd observations on all that passed, and wrote much and well without our knowing anything of what he was doing, shows him to have been a man of exceptional reticence and self-control."

Fosdyk's story, printed in the current issue of the Strand Magazine, begins with the sailing of the "Marie Celeste" from New York. The party consisted of the Captain and mate, the Captain's wife and their 7-year-old daughter, who was called "Baby," and 10 men—14 in all. After some days of smooth sailing, the ship entered into a region of squalls and gales which seemed endless. The Captain said that in all his experience at sea he had never known such continuous storms as the brig encountered during the latter half of October and the first half of November. The Captain was on deck day and night, and the strain, in Fosdyk's belief, at the last unsettled his mind, and led him to make the mad wager which was the direct cause of the catastrophe.

It was "Baby" who was innocently the indirect cause of the loss of all lives on board except that of Fosdyk. She was an active and daring child, fond of climbing into perilous places. One day Fosdyk, who was a great favorite with her, was horrified to see her standing out on the bowsprit without holding on to anything. He ran to her, seized her skirt and drew her back upon the deck. Her father, though passionately fond of the little girl, fell into a rage and boxed her ears.

Then, as if sorry for his anger, and by way of making amends, the Captain ordered the carpenter to fit up a little barricade for her by the bowsprit. The groundwork was an old door or the top of a trestle table. On three sides was a rough balustrade of canvas, about as high as an ordinary table, with a rail about the top. This was hoisted on the bows and rested on the bowsprit and on two sides of the ship, where, to secure it, two notches were cut. A small barrel was placed on the platform as a seat. The men called the platform "Baby's quarterdeck," and there, in fine weather, she sat and sang or walked up and down calling out: "Ship on the port-bow," which was her only nautical lore.

Capt. Briggs grew more and more irritable and unstrung each day, and took his anger out usually upon the mate, at whom he continually sneered about his not having, on some occasion, entered the water to save a comrade from drowning. One afternoon the Captain sat down on the skylight and sobbed like a child. His wife was also ill.

On the morning of Nov. 25, Fosdyk relates, he went into the Captain's cabin with the basin from which Baby ate her porridge. Capt. Briggs, the mate, Mrs. Briggs and the child were at the table. The Captain was in his most irritable mood and bent on quarreling. Fosdyk heard him say to the mate:

"It's no good, Harry. If you were to talk from now to Doomsday you would never make me say it wasn't a cowardly action."

"You needn't be so free with the word coward," replied the mate. "It isn't a pleasant one, and you seem to have forgotten, as I told you before, that I was fully dressed and in all

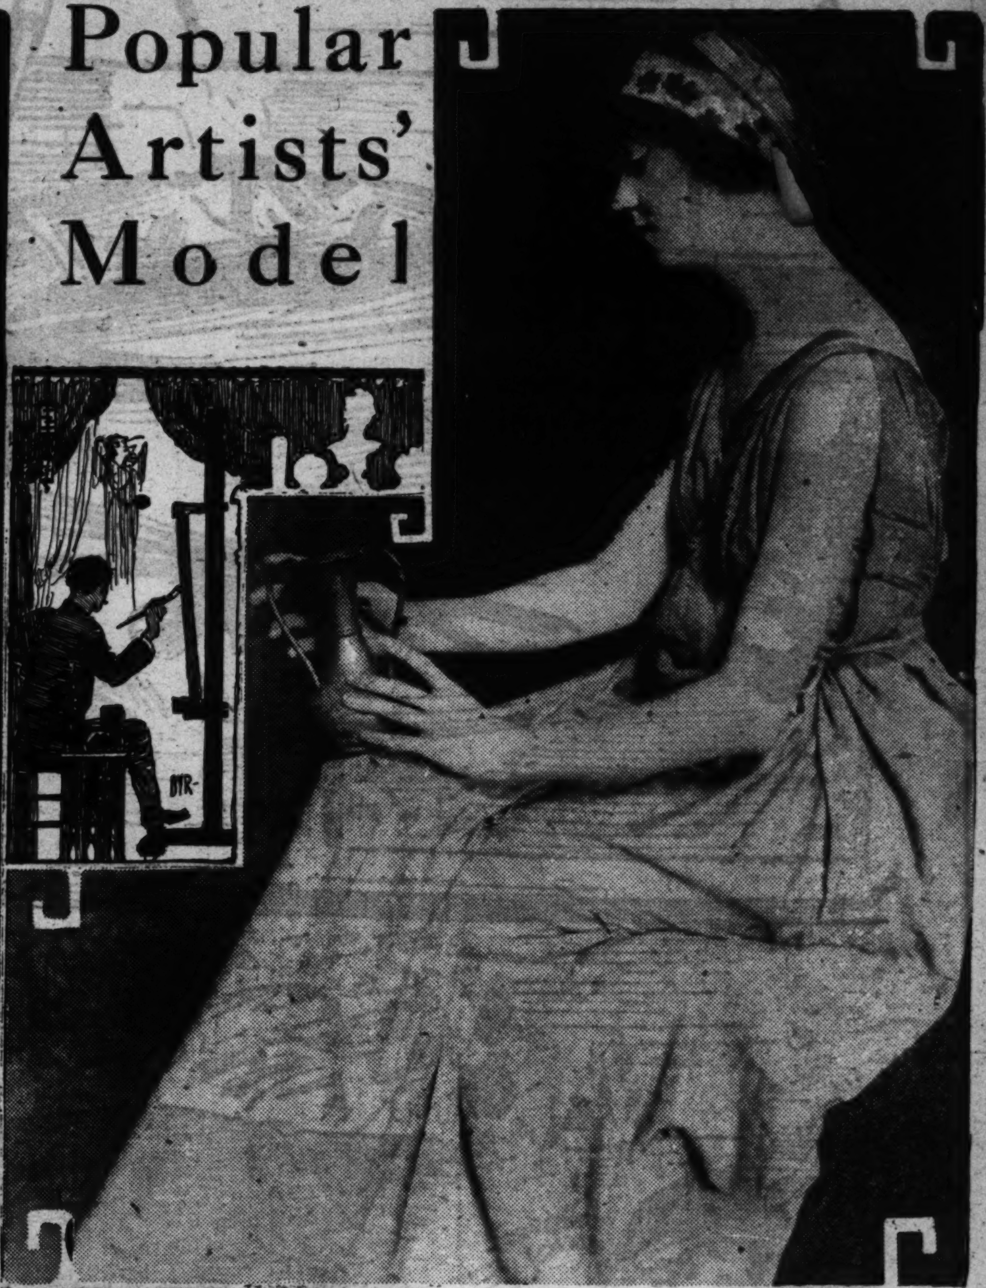
Missouri Girl Is New York's Most Popular Artists' Model



Miss Grace Hudson, a Joplin Belle, Began Posing as a Profession When Charles Dana Gibson Admired Her Lovely Hands and A. P. Lucas Proclaimed Her a "Botticelli Woman Come to Life"—Her Likenesses in Statues, Paintings and Illustrations, by the Best Artists, Would Make a Gallery in Themselves

THE most beautiful and the most successful artists' model in New York is a lissome, copper-haired Missouri girl—Miss Grace Hudson, of Joplin. Many of Charles Dana Gibson's slender heroines are copies of her exquisite figure, and her charms have inspired the work of the best known painters, sculptors and illustrators in the country.

Miss Hudson's ambitions are really literary, and she became a model through accident. Attempting to earn a living in New York by writing, she called upon Gibson for an interview to be used in an article she was preparing for an art magazine. The artist caught one glance at her hands—they are now famous as the loveliest and most expressive in New York—and snatched for his pencil. She was amused by his request for permission to sketch her hands, but granted the favor.

At the time, in order to eke out the tiny income she was earning with her pen, Miss Hudson was working as a stenographer for F. Benedict Herzog, an engineer. He was interested in art photography, and was the first to inform her that there was money to be made by posing for artists. She had not known that posing was a recognized profession by which men and women could earn a livelihood.

Herzog directed her to A. P. Lucas, an artist in the same building, who had recently returned from Paris. She called upon him, and the painter, seeing her slight and delicious figure, fair complexion, blue eyes and vivid hair, started up in enthusiasm and exclaimed:

"You're a Botticelli woman come to life!"

Gibson had told her that she was born to be a model. He and Lucas sang her praises throughout the art colony so fervently that soon she gave up both stenography and newspaper work and took up posing as a profession. The fame of her beauty spread until she had more demands upon her than she had time to fulfill.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who has a studio on the top floor of her Fifth avenue home, took Miss Hudson up as a sort of protege, and used her as the model for many of her recent works. In statues, in paintings and in magazine illustrations the Missouri girl's beauty was blazoned to the public, so that a collection of the productions for which she had posed would make quite a respectable art gallery in themselves.

She is the daughter of the late George Hudson, who, after the Civil War, left the army and settled at Granby, one of the numerous mining camps surrounding Joplin. There she was born, 24 years ago. After graduating from the Joplin High School, she took a course at Scarrett College in Neosho, and another at a business college in stenography and typewriting. After her mother's death six years ago, she left Granby to live in Joplin with her sister, Mrs. T. P. Donohoe. By way of beginning a literary career, Miss Hudson became society editor of the Joplin Daily Globe, remaining in the position two years.

The sale of a short story or so encouraged her to believe that she could maintain herself in New York, the Mecca of ambitious young men and women. She had saved $90, and so, buying a one-way ticket she set out for the metropolis.

She tried newspaper free-lancing, which is a bone of scant pickings for even seasoned veterans, and sold a few humorous paragraphs for a dollar or so each, only to see them printed as a part of a series called "Clever stories by famous actreses," and credited to a stage idol of the day. Soon the $90 was gone, and Miss Hudson fell back upon practical, if prosaic, typewriting. Then came the talks with Gibson and Lucas which started her on the road to prosperity and fame.

"No," said she to a reporter for the Post-Dispatch who called upon her in New York, "I don't think I had any illusions when I left Joplin, so none has suffered violence at the hands of experience.

"I find human nature here the same as it is in Missouri, and in many respects Missouri is a much better place than New York. Of course here in New York there are more luxuries than in Missouri, but for people of moderate means these are beyond reach, so what's the difference whether you live where they are unobtainable or where you can't obtain them because you haven't got the price?

"But just the same, I like New York, and though I go home every summer, I have to admit that after a while I get homesick for this city. Then I come back. I have made a good living at posing and I have not found the work difficult.

"I see an artists' model has been telling the newspapers that one couldn't be a model and be a good girl. That is all nonsense. A girl here, whether she is a model, or in any other business or profession, can usually dictate the manner in which she is to be treated. Men, as a rule, don't pursue her unless they think she wants to be pursued.

"The pay for posing is not bad. Fifty cents an hour doesn't look a great deal when the difficulty of holding a pose for an hour is considered, but there is a sort of an unwritten law—a trade custom, I might call it—that an artist never engages a model for less than three hours. He may use her the three hours, or he may use her only an hour, but he pays $1.50 in either event.

"And they always pay, too. Yes, I know all the stories of the Latin Quarter would lead you to believe that no artist ever had more money at one time than enough to buy a bottle of wine, and would think it a sacrilege to spend it for any other purpose, but in New York those whom I have posed for have had more money and they pay their models. I have never lost my fee but once, and that was a woman artist who was unable to pay me."

This will be Miss Hudson's last year as a model. She expects to have saved up then the price of another ticket to the Pierian Springs and will make a serious effort to climb Parnassus by the short story route.

NUMBER EIGHT

Spending

TOM looks on with disapproving eye as each new purchase is brought out to the new limousine, to be paid for by Mr. Perkins' new money. The wild light of the spending fever is in Dorothy's face, and Tom feels that it would be worse than useless to try to curb her. Besides it really isn't his business, as a matter of fact. That is what he tells himself; but in the back of his mind he thinks that in a way it does concern him. It would concern him very materially if—well, he hadn't made up his mind to ask her yet.

Dorothy knows quite well how Tom regards her spending orgy. She smiles mischievously at him every time she buys something.

How was Dorothy to know that her father was allowing her to spend more of his money than he had? She knew he had been making more. That was enough information for her as a working proposition. She didn't care about details. She didn't know that his pride in his good-looking daughter led him on to extravagances, that he had quietly mortgaged his house to meet expenses. He loved to have his pretty Dorothy perch on his knee and go through his wallet, in that charming high-handed way of hers, and he never grudged her the orange-backed twenties she took out of it. No man could call HIM a piker.

SEARCH FOR THE SECRET of LIFE

Modern Miracles Wrought by Scientists Delving Into World's Greatest Mystery

Strange Metamorphoses of Living Tissues, Artificial Fertilization of Eggs, Astonishing Surgery and Research Mark Decade's Almost Incredible Advance :: :: ::

ALTHOUGH for centuries scientists have been groping for the true secret of the mystery of life, the last two decades have seen probably the greatest advancement of all corresponding periods in the world's history. Scarcely a civilized city of any consequence on the globe is without its ardent students who are working tirelessly in their obscure laboratories, adding a little here and little there to the great sum total.

While it is generally known that the present generation of scientists has made astounding discoveries, it is not until all of the important ones are accumulated and presented at once that the lay reader can get any adequate idea of what is going on.

Dr. Henry Smith Williams, A. B., M. D., LL. D., of New York City, himself a scientist and a writer of note, has made such an accumulation in a new book which he calls "Miracles of Science." A list of the author's scholastic affiliations and his books perhaps best indicates his fitness for the work. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, of the American Geographical Society, of the American Historical Association, of the American Economic Association and president of the Everyday Science Association. He has written many scientific and historical books and was editor of the Historians' History of the World, which was published in 25 volumes in 1904.

While "Miracles of Science" deals with all the great scientific accomplishments of modern times, perhaps its most interesting chapters are those telling of laboratory research for the vital principal.

In these laboratories the greatest masters of necromancy and legerdemain the world has yet known are at work. They are at once seers and jugglers, Dr. Williams calls them. They are searching out the riddles of existence. With the reckless abandon of the vaudeville stage they are juggling tissues, nerve cells, limbs, brains, bones, vital fluids, life itself.

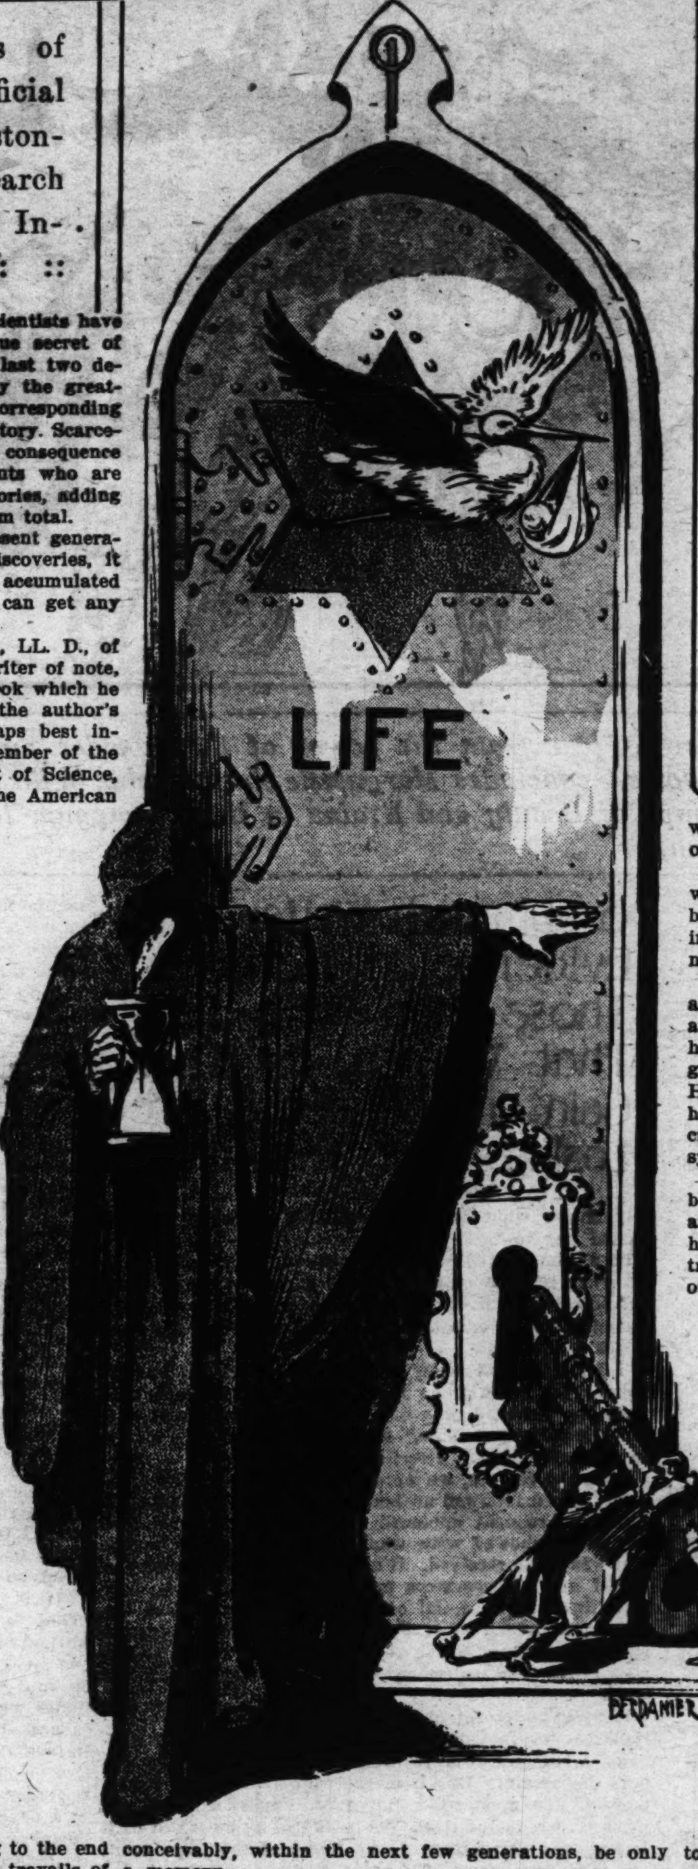
In Chicago Dr. Jacques Loeb continues to bring fatherless sea-urchins into existence. In the Marine Biological Laboratory at Naples Dr. Dreisch is transposing heads and tails of various creatures, cutting up one worm and making 10 other complete living worms out of it. Prof. D. J. Holmes is changing heads for two creatures, leaving neither apparently the worse for the swap.

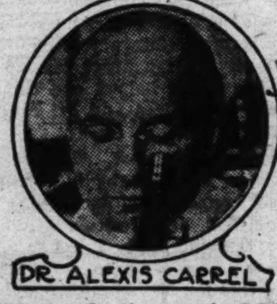
In New York, Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, is substituting the healthy kidneys of one animal for the diseased ones of another. Prof. William E. Castle of Harvard University, is transposing the racial characteristics of guinea pigs. Prof. G. H. Nuttall, an American, now at Cambridge University in England, is using blood clots to prove that man is closer kin to the chimpanzee than to the orang.

In St. Louis, Dr. Loeb is trying to show that a female can produce offspring without the aid of the male. Others are working to the end that in the future women may be spared the travails of childbirth, but may intrust prenatal development of the child to an incubator. Prof. William Patten of Dartmouth is trying to demonstrate that he has discovered the long sought "missing link."

Prof. Hugo de Vries of Amsterdam believes he is about to prove that the process of evolution, which is vital to the Darwinian theory, has not required all the countless ages that have hitherto been considered essential. At Santa Rosa, Cal., Luther Burbank is changing plant life of all kinds to almost any variation he wishes. Through eugenics and an application of the Mendelian theory, other scientists believe it will soon be as possible to breed human beings up to any desired type as it is now possible to breed up cattle and horses.

Eminent bacteriologists are working towards the elimination of contagious disease by means of vaccines. "Hospital fever" is already stamped out; smallpox has lost its terrors; blood diseases hitherto incurable are now cured. Even the dreaded typhoid fever seems to be doomed and tuberculosis may conceivably, within the next few generations, be only a memory.





DR. ALEXIS CARREL

Who made tissue of dead animals live again.

PROF. JACQUES LOEB

Who artificially fertilized sea-urchin's eggs.

In Switzerland a physician has found a device by which he can put a patient on a table and explore his interior with an X-ray machine and a fluoroscope. Almost any chemist nowadays can take the stain of a drop of blood left on a rock 25 years ago and tell whether it was the blood of a human being or of a laughing hyena.

Wild and fanciful as it may sound, as the result of the labors of these jugglers, it may some day be found that your N-millionth grandfather was a sort of tarantula and that your N-hundredth grandson will be born in an incubator; that he will live free from ordinary diseases and that when his vital organs have become worn out they may be replaced with the healthy ones of some murderer, who has just expiated his crime on the gallows.

Certainly none of these possibilities is more remote from human experience than some of the things that science is doing today is remote from the experience of our ancestors. If any of the men just mentioned had performed in the times of Gallileo the things he is doing now he would have been burnt at the stake.

Prof. Jacques Loeb has long been a student of the mysteries of parthenogenesis, in which his St. Louis namesake has also won fame. By means of chemicals, he succeeded in fertilizing eggs of the female without the use of the male principle. In 1912 he experimented with batrachian eggs and caused one, unfertilized, to hatch a tadpole. It is true that when the tadpole was developing into a frog it fell into water and was drowned, but that did not detract materially from the vast importance of his experiments.

The achievements of Dr. Driesch, as related by Williams in his "Miracles of Science," were even more brilliant. He took the egg of a fish and out of its four cells, which ordinarily would have made one minnow, he developed four minnows, each completely formed, yet somewhat smaller than normal. In other words, Driesch performed artificially exactly what happens when nature produces "identical" twins, within the body of a mother.

HERE are some of the amazing things scientists have done within the last few years:

Caused unfertilized eggs to develop into living creatures.

Made twin fish out of a single embryo and one fish out of twin embryos.

Changed heads and tails on living worms.

Transposed one worm's head and tail.

Replaced worm's tail with head so that it had a head on each end.

Made 20 miniature living worms out of one.

Replaced diseased kidneys of one animal with healthy ones of another.

Replaced a dog's amputated leg with a leg from another dog

Changed racial characteristics of a guinea pig.

Changed physical characteristics of domestic animals to get desired improvements.

Made animal tissue live again after creature that bore it had been dead and in cold storage.

Found infallible method to show from what kind of creature any drop of blood came.

Probably found the Darwinian "missing link."

Advanced the "law of mutation," to shorten theoretical ages of evolution.

Changed natures and types of plants almost at will.

Thinking it a poor rule that wouldn't work both ways, Driesch next found two separate embryos and blended them so that they produced one. The resulting individual—it was a star fish—was much larger than normal.

Prof. Morgan took a fresh water worm, known as a planarian, cut off its head and tail and observed that a new head and tail grew to replace it. Loeb cut off the head of a marine planarian and under his eye the head grew a new body and the body grew a new head. Holmes then cut a planarian into 20 pieces and soon had 20 miniature planarians. The planarian is a living creature, with internal organism, eyes and a nervous system.

Dr. Carrell recently amputated the leg of a dog. He borrowed a leg from another dog and soon the first animal was running about on all four feet as if nothing had happened to him. It was this and his feats in transposing internal organs from one creature to another that won for him the Nobel prize in 1912.

Castle's experiments with the guinea pigs are extremely interesting. He discovered that white mothers always produced white offspring. He replaced the ovaries of a white one with those of a black one. Thereafter the white mother had black offspring.

Perhaps the most recent scientific feat is that of growing animal tissues outside the body. Drs. Carrel, Leo Loeb, Montrose T. Burrows and R. S. Harrison are pioneers in this field. They have removed tissues from the bodies of animals newly killed or which had been preserved in cold storage. It is put into a culture of blood plasma.

The growth of cells is so rapid that it may be observed with the naked eye, owing to the increase in size. It is much more readily observed under the microscope. The fact that tissue, which had been kept in cold storage, could be made to live again long, long after death, may rightly be considered one of the world's most stupendous discoveries. It is this which leads Williams to say in his newest book:

"It would seem to be within the possibilities that the method may be ultimately so perfected that embryos of all kinds, including the human, could be grown in culture media in the incubator.

"Should this expectation be fulfilled, the woman of the future may be emancipated from the primal curse that her maternal ancestors have borne since bi-sexual organisms were evolved. What this final feat of life-juggling might mean to humanity, I leave for the reader's imagination to suggest."

Who discovered infallible blood tests.

Many newspaper readers have observed that murder prosecutions have often depended upon whether certain stains on the clothing of the accused were of human blood or not. Doubtless one often wonders how chemists can pronounce upon this matter with such absolute certainty as they do. This has become possible largely through Nuttall's experiments.

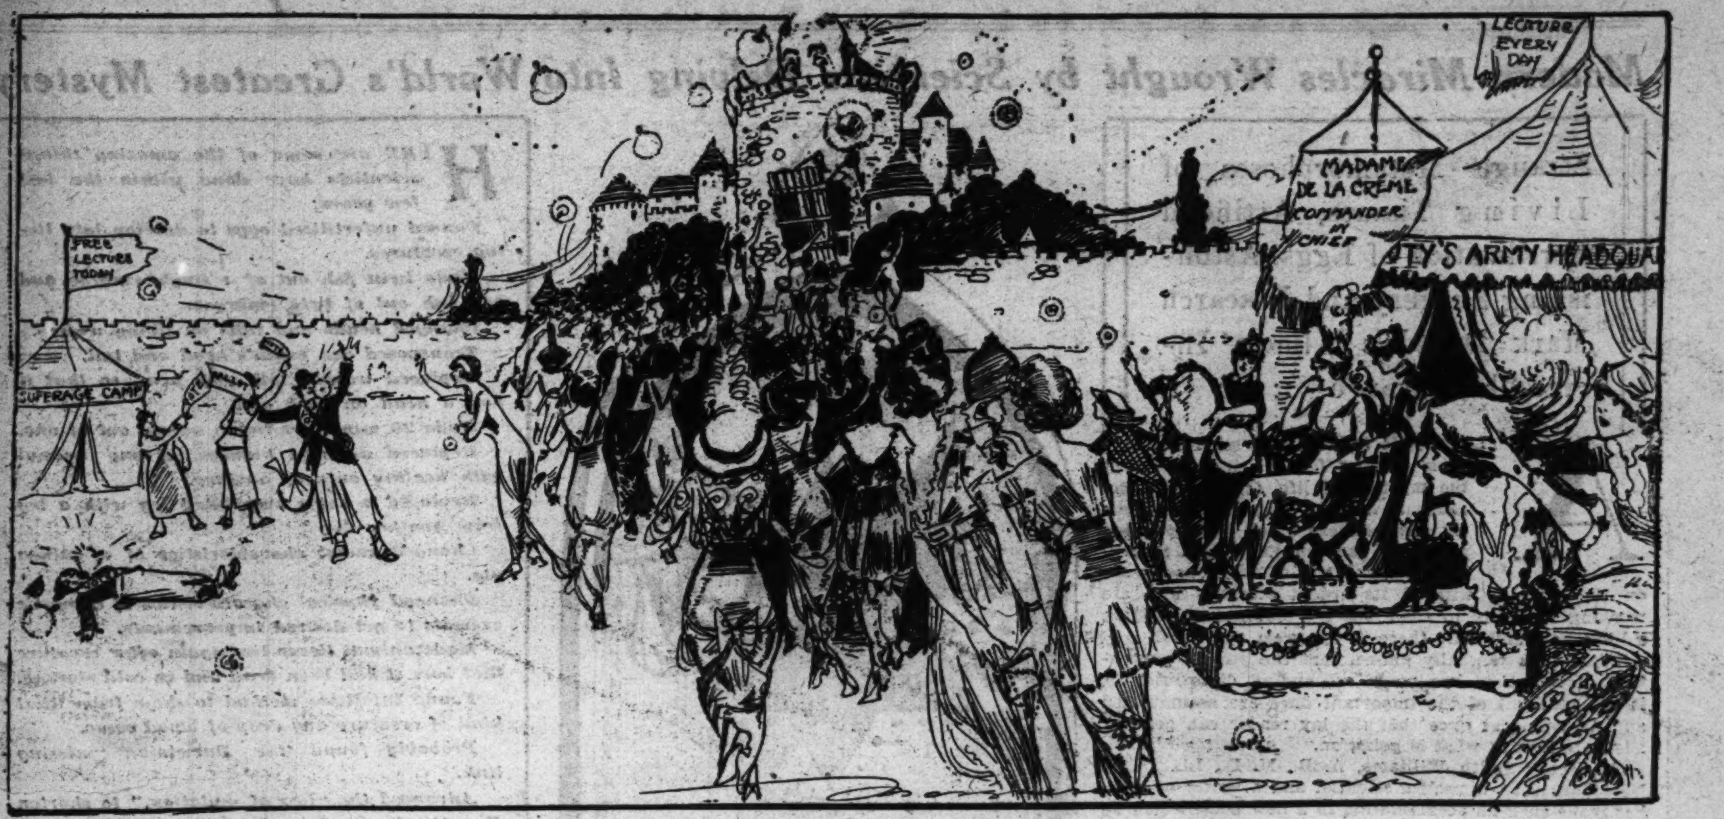
Behind the Scenes With a Beauty Expert



"MAN has more to fear from the power of the powder puff than from women's votes," concludes Marguerite Martyn, who, in the above picture, symbolizes the camps of Beauty and Brains in their campaign to achieve the subjugation of man.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

Post-Dispatch Writer Finds Evidence to Reassure Those Men Who Fear That Women, as They Gain Independence, Are Losing Their Femininity

YOU men should worry about woman's encroachment upon your special privilege—I do not think!

You read and hear a lot about "the woman of today." How she is becoming economically, intellectually and politically independent, competent to take her place on an equal footing with man—if not a little above him. You get the impression her chief pursuit is some honor hitherto reserved to man. And you visualize her as a cross-grained, high-browed, thick-soled intellectual giantess.

Poor man! No wonder you tremble. And it is all because you never are permitted one little look-in at a beauty lecture.

Why, one beauty lecture will bring out enough evidence in behalf of the "eternal feminine" to discount all the progress thus far made by "new feminists" in St. Louis. And you may not know it, but these beauty lecture courses are going on most of the time.

Take an off day for matinees and bargain sales—beauty lectures are not permitted to compete with these lesser attractions. Theater and department store managers see to that—and join the procession of paradise plumes (You thought they were forbidden? Another impression you got from merely reading without looking about you.), silver shoe buckles, pegtop skirts. It won't lead you to the new suffrage headquarters on Sixth street. There you may elbow your way through the crowd of men who are climbing over each other to get a closer view of the suffrage posters and literature in the windows. Once inside you will find but half a dozen women on duty, whose chief concern seems to be the inducement of half a dozen other women to come downtown and take up the fight for suffrage on the morrow.

Neither will the procession lead you to the libraries nor other institutions of social and intellectual uplift. No, it sweeps you along toward one of the first-class theaters. And here what an overpowering contrast is prepared to set at rest man's fears for his precious prerogatives! Half a dozen women working for new rights and privileges—a theater crowded with women ready to join a quest as old as Eve, along a route but little improved, so far as I know, since the days of Ponce de Leon!

Almost the first person I recognized in the audience was one of our leading suffragists—a founder of the Business Woman's League. Another who sat near me was a woman lawyer who, I had supposed, relied entirely upon her knowledge of Blackstone for her success in life. And what was the lecturer saying to them?

"Every woman's chief occupation in life is to GET a husband or to KEEP one."

And this apparently was what her audience came to hear. At any rate, nobody got up and left and all seemed to take the statement pretty much as a matter of course.

My leading suffragist never blinked an eyelash, and my woman lawyer was as sober as a judge. Having settled to the satisfaction of those present woman's chief aim of existence, the beauty lecturer's advice upon how to accomplish that object was, of course, "be beautiful." And all through the lecture and discussion that followed not a word was to be heard about the conquest of man by means of the higher education, votes for women or economical independence.

The beauty lecturer then essayed to tell everybody how to be beautiful. To be sure, it wasn't an easy job she was laying out for us. There were to be long hours of tedious toil in the name of exercise. Tortuous processes to alter your anatomy and physiognomy. It was to be a life's job, with long hours and no holidays. And if occasionally the husband for whom you underwent this noble self-effacement rewarded you with a look of appreciation or a smile, you were to consider yourself very lucky.

But behold in the beauty lecturer a result worth any amount of pains.

"I may not be a beauty," she declared with engaging modesty. "My brothers and sister never cease to be amazed at my getting a reputation for beauty. That only shows what an improvement I am over what I started out to be."

Then she hinted vaguely, without really divulging what her real age might be; and a woman back of me whispered that at a previous lecture this seemingly blooming young creature had almost admitted she was 50 years old.

"I know I must seem young," announced the beauty doctor, "for at 18, when I left my convent in Paris and made my debut, I was often at a loss for beaux and dancing partners. Now," she added, demurely, "I find no difficulty in that direction at all."

Quite the reverse, we were left to infer from her reticence. Then followed an hour's instruction in Madame's system. Frequent applause and nods of approval and agreement showed with what seriousness every beauty hint was being received. If one were too thin one was to "build up." There were exercises, rules of diet, deep breathing programs, all of which were good. But the newest, improved labor and time-saving remedies came put up in jars, of which she could supply us the names and prices and salesmen could even furnish us the goods in the foyer after the lecture.

If one was too fat one was to roll. There were objections to this in modern apartments, both by your husband, who pays your furniture bills and by the neighbors downstairs. By all means rent a first-floor apartment if you must roll. But a far newer, safer, easier method of reducing flesh was to be had by means of bath lotions and astringents, to be found at the sales counter near the door. The preparation, a compound for which the lecturer happened to know that Mrs. Potter Palmer pays $1.50 a bottle, could be had here for 10 cents.

Creams, depilatories, hair dyes, powders, rouges, cocoa butter, vaseline, all masquerading under exceedingly French and mellifluous noms de plume were recommended as superior to piety for keeping a husband. And the figure, ah, yes, a pair of corsets such as Madame was wearing were more important, had more to do with getting and keeping a husband, than anything else.

But to learn how to get or keep a husband was not the reason I attended the beauty lecture. That is, not solely the reason. Neither is this intended to be one of those, "I knew her when" stories. But the exceedingly Parisian name of the "world-renowned beauty" so freely advertised I thought I recognized as a pen name sometimes affected by a Chicago newspaper woman of my acquaintance, when, like the rest of us on a newspaper staff, she took her turn at answering the voluminous mail addressed to the beauty editor.

Her right name, Kitty MacCarty, or something equally as far removed from French, would, of course, never have done for a beauty expert. She had always been passing fair, but what advantage to one of her superior mental attainments had she found in capitalizing mere good looks and outward charms and graces? What could have tempted my colleague to forsake the straight and narrow path of righteousness and journalism? Was it vanity? I thought not. But it might be money—or rather, more money.

Knowing both sides of the picture and recalling her former loyalty and steadfastness to the virtues of her native Chicago, superior to any other place on earth, the ease with which she assumed the attitude of a Parisian boulevardienne, the heimweh she breathed into the names of the Champs Elysees and other fashionable haunts of that dear Paree, was impressive, to say the least.

Still the puzzle was not solved. Could it be that the manufacturer of some cosmetic was making it worth her while? No, for behold how impartially she recommended this maker's toothpowder, another dealer's face cream, that modiste's gowns, this store's corsets.

Ah, at last I had it. Perhaps it wouldn't have penetrated my unsuspecting nature any more than her other simple-souled listeners, had I not the living evidence before me of her double dealing. But gradually it dawned upon me that, of course, she was being commissioned and remunerated by each of the dozens of dealers whose goods she advertised. Such intrigue!

Right here I made up my mind to wait for the lecture's end and then confront and chide her in her dressing room afterward—let her justify her actions, if she could. That is, I would if I could separate her from that eager, pushing, jamming crush of women who were besieging her, now that she had come down from the stage and taken her stand at the sales counter in the foyer, volunteering to answer their questions. One of the crowd placed a sharp elbow between my shoulder blades and kept it there, a method which I recommend to the traffic squad as a last resort for thinning out a mob.

Taking my stand upon the outskirts, I found a few of the women waiting for especially confidential consultation with the expert. I trusted to them to extricate her, and they did.

At last, when she was removing those stays and releasing those half-dozen pairs of garters in her dressing room, I thought she was going to be glad of the opportunity to unmask.

Not so at all.

"It is perfectly legitimate work," she explained. "That is, comparatively speaking. Far more so than editing a beauty column," she flung at me. "For at least one must live up to one's pretensions. You can toss off on your typewriter an answer to your anonymous questioner with a sneer or a laugh. You cannot meet these earnest, trusting faces without a sense of responsibility. In fact, since I've met the authors of the beauty inquiries I've never been able to treat them any other way than seriously.

"I never give them any instruction I do not know is harmless. In fact I am the one who has suffered while trying cures they inquire about. One woman wrote to know if a certain well-known washing powder would clear up her complexion. I know now that it contains concentrated lye. I once wore a mahogany-colored head to prove the efficacy of a hair dye. And it wore far better than most mahogany furniture you buy."

I was beginning to feel pity in my heart instead of blame. "Prove that you have ever helped one woman to improve upon her God-given graces and I'll forgive you," said I.

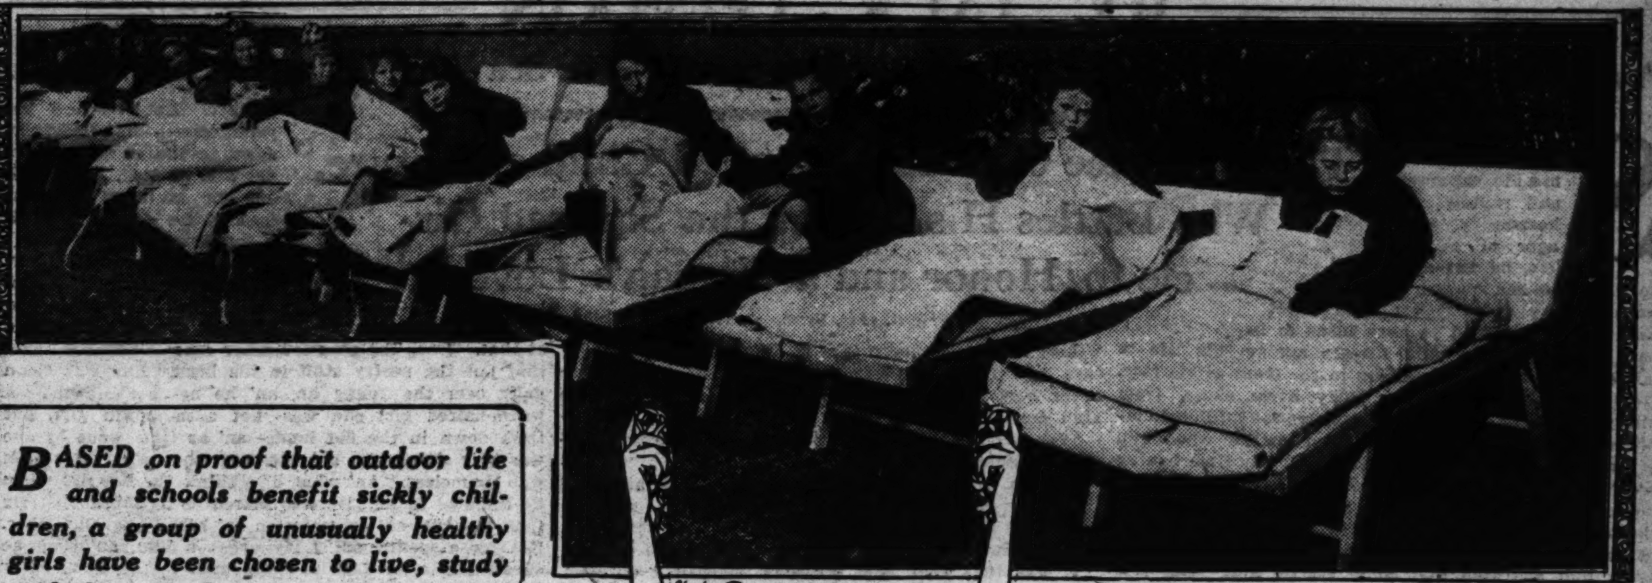
"I can do more than that," she replied. "One recent case is that of a woman who followed my instructions until she overstepped the bounds and exceeded even my fondest expectations. She was a drab, straight-laced little thing, a New England type, a graduate of Mount Holyoke, I feel sure. She came to me when I was here a month ago and told me how she felt her husband slipping. In fact, I gathered he had already slid. It was easy to prescribe for her.

'First thing, I told her to take off that high, stiff collar. She said she would feel undressed downtown without a collar on. Then I told her to follow my system, just good wholesome, sane advice, such as I've given these women here today. Things they ought to know and do know.

"But, once losing her grip on the self-repression of her vanity, this woman had gone to the other extreme. A regular riot of cosmetics had she been indulging in. Yesterday she came to me again. And such a metamorphosis! I felt I had overreached myself. She had jumped from the old-hen class into the chicken class at one bound. And pleased with herself! Why, her husband had stopped 'sliding' right away. It was all he could do to keep in the procession that was smitten with her. One of his clerks, half his age, had fallen in love with her. I pleaded with her to call a halt. It is my purpose only to encourage happy homes—not to break them up."

All of which leads me to conclude that you men may cease trembling for your precious prerogatives.

BRYN MAWR BEGINS ELEVEN-YEAR EXPERIMENT TO REAR "SUPERWOMEN"



Photos © by E.J REILY

Between studies these misses take a nap every day.

BASED on proof that outdoor life and schools benefit sickly children, a group of unusually healthy girls have been chosen to live, study and sleep in the open air 11 years until they finish their college course, when it is expected they will be, physically and mentally, perfect specimens of womanhood.

NO, these photographs—of an open-air schoolroom and of cots under the sky—were not taken in a tuberculosis camp. They picture the latest innovation in education, a wonderful new school, just opened this fall, where fortunate little girls are to be reared into superwomen. In fact, the institution is called the Temple of Superwomen, and is conducted at Bryn Mawr College, in Pennsylvania.

The pupils, in their Eskimo suits of wool blanketing, are not sick, but are in the prime of youthful health. It was argued that if fresh air and out-of-door life is good for ill children, they should be even more beneficial for those who are well. So the students not only play and romp in the open air, but also, well fortified with warm garments, gloves and shoes, recite their lessons in a pavilion of which the glass panes, even on cold days, are flung open.

The new departure, the formal name of which is the Phebe Anna Thorpe Open Air Model School, was founded upon a bequest of the late Phebe Anna Thorpe, an enthusiast over open air education. Several years have gone to the planning of the school, and its Japanese Pavilion, a picture of which is given on this page, was opened to pupils only a few days ago, and the first class, of 15 rosy-cheeked girls, was transferred to the pavilion from Dolgelly Hall, of the college.

The course is to comprise seven years of study mixed with outdoor sport and recreation, at the end of which the graduates will be prepared to enter the four years' college course. Then, it is hoped, they will be superwomen indeed—vigorous mentally and physically, happy and bright-eyed—so that they will far outshine, both in health and in intelligence, their unluckier sisters who have spent their educational youth cooped up in close and stuffy schoolrooms.

The pavilion is as dainty and pleasing as the eye could wish, both within and without, the theory being that beautiful surroundings have an esthetic effect upon the youthful mind. Set amid thinning, dull-brown autumn trees, the classroom overlooks an athletic field in which the school's youngsters frolic under a systematic direction which is as much a part of their daily instruction as French and mathematics.

The one-story frame structure is of artistic Japanese architecture, with a spacious projecting platform. The scheme of interior decoration is in a soft, restful brown color. The oak desks, squared ceiling and the woodwork run to soothing dark hues of brown. The exterior is painted in a reddish brown.

Even the desks have been made as comfortable as possible, according to the ideas of Dr. Mathilda Castro, principal of the school, and her collaborator, Dr. Kate Gordon. The children sit on spacious, adjustable benches, so that they never need feel cramped. The desks are also adjustable, and each has a box for books at the rear, so that the pupils may not be sweeping things out of the way or upon the floor every time they raise the lids.

The sides of the building are practically glass, in long sashes, which may be pushed up until the structure becomes in fact an open-air room. The front doors slide back, too. The enclosing windows and doors are provided for inclement weather only.

Clad in their suits of buff woolen, consisting of coats and trousers, the little girls each morning practice a species of dancing called the "Jaçques-Dalcroze Eurythmics," under the instruction of Placide de Mantiliu. A luncheon is served at 11 o'clock and a full meal two hours later. At 1:30 o'clock the children, wearied by their strenuous morning exercises and classes, are permitted to enjoy a half hour's siesta on the porch of Dolgelly Hall, where each makes up her own cot, rolls up her blanket, and goes to sleep. At 2 o'clock they are awakened to more classes, and then go out upon the athletic field for more fun and hard work.

Before the opening of the pavilion this form of instruction was conducted at Dolgelly Hall, which is still a part of the new educational system. Not only do they still take their daily naps upon its porch, but their lessons in barefoot dancing will be given in the dancing hall of Dolgelly. As time goes on similar buildings to the pavilion will be erected until there are seven, one for each year of the course.

Dr. Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr, is enthusiastic over the open air school, which she describes as a combination of several educational systems, emphasizing the importance of outdoor exercise and play in connection with mental training. The experiment will be followed with interest by educators all over the country.

One cannot but note the bright, alert eyes, the shining morning faces and the air of health and happiness of the pupils shown in the photographs. How different from the dull and tired expression, from the drooping attitudes of many children in the ordinary schoolroom! It will be surprising if the innovation is not adopted at many preparatory schools for girls.

Mere man had best look to his supremacy. If he does not found institutions to train supermen, he may in a few years find himself hopelessly outstripped by the Overwomen of Bryn Mawr. And it was Nietsche, inventor of the word, "Superman," who was at such pains to express his despite for women. Now they have taken his slogan and adapted it to their sex, and in seven years the first class of Superwomen will be graduated.

Thus a lesson taken from the sick has been adapted to the development of health.

I.

SAM STUBENER ran through his mail carelessly and rapidly. As became a manager of prize-fighters, he was accustomed to a various and bizarre correspondence. Every crank, sport, near sport and reformer seemed to have ideas to impart to him. From dire threats against his life to milder threats, such as pushing in the front of his face, from rabbitfoot fetishes to lucky horse shoes, from dinky jerkwater bids to the quarter-of-a-million-dollar offers of irresponsible nobodies, he knew the whole run of the surprise portion of his mail. In his time having received a razor strop made from the skin of a lynched negro, and a finger, withered and sun-dried, cut from the body of a white man found in Death Valley, he was of the opinion that never again would the postman bring him anything that could startle him. But this morning he opened a letter that he read a second time, put away in his pocket, and took out for a third reading. It was postmarked from some unheard-of post-office in Siskiyou County, and it ran:

Dear Sam: You don't know me, except by reputation. You come after my time, and I've been out of the game a long time. But take it from me I ain't been asleep. I've followed the whole game, and I've followed you, from the time Kal Aufman knocked you out to your last handling of Nat Belson, and I take it you're the niftiest thing in the line of managers that ever came down the pike.

I got a proposition for you. I got the greatest unknown that ever happened. This ain't con. It's the straight goods. What do you think of a husky that tips the scales to 220 pounds fighting weight, is 22 years old, and can hit a kick twice as hard as my best ever? That's him, my boy, Young Pat Glendon, that's the name he'll fight under. I've planned it all out. Now the best thing you can do is hit the first train and come up here.

I bred him and I trained him. All that I ever had in my head I've hammered into his. And maybe you won't believe it, but he's added to it. He's a born fighter. He's a wonder at time and distance. He just knows to the second and the inch, and he don't have to think about it at all. His six-inch jolt is more the real sleep medicine than the full-arm swing of most geezers.

Talk about the hope of the white race. This is him. Come and take a peep. When you was managing Jeffries you was crazy about hunting. Come along and I'll give you some real hunting and fishing that will make your moving picture winnings look like 30 cents. I'll send Young Pat out with you. I ain't able to get around. That's why I'm sending for you. I was going to manage him myself. But it ain't no use. I'm all in and likely to pass out any time. So get a move on. I want you to manage him. There's a fortune in it for both of you, but I want to draw up the contract.

Yours truly,

PAT GLENDON.

Stubener was puzzled. It seemed, on the face of it, a joke—the men in the fighting game were notorious jokers—and he tried to discern the fine hand of Corbett or the big friendly paw of Fitzsimmons in the screed before him. But if it were genuine, he knew it was worth looking into. Pat Glendon was before his time, though, as a cub, he had once seen Old Pat spar at the benefit for Jack Dempsey. Even then he was called "Old" Pat, and had been out of the ring for years. He had antedated Sullivan, in the old London Prize Ring Rules, though his last fading battles had been put up under the incoming Marquis of Queensberry Rules.

What ring-follower did not know of Pat Glendon?—though few were alive who had seen him in his prime, and there were not many more who had seen him at all. Yet his name had come down in the history of the ring, and no sporting writer's lexicon was complete without it.

Four times he all but won the heavyweight championship, and each time he had deserved to win it. There was the time on the barge, in San Francisco Bay, when, at the moment he had the champion going, he snapped his own forearm; and on the island in the Thames, sloshing about in six inches of rising tide, he broke a leg at a similar stage in a winning fight; in Texas, too, there was the never-to-be-forgotten day when the police broke in just as he had his man going in all certainty. And finally, there was the fight in the Mechanics' Pavilion in San Francisco, when he was secretly jobbed from the first by a gun-fighting bad man of a referee backed by a small syndicate of bettors. Pat Glendon had had no accidents in that fight, but when he had knocked his man cold with a right to the jaw and a left to the solar plexus, the referee calmly disqualified him for fouling. Every ringside witness, every sporting expert, and the whole sporting world, knew there had been no foul. Yet, like all fighters, Pat Glendon had agreed to abide by the decision of the referee. Pat abided, and accepted it as in keeping with the rest of his bad luck.

This was Pat Glendon. What bothered Stubener was whether or not Pat had written the letter. He carried it downtown with him. What's become of Pat Glendon? Such was his greeting to all sports that morning. Nobody seemed to know. Some thought he must be dead, but none knew positively. The fight editor of a morning daily looked up the records and was able to state that his death had not been noted. It was from Tim Donovan that he got a clew.

"Sure an' he ain't dead," said Donovan. "How could that be?—a man of his make that never boozed or blew himself? He made money, and what's more, he saved it and invested it. Didn't he have three saloons at the one time? An' wasn't he makin' slathers of money with them when he sold out? Now that I'm thinkin', that was the last time I laid eyes on him—when he sold them out. 'Twas all of 20 years and more ago. His wife had just died. I met him headin' for the Ferry. 'Where away, old sport?' says I. 'It's me for the woods,' says he. 'I've quit. Goodby, Tim, me boy.' And I've never seen him from that day to this. Of course he ain't dead."

"You say when his wife died—did he have any children?" Stubener queried.

"One, a little baby. He was luggin' it in his arms that very day."

"Was it a boy?"

"How should I be knowin'?"

It was then that Sam Stubener reached a decision, and that night found him in a Pullman speeding toward the wilds of Northern California.

II.

STUBENER was dropped off the overland at Deer Lick in the early morning, and he kicked his heels for an hour before the one saloon opened its doors. No, the saloonkeeper didn't know anything about Pat Glendon, had never heard of him, and if he was in that part of the country he must be out beyond somewhere. Neither had the one hanger-on ever heard of Pat Glendon. At the hotel the same ignorance obtained, and it was not until the storekeeper and postmaster opened up that Stubener struck the trail. Oh, yes, Pat Glendon lived out beyond. You took the stage at Alpine, which was 40 miles and which was a logging camp. From Alpine, on horseback, you rode up Antelope Valley and crossed the divide to Bear Creek. Pat Glendon lived somewhere beyond that. The people of Alpine would know. Yes, there was a young Pat. The storekeeper had seen him. He had been into Deer Lick two years back. Old Pat had not put in an appearance for five years. He bought his supplies at the store, and always paid by check, and he was a white-haired, strange old man. That was all the storekeeper knew, but the folks at Alpine could give him final directions.

It looked good to Stubener. Beyond doubt there was a young Pat Glendon, as well as an old one, living out beyond. That night the manager spent at the logging camp of Alpine, and early the following morning he rode a mountain cayuse up Antelope Valley. He rode over the divide and down Bear Creek. He rode all day, through the wildest, roughest country he had ever seen, and at sunset turned up Pinto Valley on a trail so stiff and narrow that more than once he elected to get off and walk.

It was 11 o'clock when he dismounted before a log cabin and was greeted by the baying of two huge deerhounds. Then Pat Glendon opened the door, fell on his neck, and took him in.

"I knew ye'd come, Sam, me boy," said Pat, the while he limped about, building a fire, boiling coffee and frying a big bear steak. "The young un ain't home the night. We was gettin' short of meat, and he went out about sundown to pick up a deer. But I'll say no more. Wait till ye see him. He'll be home in the morn, and then you can try him out. There's the gloves. But wait till ye see him.

"As for me, I'm finished. Eighty-one come next January, an' pretty good for an ex-bruiser. But I never wasted meself, Sam, nor kept late hours an' burned the candle at all ends. I had a damned good candle, an' made the most of it, as you'll grant at lookin' at me. And I've taught the same to the young un. What do you think of a lad of 22 that's never had a drink in his life nor tasted tobacco? That's him. He's a giant, and he's lived natural all his days. Wait till he takes you out after deer. He'll break your heart travelin' light, him a carryin' the outfit and a big buck deer belike. He's a child of the open air, an' winter nor summer has he slept under a roof. The open for him, as I taught him. The one thing that worries me is how he'll take to sleepin' in houses, an' how he'll stand the tobacco smoke in the ring. 'Tis a terrible thing, that smoke, when you're fighting hard an' gaspin' for air. But no more, Sam, me boy. You're tired an' sure should be sleepin'. Wait till you see him, that's all. Wait till you see him."

But the garrulousness of age was on old Pat, and it was long before he permitted Stubener's eyes to close.

"He can run a deer down with his own legs, that young un," he broke out again. "'Tis the dandy trainin' for the lungs, the hunter's life. He don't know much of else, though he's read a few books at times an' poetry stuff. He's just plain pure natural, as you'll see when you clap eyes on him. He's got the old Irish strong in him. Sometimes, the way he moons about, it's thinkin' strong I am that he believes in the fairies and suchlike. He's a nature lover if ever there was one, an' he's afeared of cities. He's read about them, but the biggest he was ever in was Deer Lick. He misliked the many people, and his report was that they'd stand weedin' out. That was two years agone—the first and the last time he's seen a locomotive and a train of cars.

"Sometimes it's wrong I'm thinkin' I am, bringin' him up a natural. It's given him wind and stamina and the strength o' wild bulls. No city-grown man can have a lookin against him. I'm willin' to grant that Jeffries at his best could 'a' worried the young un a bit, but only a bit. The young un could 'a' broke him like a straw. An' he don't look it. That's the everlasting wonder of it. He's only a fine-seeming young husky; but it's the quality of his muscle that's different. But wait till ye see him, that's all.

"A strange liking the boy has for posies, an' little meadows, a bit of pine with the moon beyond, windy sunsets, or the sun o' morns from the top of old Baldy. An' he has a hankerin' for the drawin' o' pitchers of things, an' of spouting about 'Lucifer or night' from the poetry books he got from the red-headed school teacher. But 'tis only his youngness. He'll settle down to the game once we get him started, but watch out for grouches when it first comes to livin' in a city for him.

"A good thing; he's woman-shy. they'll not bother him for years. He can't bring himself to understand the creatures, an' damn few of them has he seen at that. 'Twas the school teacher over at Samson's Flat that put the poetry stuff in his head. She was clean daffy over the young un, an' he never a-knowin'. A warm-haired girl she was—not a mountain girl, but from down in the flat lands—an' as time went by she was fair desperate, an' the way she went after him was shameless. An' what d'ye think the boy did when he tumbled to it? He was scared as a jackrabbit. He took blankets an' ammunition an' hiked for tall timber. Not for a month did I lay eyes on him, an' then he sneaked in after dark and was gone in the morn. Nor would he as much as peep at her letters. 'Burn 'em,' he said. An' burn 'em I did. Twice she rode over on a cayuse all the way from Samson's Flat, an' I was sorry for the young creature. She was fair hungry for the boy, and she looked it in her face. An' at the end of three months she gave up school an' went back to her own country, an' then it was that the boy came home to the shack to live again.

"Women ha' been the ruination of many a good fighter, but they won't be of him. He blushes like a girl if anything young in skirts looks at him a second time or too long the first one. An' they all look at him. But when he fights, when he fights!—God! it's the old savage Irish that flares in him, an' drives the fists of him. Not that he goes off his base. Don't walk away with that. At my best I was never as cool as he. I misdoubt 'twas the wrath of me that brought the accidents. But he's an iceberg. He's hot an' cold at the one time, a live wire in an ice-chest."

Stubener was dozing, when the old man's mumble aroused him. He listened drowsily.

"I made a man o' him, by God! I made a man o' him, with the two fists of him, an' the upstanding legs of him, an' the straight-seein' eyes. And I know the game in my head, an' I've kept up with the times and the modern changes. The crouch? Sure, he knows all the styles an' economies. He never moves two inches when an inch and a half will do the turn. And when he wants he can spring like a buck kangeroo. In-fightin'? Wait till you see. Better than his out-fightin' and he could sure 'a' sparred with Peter Jackson an' outfooted Corbett in his best. I tell you, I've taught 'm it all, to the last trick, and he's improved on the teachin'. He's a fair genius at the game. An' he's had plenty of husky mountain men to try out on. I gave him the fancy work and they gave him the sloggin.' Nothing shy or delicate about them. Roarin' bulls an' big grizzly bears, that's what they are, when it comes to huggin' in a clinch or swingin' rough-like in the rushes. An' he plays with 'em. Man, d'ye hear me?—he plays with them, like you an' me would play with little puppy dogs."

Another time Stubener awoke, to hear the old man mumbling:

"'Tis the funny thing he don't take fightin' seriously. It's that easy to him he thinks it play. But wait till he's tapped a swift one. That's all, wait. An' you'll see'm throw on the juice in that cold storage plant of his an' turn loose the prettiest scientific wallopin' that ever you laid eyes on."

In the shivery gray of mountain dawn, Stubener was routed from his blankets by old Pat.

"He's comin' up the trail now," was the hoarse whisper. "Out with ye an' take your first peep at the biggest fightin' man the ring has ever seen, or will ever see in a thousand years again."

The manager peered through the open door, rubbing the sleep from his heavy eyes, and saw a young giant walk into the clearing. In one hand was a rifle, across his shoulders a heavy deer under which he moved as if it were weightless. He was dressed roughly in blue overalls and woolen shirt open at the throat. Coat he had none, and on his feet, instead of brogans, were moccasins. Stubener noted that his walk was smooth and catlike, without suggestion of his 220 pounds of weight to which that of the deer was added. The fight manager was impressed from the first glimpse. Formidable the young fellow certainly was, but the manager sensed the strangeness and unusualness of him. He was a new type, something different from the run of fighters. He seemed a creature of the wild, more a night-roaming figure from some old fairy story or folk tale than a twentieth-century youth.

A thing Stubener quickly discovered was that young Pat was not much of a talker. He acknowledged old Pat's introduction with a grip of the hand but without speech, and silently set to work at building the fire and getting breakfast. To his father's direct questions he answered in monosyllables, as, for instance, when asked where he had picked up the deer.

"South Fork," was all he vouchsafed.

"Eleven miles across the mountains," the old man exposited pridefully to Stubener, "an' a trail that'd break your heart."

Breakfast consisted of black coffee, sourdough bread, and an immense quantity of bear meat broiled over the coals. Of this the young fellow ate ravenously, and Stubener divined that both the Glendons were accustomed to an almost straight meat diet. Old Pat did all the talking, though it was not till the meal was ended that he broached the subject he had at heart.

"Pat, boy," he began, "you know who the gentleman is?"

Young Pat nodded, and cast a quick, comprehensive glance at the manager.

"Well, he'll be takin' you away with him and down to San Francisco."

"I'd sooner stay here, dad," was the answer.

Stubener felt a prick of disappointment. It was a wild goose chase after all. This was no fighter, eager and fretting to be at it. His huge brawn counted for nothing. It was nothing new. It was the big fellows that usually had the streak of fat.

But old Pat's Celtic wrath flared up, and his voice was harsh with command

"You'll go down to the cities an' fight, me boy. That's what I've trained you for, an' you'll do it."

"All right," was the unexpected response, rumbled apathetically from the deep chest.

"And fight like hell," the old man added.

Again Stubener felt disappointment at the absence of flash and fire in the young man's eyes as he answered:

"All right. When do we start?"

"Oh, Sam, here, he'll be wantin' a little huntin' and to fish a bit, as well as to try him out with the gloves." He looked at Sam, who nodded. "Suppose you strip and give'm a taste of your quality."

An hour later, Sam Stubener had his eyes opened. An ex-fighter himself, a heavyweight at that, he was even a better judge of fighters, and never had he seen one strip to like advantage.

"See the softness of him," old Pat chanted. "'Tis the true stuff. Look at the slope of the shoulders, an' the lungs of him. Clean, to the last drop an' ounce of him. You're lookin' at a man, Sam, the like of which was never seen before. Not a muscle of him bound. No weight-lifter or Sandow exercise artist there. See the fat snakes of muscles a-crawlin' soft an' lazy-like. Wait till you see them flashin' like a strikin' rattler. He's good for 40 rounds this blessed instant, or a hundred. Go to it! Time!"

They went to it, for three-minute rounds with a minute rests, and Sam Stubener was immediately undeceived. Here was no streak of fat, no apathy, only a lazy, good-natured play of gloves and tricks, with a brusk stiffness and harsh sharpness in the contacts that he knew belonged only to the trained and instinctive fighting man.

"Easy, now, easy," old Pat warned. "Sam's not the man he used to be."

This nettled Sam, as it was intended to do, and he played his most famous trick and favorite punch—a feint for a clinch and a right rip to the stomach. But, quickly as it was delivered, Young Pat saw it, and, though it landed, his body was going away. The next time, his body did not go away. As the rip started, he moved forward and twisted his left hip to meet it. It was only a matter of several inches, yet it blocked the blow. And thereafter, try as he would, Stubener's glove got no farther than that hip.

Stubener had roughed it with big men in his time, and, in exhibition bouts, had creditably held his own. But there was no holding his own here. Young Pat played with him, and in the clinches made him feel as powerful as a baby, landing on him seemingly at will, locking with masterful accuracy, and scarcely noticing or acknowledging his existence. Half the time young Pat seemed to spend in gazing off and out at the landscape in a dreamy sort of way. And right here Stubener made another mistake. He took it for a trick of old Pat's training, tried to sneak in a short-arm jolt, found his arm in a lightning lock, and had both his ears cuffed for his pains.

"The instinct for a blow," the old man chortled. "'Tis not put on, I'm tellin' you. He is a wiz. He knows a blow without lookin', when it starts an' where, the speed, an' space, an' niceness of it. An' 'tis nothing I ever showed him. 'Tis inspiration. He was so born."

Once, in a clinch, the fight manager heeled his glove on young Pat's mouth, and there was just a hint of viciousness in the manner of doing it. A moment later, in the next clinch, Sam received the heel of the other's glove on his own mouth. There was nothing snappy about it, but the pressure, stolidly lazy as it was, put his head back till the joints cracked and for a moment he thought his neck was broken. He slacked his body and dropped his arms in token that the bout was over, felt the instant release, and staggered clear.

"He'll—he'll do," he gasped, looking the admiration he lacked the breath to utter.

Old Pat's eyes were brightly moist with pride and triumph.

"An' what will you be thinkin' to happen when some of the gay an' ugly ones tries to rough it on him?" he asked.

"He'll kill them, sure," was Stubener's verdict.

"No; he's too cool for that. But he'll just hurt them some for their dirtiness."

"Let's draw up the contract," said the manager.

"Wait till you know the whole worth of him!" Old Pat answered. "'Tis strong terms I'll be makin' you come to. Go for a deer-hunt with the boy over the hills an' learn the lungs and the legs of him. Then we'll sign up iron-clad and regular."

Stubener was gone two days on that hunt, and he learned all and more than old Pat had promised, and came back a very weary and very humble man. The young fellow's innocence of the world had been startling to the case-hardened manager, but he had found him nobody's fool. Virgin though his mind was, untouched by all save a narrow mountain experience, nevertheless he had proved possession of a natural keenness and shrewdness far beyond the average. In a way he was a mystery to Sam, who could not understand his terrible equanimity of temper. Nothing ruffled him or worried him, and his patience was of an enduring primitiveness. He never swore, not even the futile and emasculated cuss-words of sissy-boys.

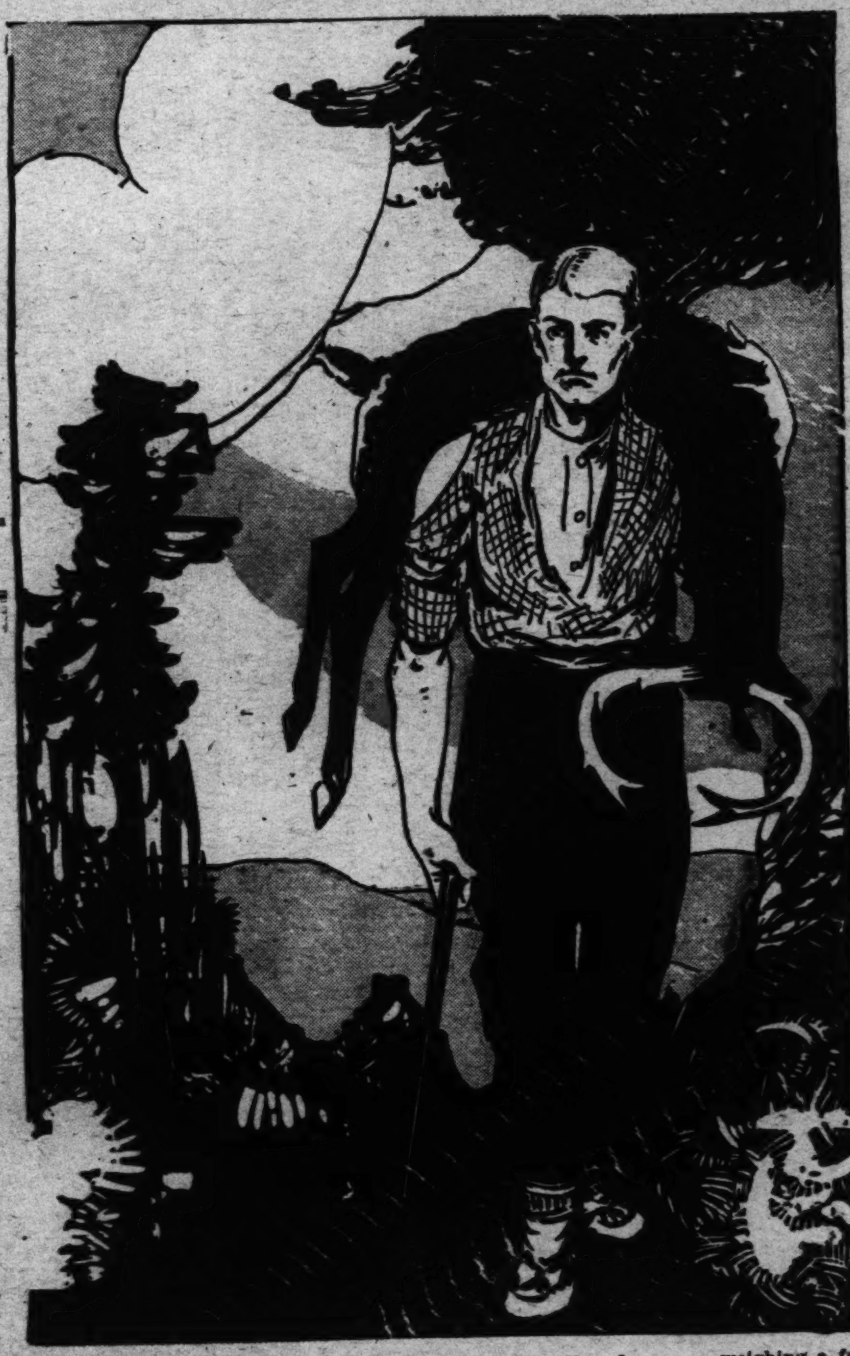
"I'd swear all right if I wanted to," he had explained, when challenged by his companion. "But I guess I've never come to needing it. When I do, I'll swear, I suppose."

Old Pat, resolutely adhering to his decision, said good-by at the cabin.

"It won't be long, Pat, boy, when I'll be readin' about you in the papers. I'd like to go along, but I'm afeard it's me for the mountains till the end."

And then, drawing the manager aside, the old man turned loose on him almost savagely.

"Remember what I've been tellin' ye over an' over. The boy is clean and he's honest. He knows nothing of the rottenness of the game. I kept it all away from him, I tell you. He don't know the meanin' of fake.



"He saw a young giant walk into the clearing. In one hand was a rifle, across his shoulders a heavy deer under which he moved as if it were weightless."

He knows only the bravery, an' romance an' glory of fightin', and I've filled him up with tales of the old ring heroes, though little enough, God knows, it's set him afire. Man, man, I'm tellin' you that I clipped the fight columns from the newspapers to keep it 'way from him—him a-thinkin' I was wantin' them for me scrap book. He don't know a man ever lay down or threw a fight. So don't you get him in anything that ain't straight. Don't turn the boy's stomach. That's why I put in the null and void clause. The first rottenness and the contract's broke of itself. No snide division of take-money; no secret arrangements with the movin' pitcher men for guaranteed distance. There's slathers o' money for the both of you. But play it square or you lose. Understand?"

"And whatever you'll be doin' watch out for the women," was old Pat's parting admonishment, young Pat astride his horse and reining in dutifully to hear. "Women is death an' damnation, remember that. But when you do find the one, the only one, hang onto her. She'll be worth more than glory an' money. But first be sure, an' when you're sure, don't let her slip through your fingers. Grab her with the two hands of you and hang on. Hang on if all the world goes to smash an' smithereens. Pat, boy, a good woman is * * * a good woman. 'Tis the first word and the last."

III.

ONCE in San Francisco, Sam Stubener's troubles began. Not that young Pat had a nasty temper, or was grouchy as his father had feared. On the contrary, he was phenomenally sweet and mild. But he was homesick for his beloved mountains. Also, he was secretly appalled by the city, though he trod its roaring streets imperturbable as a red Indian.

"I came down here to fight," he announced, at the end of the first week. "Where's Jim Hanford?"

Stubener whistled.

"A big champion like him wouldn't look at you," was the answer. "'Go and get a reputation,' is what he'd say."

"I can lick him."

"But the public doesn't know that. If you licked him you'd be champion of the world, and no champion ever became so with his first fight."

"I can."

"But the public doesn't know it, Pat. It wouldn't come to see you fight. And it's the crowd that brings the money and the big purses. That's why Jim Hanford wouldn't consider you for a second. There'd be nothing in it for him. Besides, he's getting three thousand a week right now in vaudeville, with a contract for 25 weeks. Did you think he'd chuck that for a go with a man nobody ever heard of? You've got to do something first, make a record. You've got to begin on the little local dubs that nobody ever heard of—guys like Chub Collins, Rough-House Kelly and the Flying Dutchman. When you've put them away, you're only started on the first round of the ladder. But after that you'll go up like a balloon."

"I'll meet those three named in the same ring one after the other," was Pat's decision. "Make the arrangements accordingly."

Stubener laughed.

"What's wrong? Don't you think I can put them away?"

"I know you can," Stubener assured him. "But it can't be arranged that way. You've got to take them one at a time. Besides, remember, I know the game and I'm managing you. This proposition has to be worked up, and I'm the boy that knows how. If we're lucky, you may get to the top in a couple of years and be the champion with a mint of money."

As Stubener expected, his unknown was laughed at by the fight club managers. Were not the woods full of unknowns who were always breaking out with championship rashes? A preliminary, say of four rounds—yes, they would grant him that. But the main event—never. Stubener was resolved that young Pat should make his debut in nothing less than a main event, and, by the prestige of his own name at last managed it. With much misgiving, the Mission Club agreed that Pat Glendon could go 15 rounds with Rough-House Kelly for a purse of $100.

Came the night of the fight, after a month of waiting. Stubener's anxiety was keen. His professional reputation was staked that his man would make a showing, and he was astounded to see Pat, seated in his corner a bare five minutes, lose the healthy color from his cheeks, which turned a sickly yellow.

"Cheer up, boy," Stubener said, slapping him on the shoulder. "The first time in the ring is always strange, and Kelly has a way of letting his opponent wait for him on the chance of getting stage-fright."

"It isn't that," Pat answered. "It's the tobacco smoke. I'm not used to it, and it's making me fair sick."

Young Pat's entrance into the ring had been met with silence, but when Rough-House Kelly crawled through the ropes his greeting was uproarious. He did not belie his name. He was a ferocious-looking man, black and hairy, with huge, knotty muscles, weighing a full 200 pounds. Pat looked across at him curiously, and received a savage scowl. After both had been introduced to the audience they shook hands. And even as their gloves gripped, Kelly ground his teeth, convulsed his face with an expression of rage, and muttered:

"You've got yer nerve wid yeh." He flung Pat's hand roughly from his, and hissed, "I'll eat yeh up, ye pup!"

The audience laughed at the action, and it guessed hilariously at what Kelly must have said.

Back in his corner, and waiting the gong, Pat turned to Stubener.

"Why is he angry with me?" he asked.

"He ain't," Stubener answered. "That his way, trying to scare you. It's just mouth-fighting."

"It isn't boxing," was Pat's comment; and Stubener, with a quick glance, noted that his eyes were as mildly blue as ever.

"Be careful," the manager warned, as the gong for the first round sounded and Pat stood up. "He's liable to come at you like a man-eater."

And like a man-eater Kelly did come at him, rushing across the ring in wild fury. Pat, who in his easy way had advanced only a couple of paces, gauged the other's momentum, side-stepped, and brought his stiff-arched right across to the jaw. Then he stood and looked on with a great curiosity. The fight was over. Kelly had fallen like a stricken bullock to the floor, and there he lay without movement while the referee, bending over him, shouted the 10 seconds in his unheeding ear. When Kelly's seconds came to lift him, Pat was before them. Gathering the huge, inert bulk of the man in his arms, he carried him to his corner and deposited him on the stool and in the arms of his seconds.

Half a minute later, Kelly's head lifted and his eyes wavered open. He looked about him stupidly and then to one of his seconds.

"What happened?" he queried hoarsely. "Did the roof fall on me?"

Jack Lanagan, Star Reporter, Solves a Strange Murder Mystery

By EDWARD H. HURLBUT

"I HAVE always considered Bannerman," said Jack Lanagan, deliberately, "the crookedest Judge that ever sat on the bench in San Francisco."

Attorney Haddon, distinguished in criminal practice, thumbed his office table.

"Exactly," he said. "Have felt that way about it myself. But he seems to have a hold on the people. And he makes capital out of the fact that he never permits a 'shyster' lawyer to practice in his court."

"Simple," replied Lanagan. "He doesn't have to. He does business with Fogarty direct. They take dinner two or three times a week at the St. Germain. Those are things people don't know. There aren't many who do, outside of myself. But at that I suppose he might get by with the long-eared public with the explanation that 'Billy' Fogarty, bail-bond grafter and chief of the 'shysters,' was a schoolmate of his, raised on the same street, and a member of one or two fraternal organizations with him. All of which is true."

"Bannerman," he continued, "doesn't bother with small cases. He's after the big stuff. And I have a hunch that somewhere back of this case there is big graft. He has been against us from the start. And by the Lord Harry," Lanagan had arisen, his black eyes snapping, "I've put several men in jail, but here's one that I'm going to get out. Peters no more murdered that little child of his than I did. It's an absolute obsession with me that there is some colossal mystery back of the whole thing; some gigantic conspiracy; and Bannerman's attitude today gives me the first direct line to work on I have had. I am going to work on it again at once."

Charley Peters, a machinist, twenty-five years of age, had been held to answer by Bannerman that day to the higher court on a charge of murder for slaying his week-old son. It was a case that had attracted wide attention when several organizations of women's clubs took a stand against Peters.

He had married, as was brought out at the preliminary hearing, a woman of the night life, who had made him, to all report, a capable wife. Originally from Oakland, after the marriage he had moved to an isolated little home in the outskirts of the Potrero, where neither he nor his wife was known. Before their child was born they had been overheard by a passing neighbor in a violent quarrel.

Peters freely admitted the quarrel, but explained that, on the particular night in question, he had been overwrought with a particularly hard day's labor, returned home wearied and worried to find a statement from the doctor for a large amount, and for a moment had become resentful at having another mouth to feed with nothing but debt before him. The quarrel, he said, was quickly made up and the relations of the two were happy up to and after the child was born.

But the Prosecuting Attorney had made great use of the evidence, Bannerman ruling consistently against the objections of Haddon.

The dead child had been found by a crone, who was ministering to Mrs. Peters. She had placed it in a cot in a room adjacent to the mother's room, and had left both mother and child asleep at about 6:30 o'clock while she went out to attend to some small purchases. She returned at about 6:45 to find Peters just home from his work and sitting by his wife's bed. She was asleep.

Ia was not for some little time later that the beldame, going to the child's cot, discovered that it was dead. Her first suppressed cry had been heard by the acute ears of the mother, even in sleep, and she awakened from slumber to call for her babe. In the excitement that followed with the husband and the beldame she became alarmed and, arising, made her way to the adjoining room to discover the dreadful truth. She sank rapidly after the shock and died within a few days.

It was not until the doctor, coming on a call to attend the mother, examined the child, that the marks of strangulation were discovered on its little throat. The police were promptly notified. After one night's detention the old woman was freed of suspicion and the police hand fell on Peters.

He protested that he had entered the house not fifteen minutes before the old woman had found both mother and babe asleep, as he supposed, and had sat down by his wife's side to watch, until the nurse returned.

Such were the principal facts.

LANAGAN, working from a stubborn conviction of Peters' innocence, had devoted much attention to the case. Finally, when the police brought Peters to trial, Lanagan had enlisted the services of Haddon to defend him. Lanagan had known Haddon for a good many years; known him when he was a young prosecutor in the police courts. He had given him many friendly "boosts" in those days. Haddon had never forgotten. He was frank to admit that it was the newspaper men at police headquarters, constantly "featuring" him in the police news, who gave him his real start.

After Bannerman had ruled as a committing Magistrate, binding Peters over to trial for murder, Lanagan had walked to Haddon's office, reviewing the events of the day.

It was his own conviction, as well as that of Haddon, that in all fairness, from the evidence presented, Bannerman should have dismissed the charge. That he should have held Peters as guilty gave Lanagan a freshened enthusiasm in Peters' behalf; because it appeared to Lanagan that Bannerman was acting under powerful pressure in finding such a holding, even with the sentiment created by neurotic women in favor of a conviction.

"I'll keep you posted on developments," said Lanagan as he left Haddon's office, cheerfully helping himself to a fist-full of cigars which that discriminating smoker imported for his own use. "I may need your service later."

"Sampson," he said to his city editor a few moments later, "there's something funny about that Peters case, in spite of their holding him to answer. Haddon thinks as I do. I'm going to tackle it again."

"Tear into it, Jack," said Sampson. "You haven't turned up much lately, anyhow. Think you are going stale."

"We'll see," said Langan briefly.

The St. Germain, in the days before the fire, had a public entrance on Stockton street and a private entrance on O'Farrell. Directly across from the private entrance was a cigar stand, and there Lanagan loitered for an hour or more.

"If I'm right in this thing," he said. "Bannerman and Fogarty will be getting together to talk over the situation. And if they do, I'll let them know pretty pronto that we suspect a nigger in the woodpile somewhere and see if I can't start them to covering up in a fashion that I can follow."

It was about dusk when he suddenly crossed the street and went in at the private door. Fogarty had entered a few minutes before. Lanagan did not worry about Bannerman. He would take the front door, with his high silk hat and his frock coat and his exaggerated impeccability. That old French restaurant had turned up more than one good story in its day, and the upper floor steward was one of Lanagan's numerous "leaks" in the night life district.

A dollar to the steward and he had been told the number of the room where Bannerman was dining. He knocked at the door, as the waiter might, gently. It was Fogarty who half-opened it. Lanagan caught a glimpse of Bannerman, who passed the plate in the church on Sundays, with a dry Martini nicely poised at his lips. A champagne cooler stood comfortably by. Fogarty for a moment seemed about to close the door, but was quick witted enough not to do so.

"Want me, Jack?" he asked, suavely. He was of the full-fed type of saloon man, a sort of a near-broker in appearance. "Come on in and join us."

"Thanks," said Lanagan shortly. "Just ate. I was curious to see who Bannerman was dining with. That's all."

"The dry Martini struck the table suddenly and slopped over. "What a miserable, weak sister of a crook!" thought Lanagan. "I can admire a big crook, but this breed!"

"Why, my dear Mr. Lanagan" exclaimed Bannerman, coming forward so hastily his napkin trailed behind him from his collar, where it had been tucked. "I just met my old friend William quite accidentally. We went to school together, you know. Seldom see him nowadays."

To hear the notorious "Billy" Fogarty called William made Lanagan smile. Fogarty himself had difficulty repressing his grin.

"Judge," said Lanagan smoothly, "you lie! Don't try to peddle any of that stuff on me. You see him about three times a week right here in this room, and you regulate you court calendar by what he tells you. I had very particular reason for wondering whether you were here tonight. I see you are. So-long, Billy. Enjoy that wine, Judge. But you better order another Martini."

Before either could make a reply he had backed from the door and left the cafe.

"PRETTY fair start," he muttered to himself, grimly. "A Judge with Bannerman's appreciation of newspapers will have a lively understanding of the mess I caught him in. If there is anything wrong here, there will be a get-together of some sort quick."

His thought swung back to the case in hand.

"The man who was big enough to take that woman away from the night life and make her his wife was not the man who was killing their child," he repeated to himself, with stubborn reiteration. And yet there could not be found hitherto the slightest shred of motive on the part of anyone else to account for the killing.

And yet, so far as Lanagan's investigations had gone on the case, Peters' record was found to be ordinary enough, and neither in his life nor that of his family was there anything irregular to be discovered that would create the barest suspicion of any person seeking to strike him through the child. There could be found not the slightest iota of motive on the part of anyone else to account for the killing.

The life of the wife began with the meeting of Peters. What her heritage was or her history before than time proved a problem absolutely insoluble to Lanagan and the police; although the police, for their part, did little save work to fasten the crime on the husband, even the brilliant Leslie, greatest chief of his time, taking that line.

The records of the night life are unwritten, save where the requiescat is inscribed when a callous Deputy Coroner blots the entry at the morgue. Who she was before she came into the brooding shadow of the cafe lights was a secret that, if any of the wastrels there knew, they guarded. It is more than likely that they did not know. It is a great, wide way, the entrance there. She had come by that way, one of a multitude, into the shadows and out. Whether she went out for happiness or ill, whether to a free life or a somber death, few there cared to ask, even if they recalled her at all.

Ceaselessly Lanagan had searched the district. He could trace her back to the time when Peters met her and no further. That incident had made some trifling stir, merely because the "guy who got 'copped' on Gracie" had taken her away and really married her; or so they had heard.

Otherwise she had come into the district like many of her transitory sisters, with a suit case; but whether from far or near no one could say.

The influences that were eager to land Peters in the penitentiary were unquestionably the same that murdered the child; so Lanagan argued under the spell of his new theory. They had not slain the mother, directly; but they may have shrewdly calculated the effect upon her, in her precarious condition, of the death of the child; knowledge of which could scarcely be kept from her.

"Let us suppose, then," mused Lanagan, "let us suppose that someone wanted the child out of the way and now wants the husband out of the way. It would be possible to hang him for that crime. In the present state of the public mind, and with Bannerman holding him to answer for murder, life is the least he will get.

"What happens? The child of 'Gracie Dubois' is dead. The husband is, or soon will be, civilly dead. She is dead; but that does not appear to have a moving cause. Why the child's death and the father's imprisonment? Undoubtedly so that someone may profit. But who? Who, concealed back of the shadows of the night lights, kept grim watch on 'Gracie Dubois?' Who was concerned with the fate of that poor, wretched girl, anxious only for redemption, for a decent life? What 'dead hand' is it that has slain her issue and blighted her poor hopes for happiness?"

And Bannerman, with his high silk hat and his frock coat and his impeccable respectability, came before him insistently; Bannerman, with his dry Martini and his quart of wine and his vis-a-vis dinner with "William" Fogarty.

Many thoughts that apparently flash into the mind spontaneously are but the products of a chain of thought carried consistently over a period of time.

It was so with Lanagan and his sudden theory of the "dead hand;" of a case that in some manner reverted back to a will or to an inheritance. He was rather surprised that the thought had not occurred sooner; but he had been busied with other thoughts and theories, and it was not until the way had been cleared that, in its logical time, that theory had suddenly struck him with conviction.

And obviously it was the only theory that had not as yet been exploited by him; that some place back in the earlier life there might lie the solution of the crime—financial reasons for desiring to be rid of her progeny and her natural legatee, her husband.

THE question intruded; why was not the husband murdered as well? There might be many reasons, but one would answer; his imprisonment would suffice even if he were not executed; and if he managed to avoid any penalty, there would be time enough to see to him.

And leading back to that "dead hand" theory of his, Lanagan could see but two links: Bannerman and Fogarty.

From the neighborhood of the St. Germain he got me on the wire.

"Cover Fogarty's," he said. "Pick up some of the bunch and drop in casually. Keep your eye on him if he's there, and who he talks to. Spend money and get soberly drunk, if necessary to allay any suspicion that he is being watched. Get Sampson on the 'phone by ten o'clock. There may be a message for you."

I hadn't the faintest idea what it was all about, but Lanagan's voice was as snappy as a drill master. I went to the reporter's room at police headquarters and led a bunch to Fogarty's to rattle the dice for a round or two. It was pay night and money was free. If Fogarty, after he came in, had any suspicions of me—he knew that Lanagan and I always worked together—they were soon allayed. The dice rolled blithely for an hour or two with one of the boys dropping out occasionally to "cover" the police beat for the others while the play went on.

But nothing happened and I slipped away to get Sampson on the 'phone. It was ten o'clock. He was didactic as usual, and as irritatingly brief: "Report to Lanagan. Room 802 Fairmont. Take the back stairs and make the room above all things without being seen."

That same old tingle that always shot up my spine when Lanagan was calling me in on the smash of one of his grand climaxes, shivered up to my hair roots. In a general way I knew the quest he was on, but that his search should have led him to the Fairmont hotel, on the very crest of aristocratic Nob Hill, was sufficient without further information to set my imagination humming.

The door was open, and I entered, noiselessly. Lanagan was lying on the bed, smoking. He jumped up.

"Here," he said quickly, indicating a chair drawn up before the door leading to the adjoining room—they were suite rooms, but used separately. "Sit there until I get back and take notes on what you hear. Keep your ear glued to that hole."

He had cut with his pocket knife an inch hole in the paneling of the door. He had whittled it so nicely that it was not quite cut entirely through.

"You will find you can hear everything that is said in an ordinary tone of voice. There's no one in there now. An Englishman named Holmes has the room. Pretty soon I expect him and Larry Leighton in there with a girl. I am going out and get hold of Leslie. Lock the door after me and keep your ears open for us when we get back. I won't knock, but will turn the handle once or twice."

"What's the lay?" I asked.

"No time to talk now," he flung back over his shoulder, and was gone.

IT was probably 20 minutes later when the occupants of the adjoining room entered. There were two men and a woman. I could distinguish perfectly Leighton's sonorous voice. He had been a lawyer of standing in years gone by, but lately had been involved in one or two transactions a trifle "shady" in character, chiefly pertaining to the administration of estates; but nothing had ever been proved against him nor had the matter ever got into such shape that the papers could use it. So far as the gneral public was concerned, he stood well enough.

"I felt I could not be wrong," Leighton was saying. "And I am glad that you are satisfied. It must be a source of great satisfaction to you, Miss Pendleton, to be restored to your name and inheritance."

"I am only sorry now it did not happen before poor father went," the girl replied, with a tremble in her voice, and I fancied she was crying.

"Personally," it was the Englishman's voice, "I am satisfied of the identity. But of course my principals in London will also have to be satisfied. It would be best to leave at once, I think, for England. For the sake of the Pendleton name, we must work secretly and quietly. I would not want the matter in the public prints for the world."

I was listening with such intentness that it was some time before the soft and insistent grating of the doorknob caught my attention. I tiptoed to the door. Lanagan entered. In another moment Leslie came in, and after a few moments of interval, Brady and Wilson,

A "Shyster's" Desperate Conspiracy to Seize $750,000

> "Put on the bracelets, Chief," said Leighton. "I took my chances, I'll take my medicine. The doctors gave me two years to live. I saw a chance for a big clean-up and the German springs. It might have saved me."

two of Leslie's steadiast thief-takers, stepped in softly. There was big game afoot of some sort!

Leslie had his ear to the door. He remained there for some time, and then motioned Brady, who took his turn, followed by Wilson.

Lanagan was sitting on the corner of the little table, swinging his feet lazily, but following every move made by the officers, and watching every shade of expression in their faces. Leslie took another turn and a half smile played over Lanagan's face as that veteran Chief finally stepped over to him and put out his hand. Lanagan gripped it. Not a word was spoken. Motioning to Brady and Wilson, Leslie stepped out and we followed.

He rapped on the door to the adjoining room. Leighton opened it, a look of inquiry on his rotund features. As swiftly as though a swab had been rubbed over it, his look of inquiry shaded into one of alarm, as he recognized Leslie. We filed in and Wilson snapped the lock behind him and stood at the door, Brady walking quickly to the window and taking his position there. Not a word had as yet been spoken. Leighton stood as though stupified. The Englishman, a dapper, well-dressed man of probably 40, smoking a cigarette at ease, raised his brows as we entered, but said nothing.

On the edge of the bed the girl was sitting, her wide eyes following Leslie. It was evident that she knew him by sight. Her resemblance to Mrs. Peters was striking. Both were women of that blonde, doll-faced type so frequently found in the night life.

"Leighton," said Leslie, "the jig is up."

Leighton sank into a chair. The Chief went to the connecting door, tapped for a moment, and then jabbed his knife through Lanagan's ear hole.

"See?" he said laconically. "We've been listening there for 30 minutes. Gertrude Pendleton is dead; you know she is dead and her child with her. And this woman here," turning sharply to the girl, "knows that she is not Gertrude Pendleton. She knows perfectly well that she is playing a crooked 'lost heir' case for you, Leighton."

As though he had been a jack in the box, Holmes jumped to his feet.

"Heavens, Sir!" he cried, "why, what are you saying! Who are you?"

Leslie threw back his coat, displaying his diamond-studded shield.

"Chief of Police Leslie, of San Francisco," he said, shortly.

With a swift movement the girl's hand went to her corsage and in a flash Lanagan had hurtled across the room and a tiny dagger spun to the floor. She threw herself back upon the bed, crying in sudden hysteria.

"You might have let me done it! You might have let me done it!" she wailed bitterly. Lanagan was wrapping up his hand. He had got the point of the dagger through the ball of his thumb in the rush. She jumped up again and threw herself at the feet of Leslie.

"It's my first crooked trick, so help me, Chief! He dragged me into it! What was I to do? What was I to do? It looked easy and it was a way out."

Leighton was glancing heavily, his lips apart, from the door to the window as though planning an attempt to escape by either means.

"You've been shading pretty close on one or two things lately, Leighton," said the Chief grimly. "But I didn't think you had it in you to take a chance at the scaffold."

"What do you mean by that, Chief?" gasped Leighton, with a sickly attempt at composure.

"He means," thundered Lanagan, "that you are the man back of the murder of the real Gertrude Pendleton's child, and the indirect killing of Gertrude Pendleton, who was Mrs. Peters! He means that you are the man back of Fogarty, who is the man who secured the conviction, in Bannerman's court, of Peters. That's what he means!"

Lanagan wheeled on the Englishman.

"How much money have you already paid Leighton?"

"One thousand pounds for producing this girl. He was to get 4000 more when final proof of identity was accepted by my principals in London."

Leslie and Lanagan exchanged glances. It was big pickings for Larry Leighton. Twenty-five thousand dollars in all; properly handled by Fogarty, it would go a long way to grease the wheels of justice in the police court.

Leighton arose, shaking like a palsied man, and tottered, rather than walked, to the Chief. He extended his wrists.

"Put on the bracelets, Chief," he said, in a voice that was but a shadow of his rich voice. "I took my chances, I'll take my medicine. The girl hasn't done anything yet you can hold her on. She knows nothing about the other thing. The doctors had given me two years to live—kidneys gone—and I saw a chance for a big clean-up and the German springs. It might have saved me."

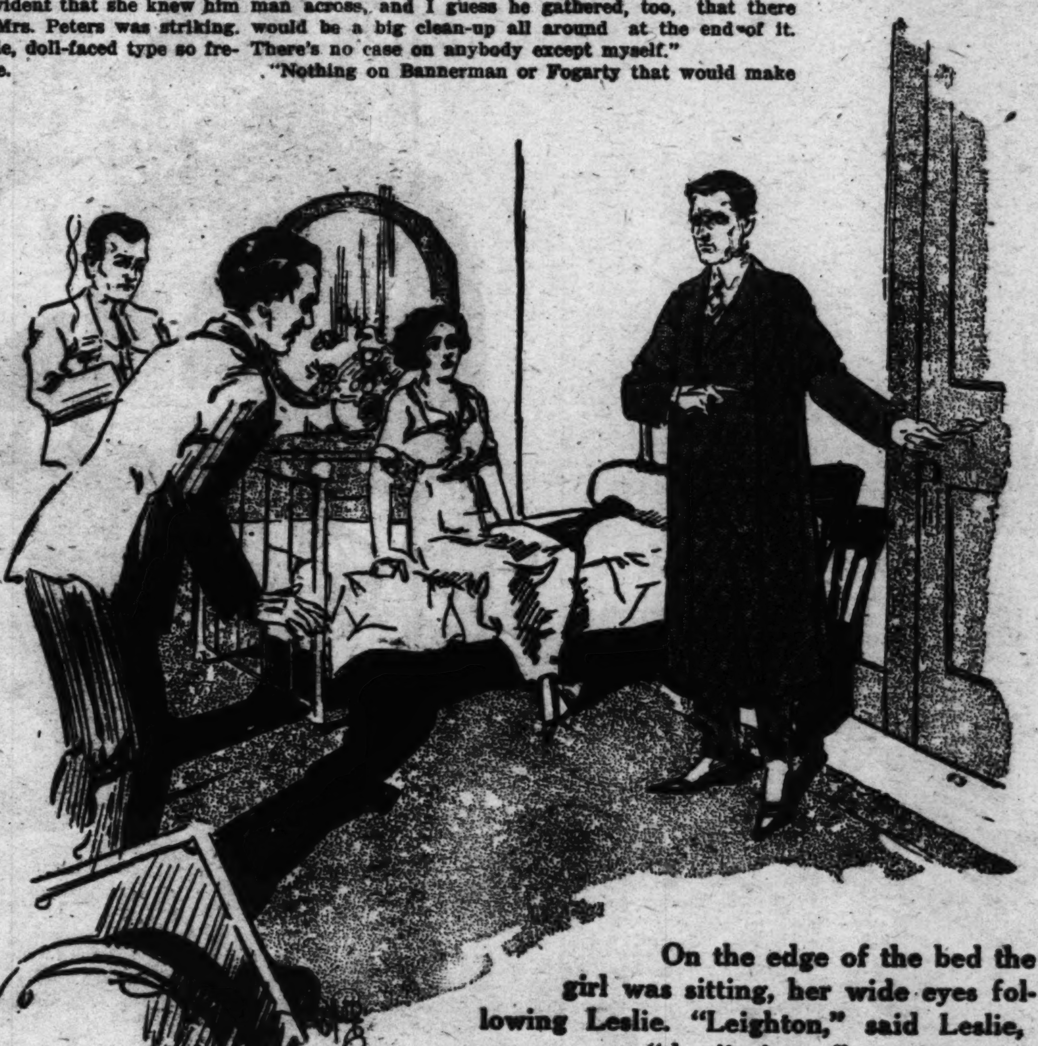
"Big!" interrupted the Englishman, awed, "150,000 pounds!"

"That's all, Chief," resumed Leighton. "I did the trick with the child myself, I wouldn't trust anybody else. The night was pitch black and there are no houses right near there, you know. I waited till the old lady went out. After I finished the child, I was going to get the mother, but the front gate slammed. It was Peters coming home. I slipped out the back door again. I wanted the husband out of the way, on general principles. I did not know what his wife might have told him and he was better off, in case any publicity attended the restoration of the girl here, where he couldn't squeak, in case his wife had ever told him her real name and story.

"This girl, whom I picked up because she looks a good bit like Mrs. Peters, seemed to have nerve enough for the deal, and she was to collect the estate and give me half. It was a big gamble. You're right about the scaffold, Chief. I never took any such chance before, but this was a 'get-away' stake for life for me, and I took it.

"I had no direct dealings with Bannerman. There's nothing on him. I had talks with Fogarty, but paid no money. In a general way he gathered I wanted the man across, and I guess he gathered, too, that there would be a big clean-up all around at the end of it. There's no case on anybody except myself."

"Nothing on Bannerman or Fogarty that would make a case in court, possibly," said Lanagan, curtly, "but plenty that the Enquirer can print. You're loyal to your pals, Leighton."



On the edge of the bed the girl was sitting, her wide eyes following Leslie. "Leighton," said Leslie, "the jig is up."

It appeared that Leighton, through a newspaper advertisement, got into communication with the London firm of lawyers of which Holmes was the confidential representative. They had a theory that the girl they sought had gone to San Francisco. A runaway at the age of 15, Gertrude Pendleton had been estranged from her father. She had taken the downward path, but the father, relenting on his deathbed, willed his estate to her, and his executors had for months been endeavoring to locate her.

Leighton immediately began his plotting to foist an imposter upon the executors and their lawyers. It must be remembered that they had accepted him as a reputable lawyer. He had made a secret trip to England and had secured a fairly complete record of the places the Pendletons had lived in while the daughter was still with them.

To Leighton's scheming brain the thing looked perfectly simple.

The murder plot was secondary. It had been his original plan to find the real Gertrude Pendleton and if possible strike some bargain with her. Equipped with a picture of her taken at the age of 15, he had finally traced her, to find her respectably married. Consequently, it was hardly likely that he could strike any combination with her that would give him the "haul" that he sought to make. Then, with her alive, there was always danger that she would disclose her identity to her husband. When the child came along, Leighton, keeping close tab on the Peters, concluded that inevitably motherly pride in the redeemed woman would bring about an attempt at a family reconciliation. Then would come to her the knowledge of her father's death and of her own inheritance.

He determined on one bold stroke: kill mother and child on the gamble that what did happen, would happen: that the husband would be accused.

With the husband safely imprisoned, or possibly executed, his path with the impostor would be unimpeded. He had coached his impostor well on the information gained on his English trip.

So much for Leighton's story. Lanagan's story was startlingly simple. After telephoning for me to cover Fogarty's, he had returned to watch the St. Germain. Fogarty finally came out and Lanagan shadowed him to the Mills Building. He came from there shortly, in company with Leighton, and Lanagan, still in the grasp of his "dead hand" theory, and knowing Leighton by sight, and his reputation in the inner circles for tangling up in estate cases, dropped Fogarty and followed Leighton. He went directly to the Fairmont. When he went to the desk to call for Holmes, Lanagan was close at his side. Leighton did not know him by sight. Learning which room Holmes had, Lanagan was fortunate in securing an unoccupied room adjoining, and he was in his room 10 minutes after Leighton had entered Holmes'. Being fortunate enough to get the room merely hastened the climax, because the case was already clearing in Lanagan's mind.

The narratives were ended. Lanagan turned to Leslie:

"I want Peters here, Chief, to give the last note to my story. To prevent any 'leak' from the county jail, I will have Haddon get Superior Judge Dunlevy to telephone a verbal order of release to the jail for Peters to be brought to the city to see his counsel. It's rather unusual, but has been done before, and Dunlevy will do it. I think I'll get Haddon in for the finals, too. He's been in the case pretty deep."

It was probably an hour later before Haddon dropped into the room. He had sent a machine for Peters, Dunlevy telephoning the order. A few moments later Peters, in charge of a Deputy Sheriff, entered and in brief and business-like fashion the facts were laid before him. It was a little too much for him to grasp all at once.

When he finally did, it was the Englishman who brought matters to a business basis by remarking:

"Leighton certainly seems to have been extremely positive about the identity of Mrs. Peters. Did you know that she was Gertrude Pendleton?"

"Sir," said Peters, "I married my wife as I found her, and I asked no questions. She made me a good wife. She never talked about herself or her people."

"Did she have any keepsakes, any old trinkets, any pictures?"

Peters unbuttoned his shirt. "Only this," he said, producing a locket attached to a fine gold chain. "She asked me to wear it when she was taken to bed, and if anything happened, to give it to the babe. The police missed it in searching me. It's her father and mother, I think, although she never said."

With eager fingers Holmes opened the old-fashioned locket.

"It is Capt. and Mrs. Pendleton," he said, simply. "He looks as he looked the day before his death." A silence fell upon the room, as he snapped the locket and, bowing profoundly, passed it back to Peters. He then continued:

"My mission here has certainly had a curious termination. I will remain until the court matters against you are all disposed of. I would suggest then that you return with me to London, so that you can be on the ground in the arrangements for transferring the estate to you."

"There will be no arrangements," said Peters. "I don't want the money."

"Don't want it! Don't want 150,000 pounds, three-quarters of a million dollars? It will escheat to the Crown if you refuse."

"Let it then," said Peters, stubbornly. "I don't want it. Why should I take something my wife didn't want? There must be something wrong about it somewhere. Why should I make money by the death of my wife and child? If she were here to share it—if only my boy were here"——

He broke down for the first time since his arrest, and sobbed.

"I'll go back to my trade," he said, simply. "Hard work is the best thing for me now."

He turned to Lanagan and their hands met in a long, hard clasp.

"If it can be done, I'll turn the money over to you, Mr. Lanagan."

"Thanks, Peters, no. I've only done a newspaperman's work; what the Enquirer pays me to do. You're all man; and it's been a pleasure to clear you."

To Leslie, again the master newspaper mind, calculating the minutes swiftly slipping around after midnight, he snapped:

"It's in your hands now, Chief. Keep everybody here and stall around for an hour or so, while Norton and I give the town a story that, if it doesn't make a case in court against Fogarty and Bannerman, will at least chase Fogarty out of town till it blows over and beat Bannerman out of the nomination for Superior Judge. His name comes before the convention tomorrow night. We're off."

Then to me as we swiftly pelted out of the room: "Key up to it, Norrie; this is some stemwinder!"

THE PRESIDENCY:

Making an Old Party Progressive . . .

"I did not usurp power," says Colonel, "but I did greatly broaden the use of executive power"—Taft soundly rated for his "subserviency" to Congress and accused, in permitting legislative branch to investigate Ballinger, of taking "Buchanan View" instead of "Jackson-Lincoln view" of presidential authority

The White House from the garden—From a painting by F. Hopkinson Smith

On Sept. 6, 1901, President McKinley was shot by an anarchist in the city of Buffalo. I went to Buffalo at once. The President's condition seemed to be improving, and after a day or two we were told that he was practically out of danger. I then joined my family, who were in the Adirondacks, near the foot of Mount Tahawus. A day or two afterwards we took a long tramp through the forest, and in the afternoon I climbed Mount Tahawus.

After reaching the top I had descended a few hundred feet to a shelf of land where there was a little lake, when I saw a guide coming out of the woods on our trail from below. I felt at once that he had bad news, and, sure enough, he handed me a telegram saying that the President's condition was much worse and that I must come to Buffalo immediately. It was late in the afternoon, and darkness had fallen by the time I reached the clubhouse where we were staying.

It was some time afterwards before I could get a wagon to drive me out to the nearest railway station, North Creek, some forty or fifty miles distant. The roads were the ordinary wilderness roads and the night was dark. But we changed horses two or three times—when I say "we" I mean the driver and I, as there was no one else with us—and reached the station just at dawn, to learn from Mr. Loeb, who had a special train waiting, that the President was dead. That evening I took the oath of office, in the house of Ansley Wilcox, at Buffalo.

On three previous occasions the Vice-President had succeeded to the presidency on the death of the President. In each case there had been a reversal of party policy and a nearly immediate and nearly complete change in the personnel of the higher offices, especially the Cabinet. I had never felt that this was wise from any standpoint. If a man is fit to be President he will speedily so impress himself in the office that the policies pursued will be his anyhow, and he will not have to bother as to whether he is changing them or not; while as regards the offices under him, the important thing for him is that his subordinates shall make a success in handling their several departments. The subordinate is sure to desire to make a success of his department for his own sake, and if he is a fit man, whose views on public policy are sound, and whose abilities entitle him to his position, he will do excellently under almost any chief with the same purposes.

I at once announced that I would continue unchanged McKinley's policies for the honor and prosperity of the country, and I asked all the members of the Cabinet to stay. There were no changes made among them save as changes were made among their successors whom I myself appointed. I continued Mr. McKinley's policies, changing and developing them and adding new policies only as the questions before the public changed and as the needs of the public developed. Some of my friends shook their heads over this, telling me that the men I retained would not be "loyal to me," and that I would seem as if I were "a pale copy of McKinley."

I told them that I was not nervous on this score, and that if the men I retained were loyal to their work they would be giving me the loyalty for which I most cared; and that if they were not, I would change them anyhow; and that as for being "a pale copy of McKinley," I was not primarily concerned with either following or not following in his footsteps, but in facing the new problems that arose; and that if I were competent I would find ample opportunity to show my competence by my deeds without worrying myself as to how to convince people of the fact.

For the reasons I have already given in my chapter on the governorship of New York, the Republican party, which in the days of Abraham Lincoln was founded as the radical progressive party of the nation, had been obliged during the last decade of the nineteenth century to uphold the interests of popular government against a foolish and ill-judged mock radicalism. It remained the nationalist as against the particularist or state's rights party, and in so far it remained absolutely sound; for little permanent good can be done by any party which worships the state's rights fetish or which fails to regard the state, like the county or the municipality, as merely a convenient unit for local self-government, while in all national matters of importance to the whole people, the nation is to be supreme over state, county and town alike.

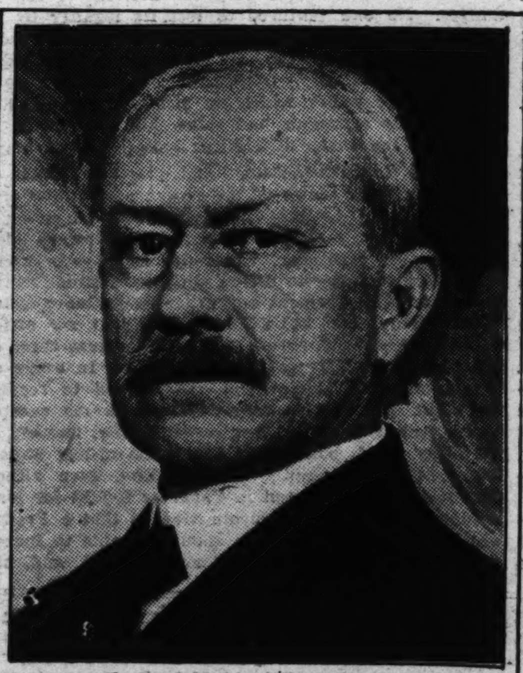
But the state's rights fetish, although still effectively used at certain times by both courts and Congress to block needed national legislation directed against the huge corporations or in the interests of workingmen, was not a prime issue at the time of which I speak. In 1896, 1898 and 1900 the campaigns were waged on two great moral issues: (1) the imperative need of a sound and honest currency; (2) the need, after 1898, of meeting in manful and straightforward fashion the extra-territorial problems arising from the Spanish War. On these great moral issues the Republican party was right, and the men who were opposed to it, and who claimed to be radicals, and their allies among the sentimentalists, were utterly and hopelessly wrong.

This had, regrettably but perhaps inevitably, tended to throw the party into the hands not merely of the conservatives but of the reactionaries; of men who, sometimes for personal and improper reasons, but more often with entire sincerity and uprightness of purpose, distrusted anything that was progressive and dreaded radicalism. These men still, from force of habit, applauded what Lincoln had done in the way of radical dealing with the abuses of his day; but they did not apply the spirit in which Lincoln worked to the abuses of their own day. Both houses of Congress were controlled by these men.

Their leaders in the Senate were Messrs. Aldrich and Hale. The Speaker of the House when I became President was Mr. Henderson, but in a little over a year he was succeeded by Mr. Cannon, who, although widely differing from Senator Aldrich in matters of detail, represented the same type of public sentiment. There were many points on which I agreed with Mr. Cannon and Mr. Aldrich and some points on which I agreed with Mr. Hale. I made a resolute effort to get on with all three and with their followers and I have no question that they made an equally resolute effort to get on with me.

We succeeded in working together, although with increasing friction, for some years, I pushing forward and they hanging back. Gradually, however, I was forced to abandon the effort to persuade them to come my way, and then I achieved results only by appealing over the heads of the Senate and House leaders to the people, who were the masters of both of us.

I continued in this way to get results until almost the close of my term; and the Republican party became once more the progressive and indeed the fairly radical progressive party of the nation. When my successor was chosen, however, the leaders of the House and Senate, or most of them, felt that it was safe to come to a break with me, and the last or short session of Congress, held between the election of my successor and his inauguration four months later, saw a series of contests between the majorities in the two houses of Congress and the President—myself—quite as bitter as if they and I had belonged to opposite political parties. However, I held my own. I was not able to push through the legislation I desired during these four months, but I was able to prevent them doing anything I did not desire, or undoing anything that I had already succeeded in getting done.



Secretary of the Interior, Richard A. Ballinger.

Outside of the public servants there were multitudes of men, in newspaper offices, in magazine offices, in business or the professions or on farm or in shops, who actively supported the policies for which I stood and did work of genuine leadership which was quite as effective as any work done by men in public office. Without the active support of these men I would have been powerless. In particular, the leading newspaper correspondents at Washington were as a whole a singularly able, trustworthy and public-spirited body of men, and the most useful of all agents in the fight for efficient and decent government.

We worked very hard; but I made a point of getting a couple of hours off each day for equally vigorous play. The men with whom I then played, whom we laughingly grew to call the "Tennis Cabinet," have been mentioned in a previous chapter in connection with the gift they gave me at the last breakfast which they took at the White House. There were many others in the public service under me with whom I happened not to play, but who did their share of our common work just as effectively as it was done by us who did play.

At the end of my administration Mr. Bryce, the British Ambassador, told me that in a long life, during which he had studied intimately the governments of many different countries, he had never in any country seen a more eager, high-minded and efficient set of public servants, men more useful and more creditable to their country, than the men then doing the work of the American Government in Washington and in the field. I repeat this statement with the permission of Mr. Bryce.

The most important factor in getting the right spirit in my administration, next to the insistence upon courage, honesty and a genuine democracy of desire to serve the plain people, was my insistence upon the theory that the executive power was limited only by specific restrictions and prohibitions appearing in the Constitution or imposed by the Congress under its constitutional powers. My view was that every executive officer, and above all every executive officer in high position, was a steward of the people, bound actively and affirmatively to do all he could for the people, and not to content himself with the negative merit of keeping his talent undamaged in a napkin.

I declined to adopt the view that what was imperatively necessary for the nation could not be done by the President unless he could find some specific authorization to do it. My belief was that it was not only his right but his duty to do anything that the needs of the nation demanded unless such action was forbidden by the Constitution or by the laws. Under this interpretation of executive power I did and caused to be done many things not previously done by the Presidents and the heads of the departments.

I did not care a rap for the mere form and show of power; I cared immensely for the use that could be made of the substance. The Senate at one time objected to my communicating with them in printing, preferring the expensive, foolish and laborious practice of writing out the messages by hand. It was not possible to return to the outworn archaism of hand-writing; but we endeavored to have the printing made as pretty as possible. Whether I communicated with the Congress in writing or by word of mouth, and whether the writing was by a machine or a pen, were equally, and absolutely, unimportant matters. The importance lay in what I said and in the heed paid to what I said.

So as to my meeting and consulting Senators, Congressmen, politicians, financiers and labor men. I con-

World's Greatest Sea Mystery Solved at Last

my clothes, and though one can keep afloat and move a bit, one can't really swim in one's clothes; not really to call it swimming, that is"——

"What!" shouted the Captain, "you mean to say a man can't swim in his clothes?"

"Not an ordinary man can't," the mate repeated. "You mustn't judge by yourself; you're an exceptional swimmer. There aren't many who can swim like you." The Captain was vain of his swimming, and told everyone on board how he had won three swimming prizes at school.

The controversy grew warmer and warmer, although Mrs. Briggs tried to change the subject. Finally the Captain pushed away his food and exclaimed:

"I'm going to have a swim in my clothes." His wife's tears and the mate's expostulations made him only the more stubborn. At last he wagered the mate a new suit of clothes that he could swim around the ship in five minutes. Mrs. Briggs, weeping, took Baby out of the cabin, leaving their breakfast half eaten.

Fearful for her husband's mental condition, and dreading lest some accident might happen to him in the water, she persuaded four of the men to accompany him. They were a sailor known as Young Bill; Joe, the carpenter; Darky, a negro boy, and Robin.

All of the other men crowded upon "Baby's quarterdeck," where Mrs. Briggs, looking the picture of misery, stood with the little girl. The report of the Captain's wager had spread all over the ship, and the men were anxious to see his attempt to win it. Even the steersman lashed his wheel and joined the others on the platform.

The Captain, fully dressed, dropped into the water and the four others dived after him. Baby gave the word "Go," and Mrs. Briggs held the ship's chronometer. The Captain had not the slightest difficulty in getting along, swimming swiftly despite his clothes. Those on board followed him with their eyes until he disappeared behind the stern, and picked him up again as he turned into the returning lap on the port side.

At that moment came disaster. An unearthly scream arose from the water. Fosdyk thought it was Young Bill's voice, and learned afterwards that he had probably been bitten by a shark. At the cry the nine persons on the platform rushed to the port side and then, without the slightest shadow of warning, found themselves in the water! "Baby's quarterdeck" had collapsed under them.

Fosdyk, in the desperate clutch of one of the men, went down and down into the water. He freed himself from the incubus clinging to him by thrusting a thumb into his eye. At last, almost bursting for lack of air, he regained the surface and turned upon his back to muster up his strength.

He saw the platform dangling by one of its ends from the bowsprit, and a sailor called Big Bill was hanging by both hands from the lower end, his feet just clearing the water. Not another soul was to be seen!

"Bill," Fosdyk cried, "what's happened?"

His answer was, "You fool, there's a shark between the Captain and the ship!"

Frozen with terror by the word shark, Fosdyk feebly cried "Help, help!" Then the platform broke loose and fell into the water on top of Big Bill. Almost immediately a huge shark shot out from the port side of the ship, swam swiftly towards Fosdyk, passed him and turned. Again it went down the port side and disappeared. He struggled rather than swam to the platform, and after great exertion, succeeded in pulling himself aboard, almost upsetting the little raft in the effort.

Big Bill's head had been cut open by a corner of the platform from the forehead to the jaw, so that his teeth were visible through the wound. He lay moaning and unconscious, held on the platform by a nail which had caught in his coat. One of his legs dangled in the water.

"I do not think," wrote Fosdyk, "that up to this point it had entered my head that nobody was left on the ship. But now there was an ominous silence which attracted my attention for the first time. I heard no voice on the ship, no orders were given, no cheery 'Aye, aye' sir!' was audible. What if everybody was overboard and there was no rope down anywhere to get back by?

"Not for one moment did I realize or dream that nine persons had been drowned in three or four minutes. Yet this is what must have occurred. The mate had said that it is not easy to swim in one's clothes.

"A very slight breeze arose and the ship turned lengthwise. My heart beat wildly as I scanned the water and the starboard side of the vessel. At a glance I saw nothing was hanging down by which anyone could get on board, but the idea came to me that if I could get alongside and stand up to my full height on the platform I might be able, by the use of my fingers, to raise myself on ledges to the rigging fittings and so get aboard.

"Immediately I tried to paddle the platform along, but after an exhausting effort I only succeeded in turning the raft round on its axis. For a long time, so still was the air, the relative positions of the ship and the raft remained the same. The current took the ship in the same direction that it took us, but gradually we separated. The ship, being larger, went, I suppose, slower or faster, I can't say which. Not until afternoon did any breeze catch the sails of the ship; then, when it did, it seemed only to do so to torment me further, for it drove the vessel closer to me and then past me, and so for a mile or more away."

Of the 14 persons in the water, only two were seen by Fosdyk after the platform collapsed—the wounded sailor on the raft and Capt. Briggs. Fosdyk caught a glimpse of the latter as he swam about 300 yards away from the ship, with the dorsal fin of the shark darting here and there around him. Whether the Captain drowned or was killed by the shark Fosdyk did not know.

The swift death which overtook the nine on the platform, including Mrs. Briggs and the child, may be explained by the fact that they were all fully dressed. The four men who were swimming with Capt. Briggs were stripped for the water. They may have been killed by the shark, or else, being unable to get back aboard the ship, became exhausted and sank.

Fosdyk believed for a time that his companion on the raft was dead, but towards evening he moved, sighed and slipped off into the water. The survivor says that this event left him callous. His cup of woe was full—what mattered it if it overflowed? But the platform was no longer steady, and Fosdyk had to stand with his feet apart to balance it. The little craft slowly revolved, so that sometimes he was facing the sun and sometimes had his back to it. He watched the sun lower itself inch by inch into the glistening water, and the spectacle seemed to aggregate the thirst which had begun to afflict him.

At the end of the second day of drifting under a scorching sun, Fosdyk became delirious. How many days he floated alone upon the waters he could not remember. At last he seemed to hear a faraway voice repeating one word or phrase endlessly, with a wonderful regularity, like the slow ticking of a giant clock. Then it was borne in upon him that it was the leisurely, constant beating of surf upon land!

Another interval of insensibility, and he awoke to find himself lying on the sand. So terrible a weight seemed to be pressing upon him that for a moment he thought he had been washed ashore and buried alive. Then there was a black man stooping over him and pouring water between his baked lips.

"Not the least curious part of this strange adventure," concluded Fosdyk, "is that I have never been able to this very day to tell how I was rescued. Three blacks and a dark European and his wife, talking Heaven only knows what language, had got me from somewhere and were also keeping me somewhere.

"As I gradually recovered, which I did through long tribulation, I made every endeavor by signs to discover how they had saved me. I think they understood what I wanted to know, and they pointed to the sea and their boat, a little thing which could scarcely have dared to venture out of sight of land, but I could never make more of it. I only discovered afterward that it was on the northwest coast of Africa that I had landed."

After some weeks a sailing boat arrived, and Fosdyk, boarding it, was taken to Algiers. From there he worked to Marseilles, wretchedly ill from his long exposure and lack of food and water. An operation there in a hospital led to the recovery of his health. In 1874 he went to England and there entered into the service of Linford's father, working for him, and then, after his death, for his son, for nearly 30 years.

Theodore Roosevelt's Story of His Life

sulted all who wished to see me; and if I wished to see anyone, I sent for him; and where the consultation took place was a matter of supreme unimportance. I consulted every man with the sincere hope that I could profit by and follow his advice; I consulted every member of Congress who wished to be consulted, hoping to be able to come to an agreement of action with him; and I always finally acted as my conscience and common sense bade me act.

As to all action of this kind, there have long been two schools of political thought, upheld with equal sincerity. The division has not normally been along political, but temperamental, lines. The course I followed, of regarding the executive as subject only to the people, and, under the Constitution, bound to serve the people affirmatively in cases where the Constitution does not explicitly forbid him to render the service, was substantially the course followed by both Andrew Jackson and Abraham Lincoln.

Other honorable and well-meaning Presidents, such as James Buchanan, took the opposite, and, as it seems to me, narrowly legalistic view that the President is the servant of Congress rather than of the people, and can do nothing, no matter how necessary it be to act, unless the Constitution explicitly commands the action. Most able lawyers who are past middle age take this view, and so do large numbers of well-meaning, respectable citizens. My successor in office took this, the Buchanan, view of the President's powers and duties.

For example, under my administration we found that one of the favorite methods adopted by the men desirous of stealing the public domain was to carry the decision of the Secretary of the Interior into court. By vigorously opposing such action, and only by so doing, we were able to carry out the policy of properly protecting the public domain.

My successor not only took the opposite view, but recommended to Congress the passage of a bill which would have given the courts direct appellate power over the Secretary of the Interior in these land matters. This bill was reported favorably by Mr. Mondell, chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands, a Congressman who took the lead in every measure to prevent the conservation of our natural resources and the preservation of the national domain for the use of homeseekers. Fortunately, Congress declined to pass the bill. Its passage would have been a veritable calamity.

I acted on the theory that the President could at any time, in his discretion, withdraw from entry any of the public lands of the United States and reserve the same for forestry, for water power sites, for irrigation and other public purposes. Without such action it would have been impossible to stop the activity of the land thieves. No one ventured to test its legality by lawsuit. My successor, however, himself questioned it, and referred the matter to Congress. Again Congress showed its wisdom by passing a law which gave the President the power which he had long exercised and of which my successor had shorn himself.

Perhaps the sharp differences between what may be called the Lincoln-Jackson and the Buchanan-Taft schools, in their views of the power and duties of the President, may be best illustrated by comparing the attitude of my successor toward his Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ballinger, when the latter was accused of gross misconduct in office, with my attitude towards my chiefs of department and other subordinate officers. More than once while I was President my officials were attacked by Congress, generally because these officials did their duty well and fearlessly. In every such case I stood by the official and refused to recognize the right of Congress to interfere with me excepting by impeachment or in other constitutional manner. On the other hand, wherever I found the officer unfit for his position I promptly removed him, even although the most influential men in Congress fought for his retention. The Jackson-Lincoln view is that a President who is fit to do good work should be able to form his own judgment as to his own subordinates, and, above all, of the subordinates standing highest and in closest and most intimate touch with him.

My successor took the opposite, or Buchanan, view when he permitted and requested Congress to pass judgment on the charges made against Mr. Ballinger as an executive officer. These charges were made to the President; the President had the facts before him and could get at them at any time, and he alone had power to act if the charges were true.

However, he permitted and requested Congress to investigate Mr. Ballinger. The party minority of the committee that investigated him, and one member of the majority, declared that the charges were well founded, and that Mr. Ballinger should be removed. The other members of the majority declared the charges ill founded. The President abode by the view of the majority. Of course, believers in the Jackson-Lincoln theory of the presidency would not be content with this town meeting, majority and minority method of determining by another branch of the Government what it seems the especial duty of the President himself to determine for himself in dealing with his own subordinate in his own department.

The President's duty is to act so that he himself and his subordinates shall be able to do efficient work for the people, and this efficient work he and they cannot do if Congress is permitted to undertake the task of making up his mind for him as to how he shall perform what is clearly his sole duty.

THE SEARCH FOR THE SECRET OF LIFE

he used specimens of blood from animals and persons all over the earth and years were required to collect them. He had discovered that whenever the blood of one animal is injected into the body of another, a certain element of toxicity results. He found, for instance, that 15 drops of the blood of an eel injected into the veins of a dog, caused the dog's death in less than 20 minutes. He also found that the blood corpusles of a rabbit offer more resistance to this toxicity than those of any other animal.

Rabbits, therefore, were used to provide serums. A rabbit with an injection of human blood will develop an anti-human serum; a dog's blood will develop an anti-canine serum and so on. It is only necessary to test any given material with a sufficient number of serums to find the right one. If dog blood is dropped into an anti-human serum there will be no reaction, but if a man's blood is dropped, the serum at once becomes clouded.

One case is reported in which stains taken from a man's trousers showed the blood both of a human being and of a sheep. Subsequently it was found that the man had slaughtered sheep about two weeks before he had committed a murder. The antiquity of a stain makes no difference whatever. The tests have been found good in stains taken from any kind of material, even from old shoes which had been blackened after blood had been spattered on them.

Obviously these blood tests will avail to show the relationship of various kinds of animals to each other. While it may not be altogether flattering, it [illegible] thus learned that human blood resembles that of t[illegible] porpoise closer than any other, and that porpoi[illegible]od also is closely related to that of the pig. Simil[illegible] found that the hyena is closer akin to the ca[illegible]o the dog and that the sea lion is closer akin to [illegible]g than to the cat.

Another discovery that is unflattering to the human race is that the "missing link" probably was a kind of sea spider. It will be remembered that in the Darwinian theory, life developed from a single cell and that through what is called "natural selection" or the "survival of the fittest," the various higher types have developed from it.

But one link in the chain was missing. Broadly speaking it was the form of life which showed the development from invertebrate to vertebrate life. No creature had been found to show any connection between the two, until after the recent investigations of Prof. Patten of Dartmouth. For four successive summers Patten dug into fossil-bearing rock in the Bay of Chaleur in Canada before he found what he sought. It was the fossil remains of a species of ostracoderm.

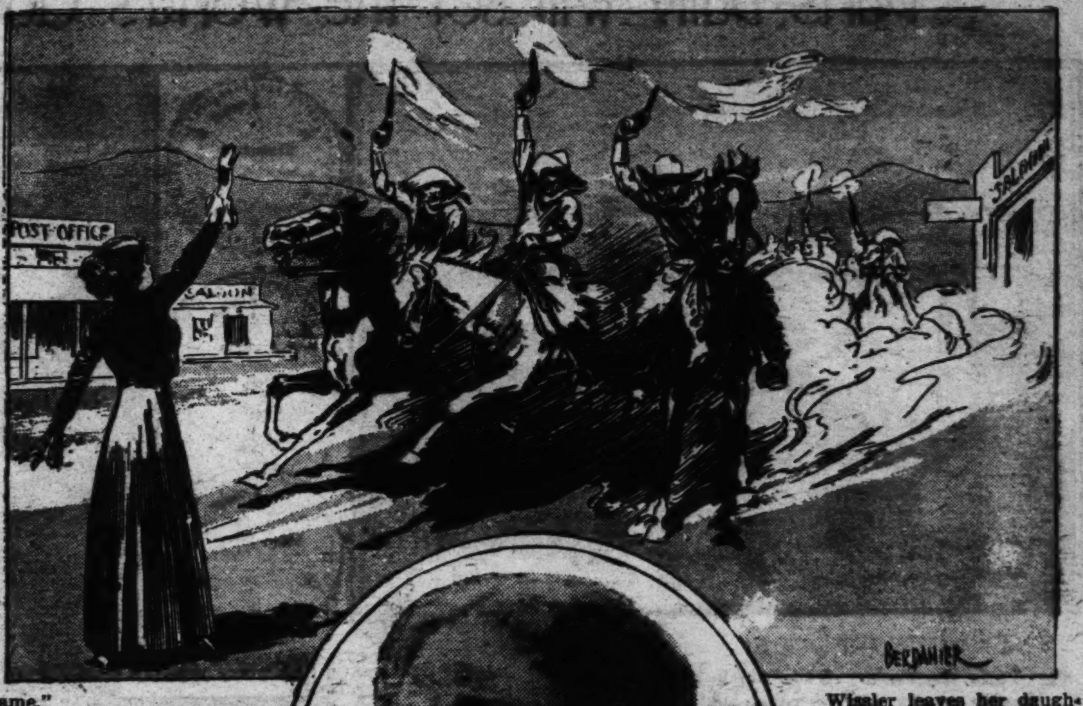
Patten thinks that this creature was neither vertebrate nor invertebrate, but a class between the two. The character of its mouth more closely resembles that of the spider of today. Thus it may be inferred that the real missing link was an arachnid, of which spiders, scorpions and mites are the most familiar present-day types.

Under this development of the Darwinian theory, it may be that long before that simian ancestor of ours was skipping about in the cocoanut trees, his own progenitor was celebrating a tarantula "at home."

EVEN THE MEN SAY

This Woman Mayor Is a Success

Mrs. Susan Wissley, Rugged and Two-Fisted, Reforms Brawling Town of Dayton, Wyo., Subdues Obstreperous Cowpunchers and Closes Saloons, at the Same Time Running Her Millinery Shop—She Has No Patience With Mrs. Ella Wilson, Who Made a Failure of Mayor's Job at Hunnewell, Kan.



THE once wild and woolly little town of Dayton, Wyo., has reformed. No more do cowboys, their noses adorned with warpaint, gallop through the village and fire their "artillery" into the air. Gone are most of the saloons in which, on payday, the ranchmen gathered to celebrate their affluence with conviviality and gun-play. The reason? Dayton has a woman Mayor.

She is Mrs. Susan Wissler, a rugged and two-fisted matron, who combines the office of quelling obstreperous cow punchers and making the invitation, "Name yore pizen," less frequent, with the pacific occupation of millinery.

Mrs. Wissler has no patience with Mrs. Ella Wilson, the former woman Mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., whose City Council of mere men made life so harassing for her that, after one term, she retired with the announcement that she was through with politics and office forever.

"If I had been the Mayor of Hunnewell," Mrs Wissler says, with a glint of resolute blue eyes, "I'd have seen to it that the people who elected me stood by me when troubles came."

Following is the vivacious account of a visit to Mrs. Wissler's bailiwick by a special writer for the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine.

By SUE McNAMARA.

"WE are all loyal to our lady Mayor."

So spoke Capt. Garland, Postmaster of Dayton, Wyo., regarding Mrs. Susan Wissler, the woman whom I had come jolting six miles by stage from the railroad to see.

"Having a lady Mayor is a great improvement," said O. P. Hanna. "In many ways the town is lots better." "O. P." is an authority, for he was the first white settler in Sheridan County, was one of Custer's scouts and is credited with having made more redskins bite the dust than Buffalo Bill.

I found Mrs. Wissler in her little combination millinery store and Mayor's office. When the little bell over the front door tinkles she does not know whether she is about to sell a bonnet or appoint a new Marshal. Those strong hands of hers are equally capable of tying a bow of ribbon or swinging a man off his horse and landing him behind the bars.

"Is Mrs. Wissler here?" I called, when it was my turn to make the little doorbell jingle.

"Mother!" called a slender, brown-eyed girl of 18. And the woman Mayor stood framed in the doorway. Rugged and strong she was, with rosy cheeks and something of the calm of the mountains in her eyes. But those eyes can twinkle, too, and they gave a shrewd, humorous glance toward the Easterner who had come to write her up.

I could see Mrs. Wissler was wondering whether I had come down from one of the "dude ranches," where human hot-house flowers wear high-heeled yellow riding boots and silver spurs and pay lavishly for the privilege of absorbing Western atmosphere.

"Makes me laugh," remarked Mrs. Wissler as we sat down beside the coal stove in the sitting room back of the store. "Those Eastern women come out here and ride Indian file, just as serious, because they think it's the thing to do in the West. One woman took to wearing trousers just like a man. It quite amused the folks around here."

The lady Mayor rocked and talked, her broad humorous face breaking into smiles. The red geraniums in the window glowed. The mellow lamplight streamed over a vase of yellow chrysanthemums and a dish of yellow apples on the table. The firelight flickered on the cat curled up on a cushion and on the big brown and white shepherd dog stretched out beside her.

"The people elected me, so they must have wanted me," Mrs. Wissler was saying. "If I had been the Mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., I would have seen to it that the people who elected me stood by me when difficulties came."

Jingle went the doorbell. Exit Mrs. Wissler. When she returned her face was troubled.

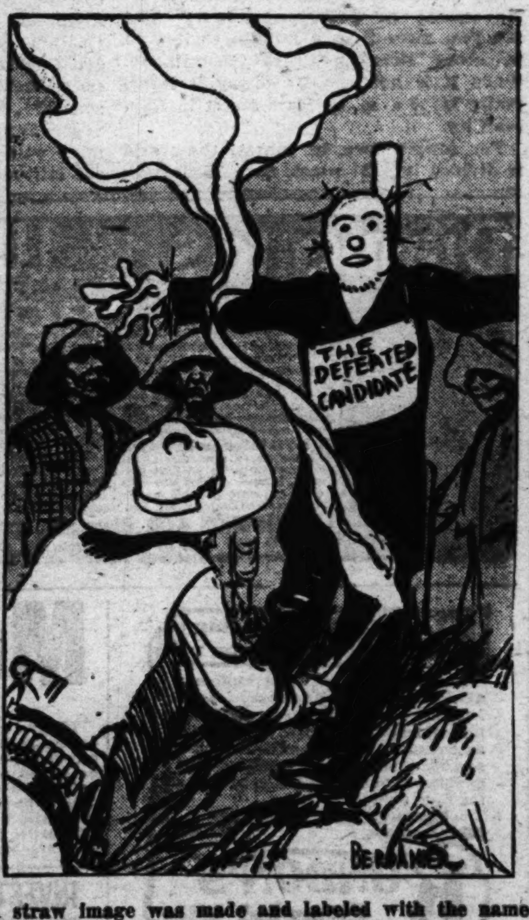
"It's that water problem again," she explained. "You see, the men who contracted to get us water laid the pipes too near the surface, and last winter the pipes all froze. We've got to do something before cold weather comes or the town will be without water again. I was up in the hills the other day myself going all along the line of piping, trying to figure out what it's best to do."

Mrs. Susan Wissley.

Again the doorbell jingled. This time it was a woman visitor come to look at hats and then to discuss politics beside the coal stove.

"This State's so big the women can't get around to see each other the way they ought to in order to accomplish much," lamented the visitor. "And you know we've got to defeat a certain party," she added with a significant look.

But Mrs. Wissler rocked on undisturbed. Evidently the water problem was causing her more serious thought than the defeat of "the certain party."



A straw image was made and labeled with the name of the portly rival candidate and then burned in the little park amid loud yells.

Here are a few of the reforms the woman Mayor has brought about during the year she has held office:

Prohibited the shooting of firearms within the city limits;

Created a speed law for automobiles;

Obtained better sanitation;

Reduced the number of saloons.

This she has done with the aid of the trusty right arm of Bill Reedy, the Town Marshal. "Bill" was appointed by Mrs. Wissler herself and went into office with her, along with the reform wave. True, there are some disgruntled ones who think Bill is not the man for the place. A few of them had the temerity to tell the lady Mayor so.

"And she just told 'em where to head in at," chuckled the rest of the town.

So "Bill" holds his own, riding loose-jointed, long-limbed and strong-armed, and Dayton is no longer disturbed at night by wild volleys of shots from jovial cowboys or would-be cutes from the "dude ranches."

"We don't have any trouble," says Mrs. Wissler. "Some man got sassy to Bill the other day and told him he'd send him home draggin' his hind legs behind him like a crippled coyote, but Bill just laughed at him. I guess Bill can take care of himself.

"How do I enforce the shooting ordinance? O, I just tell Bill to get a gun a little bigger than the other fellow's and ride after him. Some of the boys around here used to think it was fun to come to town and drink and then gallop up and down Main street firing off their guns, but they don't do it any more.

"Automobiles used to tear through here without any regard for speed. It was bad for the chickens—and the people, too. They don't do that any more, either. I'd like to get rid of all the saloons, but we can't quite do that under the present State laws. I made them cut the number down to accord with the population, though."

On the first Monday morning of every month Mrs. Wissler leaves her daughter, Brownie, to attend the store while she ties on her substantial black bonnet and goes to Council meeting. Besides the Mayor the Council includes a miller, a doctor and two ranchers. Two of the Councilmen supported the rival candidate for Mayor, but they are now loyal champions of Mrs. Wissler.

At the remarkable election in which a woman secured the reins of government in Dayton, the rival candidate, a gentleman of generous build, had the support of the liberal element. Mrs. Wissler was busy trimming fall hats and wasn't thinking much about the ballot.

Only a few hours before the election the little bell over the front door tinkled in excited fashion. That marked the entry of turbulent politics into the quiet atmosphere of the little store. It was a committee of leading citizens. They asked Mrs. Wissler to allow her name to be placed on the ballots for Mayor.

"But the ballots are already printed!" gasped she.

"Don't make any difference," said a banker, who was head of the committee. "The voters can scratch out a name and substitute yours."

Twelve hours later Mrs. Wissler was proclaimed Mayor of Dayton. The band got out and paraded up and down Main street. A straw image was made and labeled with the name of the portly rival candidate and then burned in the little park amid loud yells. There were red fire and tumult in Dayton.

Mrs. Wissler went to Dayton 22 years ago, traveling across the country from Denver in a covered wagon. She taught school, kept hotel, and after her husband died, became County Treasurer and a member of the School Board.

She has two children—a boy and a girl. The boy is a rancher. The girl is a true daughter of the West. She can shoot and ride like an Indian. Yet she paints dainty little water colors which are already beginning to attract attention in Eastern markets. She plays the violin and piano and is leader of the Dayton orchestra. Although she was educated in the East, it has not spoiled her love of the mountains and the great West which is her home.

The kindly face of the lady Mayor is known everywhere. A wagon rattles by in the crisp dawn. It halts a moment before the little store.

"Whoa!" calls the driver.

There is the steel blue glint of rifles.

"We'll bring you back some venison by nightfall, Mrs. Wissler," the man promises.

"All right, boys. Good luck!" she replies, waving her hand from the window. The wagon rattles away. The tinkling air sweeps down from the snow-tipped Big Horn. The Tongue River babbles noisily as it rushes through the town. The Postmaster comes out into the sunshine and shields his eyes, striving to catch a glimpse of the lone horseman who is carrying the mail far up the mountain trail to a wee village tucked away somewhere among the peaks.

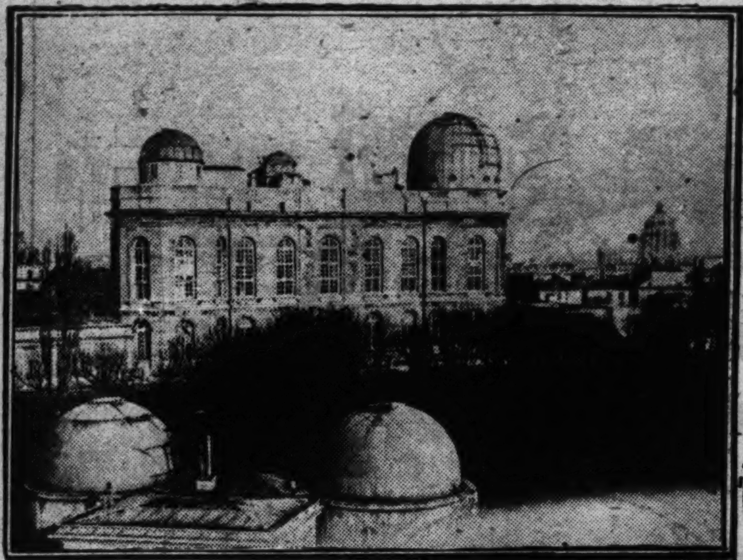
Dayton awakes to another day, content to leave its destiny in the hands of its woman Mayor.

Crocodiles' Tears and Cries

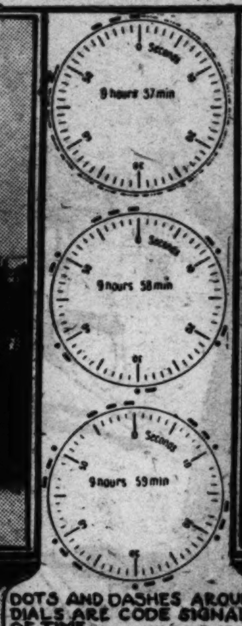
ALL have heard of crocodiles' tears, few of cries. But an English doctor reports from Lagos that on hearing some croaking noises from below a dry path, he dug down and found 13 eggs of the crocodilus niloticus at a depth of about 18 inches. They were all chipped except a bad one, and all the young crocodiles hatched out in half an hour. Some years ago Dr. Voeltzkow made a similar observation, and noted that unhatched crocodiles utter a cry from within the egg—a cry that can be heard even when the eggs are covered as in nature by one to two yards of sand. The sounds are produced with the mouth closed, as we involuntarily produce a hiccough. Dr. Voeltzkow writes: "This crying of the young ca be induced by walking heavily past the eggs (kept in box in my study), by knocking against the box, of by taking an egg in the hand and turning it. In fact, any shock causes the young one to lift up its voice in the egg.

NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

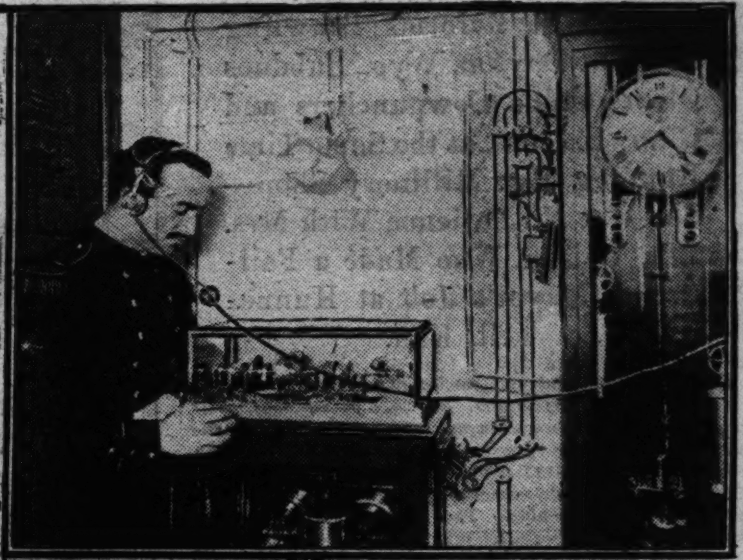
Paris Daily Will Set the World's Clocks by Wireless



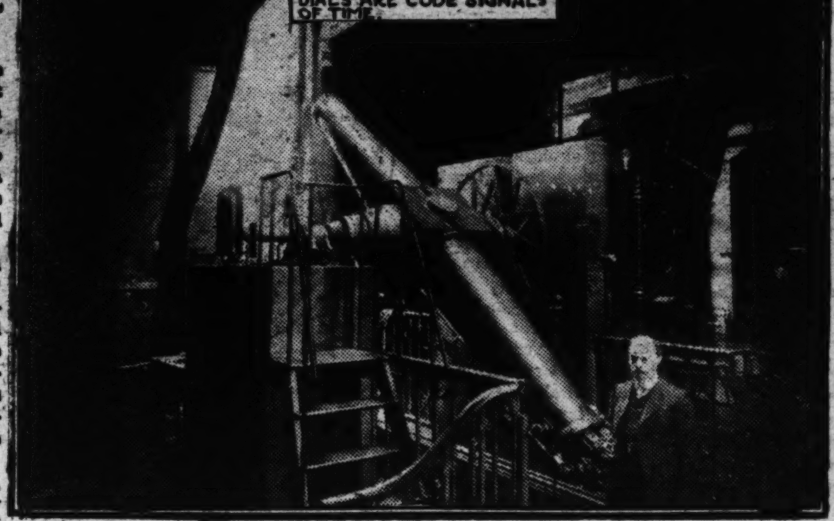
The Paris observatory from which the world's clocks will be regulated.



DOTS AND DASHES AROUND DIALS ARE CODE SIGNALS OF TIME.



Testing the great clocks to insure they are working in harmony.



Getting the time from the stars. Movement of planets automatically registered.

FROM Eiffel Tower, Paris, three times a day hereafter, the great wireless station will telegraph the world's time. To ships far out on the ocean, to the Arctic Circle, to India and even to far-off North America the signals will be sent so that clocks everywhere may be set to a standard unit.

This plan has long been maturing in the minds of French scientists and they have finally gotten international co-operation through a recent conference held in Paris. All preliminary details have been completed. In a recent test, messages from Eiffel station were caught in the United States, so that there appears to be no further difficulty in the way of working out the scheme.

The time to be sent will be Greenwich, prime meridian time. The Observatory of Paris will attend to the mathematical and scientific part of the work, and will be in telegraphic touch with the Eiffel Tower station. A Morse code system for wiring messages has been perfected and internationally accepted.

To insure exactitude to the minutest fraction of a second, a double checking system will be employed. One will be through a telescopic device which automatically records the movements of the stars and planets. Then there will be a series of great clocks. To insure the uniformity of these clocks an electrical apparatus has been perfected, through which it will be possible to tell whether they are working in absolute unison. These tests will be made twice a day.

Three times a day the hour will be flashed—at 10 and 10:45 a. m. and at 11:45 p. m. In Germany the time will be wirelessed from the Norddeich station.

In addition to telegraphing time to vessels at sea the observatory will send out warning of approaching storms.

The new arrangement will be of incalculable value to map-makers. Their surveys in terms of latitude and longitude depend upon the correctness of their chronometers. It is easily understood that it is never identically the same time at two places east and west of each other, no matter how remote or close together they may be.

There is a difference of a second of time between points 330 yards apart east and west, a minute if the distance is 12 miles and 10 minutes if it is 124 miles. When it is sunset on Broadway in St. Louis it lacks more than a second of being sunset on Jefferson avenue. The sun sets more than a minute earlier on Broadway than on Creve Coeur Lake. When it is noon on Broadway it is actually 11:40 a. m. on Main street in Kansas City.

For convenience, of course, the world is divided into 24 zones, each 15 degrees of longitude wide, and when it is noon at one point in any zone it is arbitrarily noon at all other parts in the same zone, although, as a matter of fact, it is before noon anywhere in the zone west of a given point and afternoon anywhere east of it.

Getting these differences absolutely correct is of vital importance to the map-maker. The time wirelessed from Paris under the new system and relayed, as it will be, from San Fernando, (Brazil) Arlington, (Va.) Manila, Magdisher, (Italian Somaliland) Timbuctoo, Norddeich, Massahwah, Eritrea, San Francisco, Melbourne, and Tananarivo (Madagascar), will make it possible for a surveyor anywhere in the world to determine with a hand wireless outfit his exact latitude and longitude.

Shaves With Self-Lighting Razor

THOSE who often are compelled to shave when the lighting is so imperfect that one side of the face is in a shadow, will be interested in a "self-lighting safety razor" that was patented recently in Paris. It consists of an ordinary safety razor, on the top of which is a tiny electric light such as is commonly used in electric pocket lamps. When one grasps the handle of the razor, he presses a little button and this makes a light.

Average Man Eats 54 Tons of Food

AN English statistician who had little else to do, has computed the amount of food the average man consumes in a lifetime and says it is about 54 tons, of solids, and 53 tons of liquids. This man, the Englishman says, will have consumed about 12,000 eggs, 400 pounds of cheese, four tons of fish, and, if it could be baked in one, a loaf of bread as big as an ordinary family hotel.

He says that a train three miles long would be required to carry a life's supply of vegetables to the average man.

Lamp Pierces Fog

A FRENCH inventor has patented a fog-penetrating lamp that has proven practical. The light is an ordinary incandescent one, in front of which is a glass screen, giving a greenish-yellow light. In addition, a silvered reflector throws out the light and enough heat to keep moisture from collecting on the screen.

What It Takes to Run Factories

THE total horsepower of electric motors in use in the United States in 1902 was 4,817,140, as compared with 492,936 in 1899, or an increase of nearly a thousand per cent, while the number of electric motors increased from 16,891 in 1899 to 388,854 in 1909. The increase in the number of gas engines in use in the last five-year period was nearly twice as great as in the first half.

Total horsepower of manufacturing establishments was 18,680,776 in 1909, as compared with 13,487,707 in 1904 and 10,097,893 in 1899. Ninety per cent of the horsepower in 1909 was that of motors owned by the manufacturing establishments, and 10 per cent was rented power, most of the latter being electric.

Car Stops by Numbers

WICHITA, Kan., is experimenting with a new street car stop system. When the passenger enters he tells the conductor the street which he wishes to reach. He is told the number of the street. Inside is a list of street and numbers plainly printed and placed so conveniently he can refer to it whenever he forgets the number. At the front of the car is an automatic register which displays the number for each street as the car approaches it. Thus, if one's number be 10, when 10 shows on the indicator he has but to push the button and signal for a stop.

CLOCK SPEAKS THE HOUR.

A GERMAN inventor has patented a talking clock, which calls out the hours, half hours and quarter hours by a phonographic arrangement.

MANY THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Surgeon "Keeps His Eye on the Ball" While Extracting It

Swiss Doctor Perfects Method of Using Portable Fluoroscope While Working Over Patient on Operating Table That Is an X-Ray Machine.

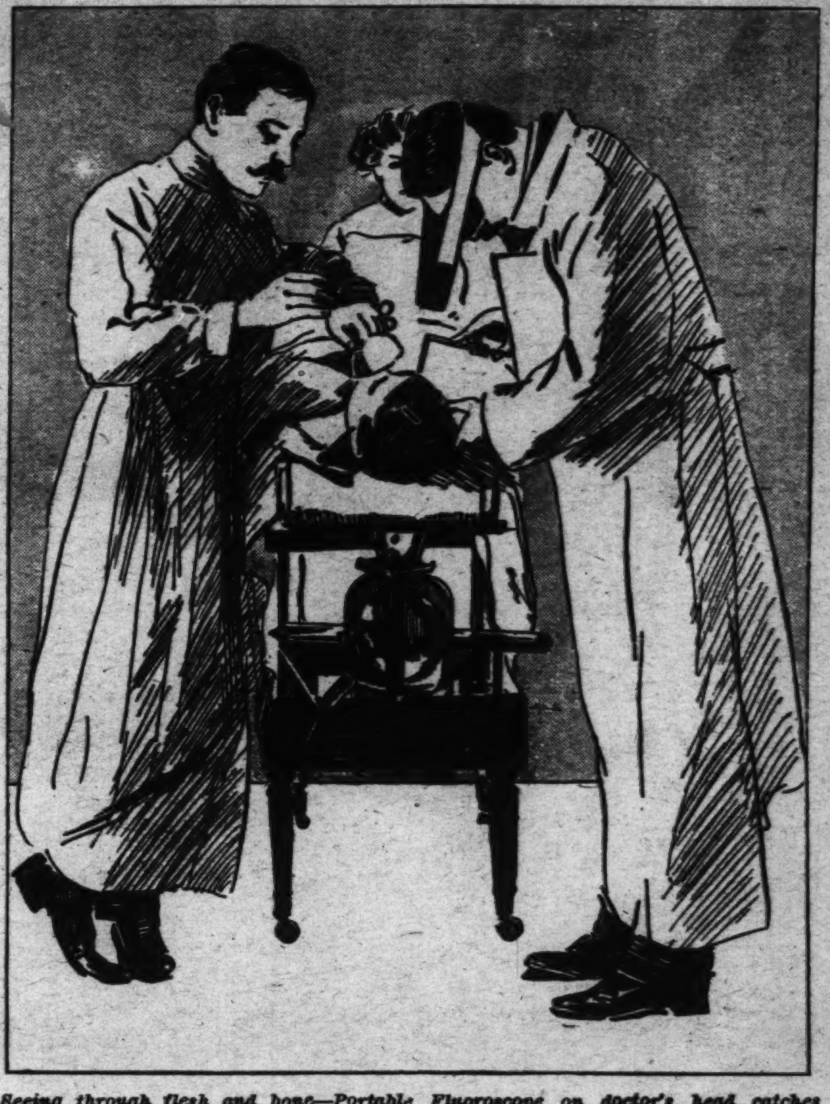
A DISTINGUISHED Swiss surgeon of Lausanne, Dr. Wullyamoz, has found a way to employ the X-ray continuously throughout operations and the process promises to revolutionize certain branches of surgery. When extracting any foreign substance from a human body, Dr. Wullyamoz is able, by his new device, to keep the object constantly in view.

The process enables him to work with astonishing precision and rapidity. He has been able to remove a buckshot from well within the brain in about 10 seconds. He required less than a minute to extract a needle deep in a man's haud and about the same time to extract a bullet that was 10 centimeters under the surface.

The Roentgen ray has for several years been a valuable aid to the surgeon. It enabled him to locate an object in a short time. After he had once found the location, he was compelled to remember it and work towards the place. It occurred to Wullyamoz that some way could be found to keep the thing constantly in sight.

He found the answer in the fluoroscope, the device by which the shadows of things revealed by the X-ray becomes apparent to the human eye. He fitted a fluoroscope into a kind of framework he could carry around his head.

Then he prepared a special operating table. On the framework below the table top he placed a complete X-ray outfit, bulb, induction coils, mercury interrupter and all. All that was necessary was to put a patient on the table, turn the X-ray loose and inspect the sufferer's interior with his fluoroscope.



Seeing through flesh and bone—Portable Fluoroscope on doctor's head catches shadows thrown by X-ray Machine under table.

But here he found another difficulty. When he was operating, his own hands got in his way. With characteristic ingenuity he designed a new set of surgical instruments. He fitted them with handles that bent away in a right angle. Thus he could hold his hands outside the line of vision and manipulate the instruments just as well.

Special operating tables and instruments have been designed at the Swiss doctor's direction. The tables are light and can be moved about easily, which makes them valuable for military purposes as well as for hospitals.

Curing Sleeplessness in Young Children

INDIGESTION, hunger, excitement, too much home work in their lessons, fear of the dark and loneliness are the principal causes of sleeplessness in children.

Indigestion can generally be cured by giving a pinch of bicarbonate of soda in a wineglass of water, for it is almost always due to acidity of the stomach, caused by too many sweets, tea, coffee or other food or drink that is not suitable for young stomachs.

If a child be hungry it should be fed, a glass of warm milk and some biscuits, a cup of milk gruel or any other light and easily digested food being given half an hour before going to bed.

No child under 12 or 13 years of age should be allowed to study between supper and bedtime. It only tires the young brain and produces worry about the following day's work.

When a child is afraid of the dark it cannot help it and must be humored and treated with sympathy. It should be taught how baseless its fears are, but at the same time a light should be left in the room, care being taken that it does not cast dark shadows on walls or ceiling. The door should be left open that the child may hear the voices of others in the house. It is often necessary for some one to sit awhile with a child.

Exciting games should not be played and exciting stories should not be told too near bedtime. Many physicians object strongly to children's parties because the little ones always go to bed excited and often find it impossible to go to sleep.

What to Do When the Emergency Comes

"WILLIE has swallowed a marble! Call a doctor quick! He's choking to death!"

Every mother has imagined this emergency and wondered what she would do. The proper treatment is to turn Willie upside down and shake the marble out. Several hundred persons listened a few days ago to one of the physicians of the Battle Creek Sanitarium tell just what should be done in this and many other common emergencies.

A picturesque feature of this lecture was the demonstration of living models who came to him one after the other suffering from all manner of sudden accidents from the boy with the marble in his throat and the girl with the earache to the man suffocated by the smoke of a burning building.

Here are some of the suggestions the doctor made:

Keep Cool.

It is of the first importance that one of two persons remain cool and use intelligent efforts to counteract the results of accidents. Many of the common emergencies are effectively treated by simple measure if one knows what to do immediately.

Stopping a Fit.

A woman appared leading a small boy who was about to have a fit. He was soon in the throes of a terrible spasm. This was treated by deep pressure on the inner side of the eyebrows, extending well over the edge of the bone. The doctor explained that the pressure on the nerve at this point was very painful and would often break up a fit or an attack of epilepsy temporarily—allowing enough time to get the individual out of a crowd and into a quiet place. It is important, also, to force a handkerchief between the teeth of the afflicted person so as to prevent biting the tongue.

Nose-bleed.

A case of nosebleed was presented and was immediately cured by having the patient throw the head back and stand erect while holding a cloth to the nose to prevent soiling the clothing. It was also pointed out that a cold application to the back of the neck and raising the hands as high as possible with the head thrown back would stop the nosebleed.

Ear-ache.

Earache can often be relieved, if not cured by holding the nose, closing the lips tight and at the same time trying to blow, thus forcing the air into the eustachian tube and relieving the negative pressure of the middle ear.

Black Eye.

Then came a boy with a black eye. The treatment for this consisted of nothing but cold applications. Either a cloth dipped into very cold water or an ice bag was advised. It was suggested that this be followed by hot and cold applications alternately administered every three hours, and by massaging the eye in the intervals.

Sprained Ankle.

Next came a woman with a sprained ankle. The doctor demonstrated the value of cold applications after a sprain to reduce the congestion which immediately follows, and then emphasized the importance of immobilizing with a stiff bandage in which pieces of cardboard are used to support the ankle and to give it rest. Formentations should be used every three hours, interspersed with cold applications.

Cold for a Burn.

Fire bells sounded and a young woman came in with her sleeve on fire and, from the appearance of her arm, suffering from an extensive burn. The immediate application of a cold compress was emphasized as one of the most effective measures to counteract the effects of such an accident. As a protective application to a deep burn the white of an egg was recommended, as were sweet or caron oil and paraffin; but in all cases it was advised that the cold applications be kept up at frequent intervals for 12 hours after the injury, in order to relieve the pain and to prevent the formation of blisters.

Suffocation by Smoke.

A young man entered, bearing on his shoulders a companion whom he had rescued from a burning building. The patient was supposed to have been suffocated by smoke or gas. The work of resuscitation consisted in raising the arms above the head and then lowering them and pressing deep upon the chest, repeating these complete cycles about 16 times a minute.

Hot Cloths for Cuts.

There was a crash of broken glass and a woman came rushing in with a bad cut in her arm from which the blood was streaming. The doctor wrapped the wound in and applied pressure above the place, to stop hemorrhage. He disinfected it with boiled water and applied exceedingly hot cloths as a means of stopping the hemorrhage after the bandage had been placed over the wound.

Curing a Faint.

Apparently from the sight of blood, a woman fainted in the audience. She was carried to the platform. The doctor demonstrated the importance and efficiency of fresh air, a dash of cold water in the face and loosening the clothing. This particular case was revived by deep pressure over the abdomen. This forces the blood out of the abdominal blood vessels and brings it to the brain. The doctor said that a person who becomes faint in church can always prevent collapsing by placing the hand upon the abdomen and bending forward as far as possible so as to bring a strong pressure to bear upon that point. In this way he can get sufficient temporary relief to enable him to walk out into the open air.

Tooth-ache.

When a child has a toothache, clean out the cavity carefully with an ordinary toothpick; this will relieve the irritation. A derivative treatment, such as a hot foot bath, will often reduce the congestion and relieve the pain.

Swallowing a Marble.

This case was followed by the appearance of a small boy who had swallowed a marble, which had lodged in the throat. The lad was held up by the heels, free from the floor, with his head down, and directed to cough. The force of gravity, with the aid of the cough, instantly brought out the large white marble.

Bi-Metal Phone Wire Is Disappointment

TESTS made in France of the so-called bi-metal telephone wire have not given the satisfactory results scientists had hoped for. Because of the extraordinary development of the electrical industry and the immense calls it has made upon the world's copper supply, the metal has been growing more and more costly. For some time students have been trying to devise some way of getting the same conductibility without the use of copper.

The bi-metal wire theoretically would come nearest to doing the work. It is a wire with an iron core and a copper shell. Such a wire has been in actual use between Paris and Lyons and while it has done the work, comparative tests with copper wires unquestionably prove the superiority of the latter.

French military authorities are working upon a plan to armor their military aeroplanes. Plates to protect the machines from rifle fire at the height of 2600 feet are desired.

Would Penalize Use of Raw Coal

PROF. ARMSTRONG proposed at the recent meeting of the British Association that the use of raw coal for heating purposes be made illegal. His object was to prevent the waste of valuable by-products of combustion and also to compel more efficient methods of heating. Many engineers are studying methods of extracting greater energy from coal than is possible when it is used as a fuel. Prof. Burtsell would have it treated at the pit's mouth, its tar distilled into the various oils, and the gas, unpurified from sulphur, supplied directly to gas engines for the generation of electricity. He would treat the exhaust gases from the engine, in conjunction with liquor from the ammonia plant, and would recover the nitrogen and sulphur of the raw fuel in the form of ammonium sulphate.

An English inventor has patented a fireman's helmet, in which an incadescent electric light is set in the peak and operated from a storage battery in the cone of the helmet. It can be switched off and on at will.
